The IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof, Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

The Wedding Bells Have Rang!

GIBBS—TERHUFEN.

The marrage of Miss Emma Terhufen to Mr. Arthur C. Gibbs occured at the brides home in Klemme on Tuesday, January, 1st 1901, at four o'clock P. M., Rev. E. A. Pnelps performing the ceremony. The bride, one of Klemme,s most popular and highly esteemed young ladies has been among our young folks for a number of years and has endeared herself to them by her kind actions and soft words. She is an active worker in the Eng. Methodist church; serving as organist. As a teacher she is a success, having taught several terms of school both in the Independent district of Klemme and the surrounding county schools. and having learned a number of our younger folks the art of fingering the Piano board. The bridegroom is a genial sort of a man, always pleasant He has lived and grown from boyhood to his present standing, right in this neighborhood and is known by all as a man of honesty. Sober at all times and temperate in all things. Being polite and gentlemanly he has now many friends who wish him the best in his new venture and cheer him for the manly step he has just taken.

The high esteem in which this newly married couple is held is better shown by the gifts of remembrance brought to them on their wedding day and the number of guests present than one could well portray from thoughts of the mind. The gifts, choice and select, in style and make-up are truly worthy of those who gave them for their remembrance About one hundred invitations were out and nearly all responded. The house was filled to overflowing and gaity was apparent in every room of the house. Just as the hands of the clock pointed to four, Clarice Gibbs, sister of the groom, took her place at the piano and began playing the wedding march, the young couple entered the finely decorated parlor, preceded by the officiating clergman, and took their places before the gathering of friends and relatives to take the vows that would unite them for life. The bride was beautifully attired in white silk and wore a boquet of lovely roses and carnations. The groom was attired in the conventional black with a beautiful buttonhole boquet of flowers. After the cermony, the guests, about 80 in number retired to the spacious dining room where the tables groaned under the luxuries of the wedding feast. In the center of the long table was a magnificent brides cake one of the finest of the caterers art. Scarcely was supper over when the Klemme band appeared and did honor to the occaison.

Thus at the beginning of the new year and new century the happy young couple start out with the brightest of prospects for a happy and prosperous future. The editor of TIMES having been honored with an invitation wishes to chronicle his good wishes for their future life and joines the community in saying "God Speed" and "Fare Thee Well."

JOSTEN—RENZIEHAUSEN.

Married:—At the home of the brides parents in Monona, Iowa on Tuesday, January, 1st. 1901. Miss E. Renziehausen to Mr. J. Josten, both of this place. The bride left Klemme Tuesday a week ago for her home and to prepare for so memorable an event of her life. The bridegroom went last Friday to be present and take unto himself the other and better half. Both of these young people are of Klemme's best society, considered well to do and prominent in business circles. Miss Renziehausen came to Klemme several years ago and started a millinery which has been a success on account of her push and business ability. Courteous and affable in her manner she has made many friends and is highly esteemed as a lady by not only her friends. Mr. Josten came to this place about two years ago after having learned the art of photography and established himself in business circles. By devoting his entire time to the desires of his customers and keeping abreast with ideas of advanced photogrephy he has built up a large business in his line. The TIMES joines in with the community in wishing this new couple a happy future life.

We thin't that the weddings occuring among the young folks in this vicinity just recectly, are a good precedent for the remainder of those who are struggling along in single cussedness. Now that the ice is broken by several couples having become coupled up as man and wife, as two hearts in one, the ice should not be left to freeze over again. Keep the fun agoing, Boys! Marry the girl you love. There are several sweet couples left in this vicinity who would if they so chose make life a scourse of happiness by doubling up as they should. Take good soundings boys; find out for yourself who the girl is you love and then do not hesitate but "pop the question" and the girl will do the rest. "Actions speak louder than words" and you may as well have the game as have the name. Get married. That's what we are going to do (some time) if nothing happens. Next.

Rumar has it that Wm. Guth, who went to Chicago a week or so ago, has brought home a wife. As to the veracity of the statement we will not vouch, but the cigars have been smoked on Wm. and it seems as if it was the truth. Success to him.

SCORES OF LIVES ARE LOST

London, Dec. 31.—The Russian bark, Kings County, Captain Karlson, from Bristol, December 9, for Darien, has returned to Cardiff with rigging and bows damaged and other injuries suffered by colliding with a vessel supposed to be the Italian bark Zeenro, Captain Paturzo, from Bristol, December 13, for Mobile. The Zefiro is ashore at Clevedon on the river Severn. Her crew was taken off by the life boat.

The British ship King Edward, Captain Rhode, from Antwerp December 16, for San Francisco, has anchored in the Downs, with loss of sails and a man washed overboard. She reported having been driven back from Falmouth by heavy weather.

Holyhead, Dec. 31.—The bodies of twenty members of the crew of the British bark, Primrose Hill, Captain Wilson, from Liverpool for Vancouver, which went on the rocks three miles off South Stack during the gale and broke up, have been washed ashore.

Paris, Dec. 31.—Advices from the ports say that Saturday's gale raged with extreme violence and that a number of fishing smacks and coasting vessels have been wrecked. Nine fish boats have been stranded near Dunkirk and three of them will prove total wrecks. Their crews were seen clinging to the rigging but the majority of them were beyond reach of the rockets. A life boat gallantly rescued many of the fishermen, but ten of them perished.

A brig was totally lost on the Sables de Lonnes. Of her crew, four men were drowned and two reached the beach by clinging to boats, but before the onlookers could seize them they were swept back and sank.

The fishing smack Esperande foundered off Treport and three fishermen were lost.

A pilot boat belonging to Havre has been lost with two men.

KIDNAPERS THREATEN CUDAHY

Must Withdraw Offer of Reward or Another Child Will Be Stolen.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 31.—E. A. Cudahy, the millionaire packer, has received a second communication from the men who kidnaped his son. This time, as formerly, the letter contains a threat, which says in substance that unless he withdraws his offer of $25,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of each of the three bandits they will kidnap another of his children.

The letter refers to the failure of the police to get anything like a tangible clew as to the identity of the kidnapers, scoffs at the idea of Pat Crowe's being one of them, mentions the case with which the "first job was pulled off," and concludes by saying that if Mr. Cudahy is as wise as he showed himself in the first instance, he will comply with the request and withdraw the rewards at once.

The letter is written with pen and ink on the same kind of yellow paper as the first, and evidently by the same person. It was found by a servant of the Cudahy household early on the morning of Thursday December 27.

Mr. Cudahy says he has not withdrawn the reward, nor will he do so. The reward offeredstands as originally announced.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Treatment for This Dread Disease Said to Have Been Found.

Des Moines, Dec. 28.—A sensation nothing short of profound was caused at the meeting last night at the Still College of Osteopathy of the osteopaths of Iowa when Dr. William West, a young osteopath of Centerville, Iowa, read a paper in which he gave in detail a new and, it is asserted, a successful treatment for tuberculosis.

Dr. West's paper, which was scientific and technical, dealt with the treatment and results of the care of ten patients whom he has treated since last June, each one of whom was restored to health.

In a word, the treatment hinges on a knowledge of the importance of the functions of the spleen and the making use of splenatic vibrations. Dr. West demonstrates before death the blood forming functions of the spleen by vibrating the spleen and throwing into the blood stream the phagocytes which prey on the bacteria of tuberculosis. Furthermore in his treatment he aims to correct organic diseases of the alimentary tract and give to the diseased lungs the support of healthy organs.

Added to this is the auxiliary treatment, in which the greatest attention is paid to diet, pure air, sunshine, quietude and freedom from emotional excesses. The diet insisted upon consists largely of fats, proteids and carbo-hydrates.

MANY CONVICTS PAROLED.

Governor Shaw Releases Sixteen From the Penitentiaries.

Des Moines, Dec. 31.—Governor Shaw released sixteen convicts on parole the day preceding Christmas. Six were released from Fort Madison on condition of good behavior and ten were let out of Anamosa. He declined to give the names of those released, holding that to announce the names of the men let out of prison, inasmuch as they were released on condition of good behavior and are suppesed to be seeking to lead better lives and earn right livings, would be detrimental to them. W. S. Richards, pardon secretary in the executive office at the state house made a special trip to Anamosa and Fort Madison to look after the paroles. He says he is convinced in each case the parole was deserved. Mr. Richards, in speaking of the scenes when several of the men were informed of the clemency of the governor, describing them as affecting in the extreme.

FARMERS NOW TAKE DAILIES.

Rural Delivery Helps Iowa's Dollar a Year Daily.

Des Moines, Dec. 31.—Rural delivery is greatly increasing the number of daily newspapers taken by the farmers. The Des Moines Daily News, which is only $1 a year, 75 cents for six months, and 50 cents for three months, has gained 5,000 subscribers in the past six months and now has 31,000 circulation. Local papers, however, are also gaining from the same cause.

Vote Big Increase in Capital.

Davenport, Dec. 29.—At a stockholders' meeting of the Iowa Telephone company in this city it was voted to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $4,000,000. This will give the Iowa company the working capital it has needed for years, and its recent consolidation with the Central Union company seems responsible for the change. A headquarters building will be built in Davenport, an underground system installed and extensive improvements made in the exchanges in the principal Iowa cities and the toll lines connecting them.

Big Fire at Waterloo.

Waterloo, Dec. 31.—Fire on the west side in the mill of the Union Mill Company destroyed the entire building, 3,000 sacks of flour and all the machinery, a total loss of $50,000, with insurance amounting to $25,000. This is the largest fire in Waterloo's history. The new syndicate block of six stories, about completed, was saved with difficulty, after having burned all the window frames on the side nearest the mill and spreading into the floor.

Child Burned to Death.

Dallas Center, Dec. 31.—A four-year-old daughter of Mr. Gosch, who lives in the west end of town got too close to a hot stove, her clothes caught on fire and her body was burned so badly that she died three hours later. This is the second child in this town which has lost its life in this way within the last fifteen months, the other being George Ebersole's little boy.

Thieves' "Plant" at Sheldon.

Sheldon, Dec. 28.—A "plant" was found in the Band lumber yards with a large quantity of gold rings, watch chains and other things that had evidently been hidden away for several months, as they were heavily coated, and the box in which they were placed had rotted away.

Iowa Absconder in Canada.

Sherbrooke, Que., Dec. 28.—W. I. Dean, alias W. H. Carr, who, it is alleged, is wanted at Hinton, Iowa, on the charge of absconding agent for the Northern Express company, is under arrest here. A representative of the company is expected here to push extradition proceedings.

FARM HAND HAD HIS NERVE.

Ottumwa, Dec. 28.—It has developed that the officers and buyers at the fat stock show at Chicago recently were "taken in" by a farm hand from Melrose, in this state, and that while he did not commit any crime, his acts show that he has unexampled nerve and an unlimited amount of "gall."

The young man without a cent of capital other than $5 he borrowed from L. D. Remley of Melrose prior to starting, made his way to Chicago, and on going to the stock show soon became one of the liveliest and most interesting of bidders. It is reported that he had a number of choice animals knocked down to him at fancy prices, and that the total amount of his purchases was somewhere in the $8,000 neighborhood.

Being such a lively fellow and such an apparent good judge of fine stock, and besides a good financier, he was written up in the Chicago papers and wined and dined and banqueted by the stockmen. He returned to Melrose in a parlor car, making no payments on his purchases, and of course all the deals were declared off. Maxwell could not keep the secret to himself and it leaked out.

TEST CASE IS ARRANGED.

Des Moines, Dec. 28.—The complete details of the program for testing the validity of the Titus amendment for biennial election have been made known. Through the medium of this plan, which was devised by Attorney General Remley, and which has the endorsement of Senator Charles W. Mullan, the attorney general-elect, and of Senator Titus, the author of the amendment, it is expected a decision will be forthcoming from the supreme count before the close of the January term, the ninth day of February.

The case will be begun at Washington, Washington county, in the Sixth judicial district, with Judge A. R. Dewey on the bench. Marsh W. Bailey, the county attorney-elect of Washington county, will bring action in quo warranto against the present incumbent of the office, S. W. Brookhart. Both of the men are republicans and personal friends and the suit will be entirely an amicable one.

AMENDMENT DECLARED VALID.

Decision Rendered by Contest Board in Sioux County.

Sioux City, Dec. 29.—The first contest on the Titus amendment question to be decided was decided at Orange City yesterday. P. D. Vanoosterhout, who has been county attorney of Sioux county, contested the right of A. Tepaska, republican, who was elected last November, to assume the duties of the office. The contest board was made up of William Dealy and L. M. Black of Orange City, and John Hutchinson of Hawarden. The case was urged for several days, five attorneys appearing. The court found that the Titus amendment was carried and extended the office of the incumbent officer one year and that Mr. Tepaska has no claim whatever to the office. The case will be appealed to the district court, and if necessary, to the supreme court.

EDITOR MUST GO TO JAIL.

Former Member of the Legislature Convicted of Perjury.

Fort Dodge, Dec. 29.—A. L. Woods, editor of the Saturday Advertiser, was arrested by Sheriff Douglas Roy of Winterset, Madison county, and taken there to be sentenced to the penitentiary for a period not exceeding three years. Woods, who was a former member of the legislature, was postmaster of Winterset and was convicted of perjury. The case had been fought through the courts and the supreme court has just affirmed the decision of the lower courts, and he was taken back to receive his sentence from the district court in Madison county.

TRIED TO BATTER OUT BRAINS.

Says He is Crazy and Begs to Be Locked Up.

Dubuque, Dec. 28.—A stranger giving his name as W. E. Gibson appeared at the police headquarters and begged the officers to lock him up. He said he was crazy and unless they put him in restraint he would commit suicide by jumping from the high bridge. The man was laboring under great mental strain and suppressed excitement. Shortly after being locked up Gibson began to batter his head against the steel bars of the cage.

Brewery Wins.

Sioux City, Dec. 29.—A decision in the district court is announced which involves the right of the Sioux City Brewing company and all saloons in Iowa to continue in operation under the Martin liquor law. It was claimed by Eugene Lutz, plaintiff, that the brewery had violated the law in several particulars, and that in consequence the petition of consent under which all saloons, as well the brewery, operate was nullified. The brewery won.

Tonhouse Boy Found.

Fort Dodge, Dec. 29.—Johnnie Tonhouse, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Tonhouse, of Judd, who was supposed to have been kidnaped ten days ago, was found in a hay loft. The boy had lived on vegetables which he had taken from the cellar. His limbs were frostbitten and he seemed to be insane. His father had offered a large reward for his return or the apprehension of the kidnapers.

NEWS IN GENERAL

OPERATIONS IN TRANSVAAL.

Boers Continue to Keep Kitchener's Men's Busy.

"Yesterday two hundred Boers attacked a small police post near Boksburg. The police gallantly drove them off before reinforcements from Johannesburg arrived. The Boers damaged the mining machinery in the neighborhood.

"The Boers attacked Utrecht at 2 o'clock this morning and were driven off.

"The Boers held up a train three miles west of Pan and were driven off.

"The eastern force of Boers in Cape Colony was headed yesterday and driven in the direction of Venterstad.

"The western force is still being driven north through Strydenburg."

London, Dec 28.—The latest dispatches from South Africa show that Lord Kitchener has succeeded in holding the invading Boers in check. But he has not yet been successful in expelling them from Cape Colony, while small commandoes continue to display astonishing bearing and activity over an immensely wide field.

It is questionable whether his proclamation will have much effect until General De Wet has been captured. The Boers are likely to regard it as a sign of weakness and to have a wholesome dread of De Wet's vengeance if any surrender.

The proclamation is approved by the party at home that favors conciliatory terms to the Boers.

DREYFUS SETS PARIS AFIRE.

Writes a Letter Demanding a Retrial of His Case.

New York, Dec. 29.—A dispatch to the World from Paris says:

The letter from Dreyfus to Premier Waldeck-Rousseau demanding a new hearing has set Paris ablaze with excitement.

The nationalists will hold a secret conclave to decide upon what action to take in view of the threatened revival of this celebrated "affair," which "will not down."

The impression prevails that Dreyfus is now in this city. Some usually well informed persons insist that his letter to the premier was carefully prepared after consultation with various distinguished men, one of them being especially conspicuous.

Dreyfus' letter was provoked by Henri Rochefort's assertion in the Intransigeant that Dreyfus sent to Emperor William in 1894 a document stolen from the German embassy in Paris, which document constituted direct evidence of the crime "for which," the ex-captain writes, "I have been twice condemned unjustly."

The World correspondent has interviewed several leaders in the senate and chamber. They simply expressed satisfaction at Dreyfus' dignified denunciation of Rochefort's statement and said they expect that an investigation will be granted.

DEWET HEADED OFF.

His Attempt to Go South Is Frustrated by the British.

Cape Town, Dec. 29.—General De Wet's attempt to break through to the south has been frustrated and he is now reported to be at Senekal with a large commando, holding the country between Feksburg, Senekal and Windburg.

The eastern parties of invading Boers are being constantly harassed and driven back towards the Orange river.

London, Dec. 29—Persistent reports are in circulation in London and on the continent that General De Wet has been captured. The British Chartered South African company received this information from a source in which it is accustomed to place implicit confidence. The war office, however, is without any confirmation of the report.

AGAINST ANY SORT OF FUSION.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—Members of the middle-of-the-road populist national committee and other leaders in various reform movements debated all Saturday over the advisability of forming a combination with the social democratic and union reform parties. The tenor of the speeches made by the comittee men was practically unanimous in opposition to the plan and in favor of carrying on the work of the populist party strictly along its own lines. It was decided to issue an address, setting forth in detail the views of the committee.

Kitchener Reports Attacks.

London, Dec. 31.—General Kitchener, telegraphing from Pretoria, sends a summary of the number of attacks made by the Boers at various points. The only important incident was an attack on a baggage column near Greylingstad. Captains Radclyffe and Harvest were wounded, eight men were killed, twenty-seven were wounded and twenty reported missing.

French Burn a Chinese Village.

PINGREE TALKS BACK.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 31.—Governor Pingree, who was summoned to appear before the Ingham county circuit court Saturday to answer to the charge of contempt, as the result of an interview in which he attacked the court and prosecuting attorney, has refused to answer the summons. He sent the following telegram to the court:

"As executive of the state of Michigan and representing one of the three independent, equal and co-ordinate divisions of the power of the government, I am constrained (meaning no disrespect to the judicial department) to deny the authority of the judiciary in the premises.

"Were I, as chief executive of this state, disposed to recognize the authority of the judicial department on this particular occasion the official duties pressing upon me in the closing hours of my administration would not permit of my giving the matter attention.

(Signed) "H. S. Pingree."

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 31.—When the contempt case against Governor Pingree was called by Judge Wisner the judge read Governor Pingree's telegram and said he did not understand that the case was against the governor, but against Hazen S. Pingree, the individual. Judge Wisner said he had no disposition to interfere with the duties of the governor, and therefore would continue the case until January 9. In default of the governor's appearance at that time an attachment to compel his attendance will issue.

HE PROPOSES TO FIGHT.

Gen. Colville Demands Trial by Court Martial.

London, Dec. 31.—Major General Sir Henry Colville, whose resignation has been demanded by the war office, but who refused to resign and came to England from Gibraltar, arriving at Plymouth Saturday to demand a trial by court martial to establish the responsibility for the yeomanry disaster at Lindley last May, has made a counter-strike at the war office in a 3,000-word statement which he has given to the press.

He says he has come home to demand a free inquiry and does not intend to be made a scapegoat for the sake of the staff. He avers that the Lindley disaster could never have happened had he been informed of Lord Roberts' intentions. The primary cause of the surrender, he says, was the insufficient information given by the headquarters staff to Colonel Spragge and himself. He sets out the facts and blames and he declines to accept the blame of others. General Colville and his influential friends, in and out of the army are thus beginning a campaign against the new secretary of state for war, Mr. William St. John Broderick, Lord Roberts and General Kitchener. It is expected to be fought out with some ferocity in parliament.

BURRIS IDENTIFIES THE PONY.

More Evidence Tending to Implicate Pat Crowe.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 29.—Daniel Burris today positively identified at Pacific Junction the pony left there mysteriously in the barn of a Mrs. Mack, the day following the Cudahy abduction, as one he sold to a man answering the description of Pat Crowe, a few days before the occurrence of the event. Mrs. Thomas B. Cooper, a married daughter of Burris, today identified a photograph of Crowe as that of the man who called to buy the pony. Mrs. Cooper is the fifth person who saw this man who has identified him with a likeness of Crowe and the police now feel sure that he is one of the men wanted.

The detectives are now very anxious to locate Lizzie Burns, who is alleged to have been an intimate friend of Crowe.

The Burns woman was employed at hotels in South Omaha up to the time of the Cudahy abduction, since when she has not been seen.

WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

Chinese Court Asks Important Questions of Allies.

New York, Dec. 31.—A dispatch to the Herald from Peking says: A note was received last evening from the imperial court at Sian Fu acknowledging the receipt of the demands of the powers.

It further contained five questions, or requests, namely:

First—Might not the Taku forts remain standing, though dismantled?

Second—Is it proposed to behead princes the same as other offenders?

Third—If the demands are acceded to, would the allies cease sending out expeditions?

Fourth—What places do the allies propose to occupy?

Fifth—How long do they propose to occupy them?

BRITAIN YIELDS TO THE CZAR.

Russian Consul Allowed at Bombay After Long Negotiations.

St. Peterburg, Dec. 29.—To occupy the post of first Russian consul at Bombay the government has appointed M. Klemm, for many years in the foreign office service in Central Asia and latterly secretary of the Russian political agent at Bokhara. Russia secured the right of consular representation at Bombay after long and difficult negotiations, the British government being slow to admit that the commercial interests of Russia justified the departure. The real objection, naturally, was fear that the consulate would serve for political instead of commercial purposes.

Teacher—Michael, after I have finished reading you may repeat in your own language what I have read. "See the cow! Isn't she a pretty cow? Can the cow run? Yes, the cow can run. Can the cow run as fast as the horse? No, the cow cannot run as fast as the horse." Michael (future mayor of Boston)—Git on to de cow! Ain't she a beaut? Kin de cow git a gait on 'er? Sure. Kin de cow hump it wid de horse? Nit. De cow ain't in it wid de horse.

"Why did your cousin who was visiting you go back to Boston so suddenly, Mrs. Siphers?"

"Oh, she discovered a day or two before Christmas that the only grate in our house was in the room she occupied, and she got angry when we insisted on having our children hang their stockings up around it. She said she wasn't going to have a man coming down the chimney into her room, even if he was old and only a myth."

Captain Riggs of New York advertised the other day for a "lady stenographer with red hair." Naturally the captain was asked to explain, and he did so by declaring that he considered red-haired stenographers brighter than any other kind.

We are sorry the gentleman has not seen fit to go a little further into details. We would like to have him specify as to the merits of red-haired stenographers. Are they less prone than their sisters of the pale blonde or brunette types to chew gum while being dictated to? Are red-haired stenographers less likely than other kinds to send word on the very days when they are sure to be most needed that their heads ache or that it is too stormy for them to come to the office?

Is it unnecessary to go over the letters which stenographers with red hair copy, for the purpose of making sure that the spelling, capitalization and grammar are all right? Do stenographers with red hair never peep over a man's shoulder while he is reading a letter that he insisted on opening himself?

STOCK MEN ALL GOING.

The fourth annual convention of the National Live Stock Association at Salt Lake promises to be the largest and most interesting gathering of stockmen ever held in this country. Salt Lake City is going to cover itself with glory in the manner in which the visitors will be entertained. The convention will be held in the Assembly hall of the Mormon church and a grand concert will be tendered the delegates and visitors in the Tabernacle on the first evening. The programme of the entertainment committee contemplates events for each evening of the convention and after the convention adjourns, there are excursions to the mines and elsewhere. Colorado is going to send a large delegation and the Denver & Rio Grande railroad will run a special train, leaving Denver Sunday, January 13, which will reach Salt Lake City the next day in time for the committee meetings. The fare for the round trip will be $18 from Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo and one fare from other points in the state. Those contemplating going should engage sleeping car accommodations at once. Write to S. K. Hooper, general passenger agent, Denver, or see any Rio Grande ticket agent. It will be a delightful midwinter trip, and no stockman who is interested in the industry can afford not to attend the meeting.

Forsaking all Others

She followed his movements with yearning eyes, and unconsciously influenced by her imploring thoughts, he half hesitated as he came near. Quick as a dart Helen glanced up; she saw the pale woman bending anxiously forward and her eyes flashed in cruel triumph. The next moment her voice rang out in a gay challenge, and she sped rapidly onward, followed by Harvey, in laughing pursuit, neither pausing until they had reached the road.

All the strength seemed to leave Gladys when he disappeared. She leaned heavily against the window pane, her breath coming in labored gasps. She tried to call to her aid the pride of a woman deliberately slighted or thoughtlessly forgotten, but the agony of the one deserted crushed out all weaker emotions. The slow tears coursed down her white face as memory pitilessly flung at her the frozen hopes of her wasted years.

Through the haze of grief she saw Harvey in every phase of his infancy and boyhood—the timid baby clinging to her gown, the laughing boy strutting about with dimpled hands in his first pockets, the bold lad flying afield on his pony, the tall youth walking protectingly by her side, and in the dark eyes of babe and boy and youth was the loving light that in man's had failed, and darkened all her days.

"I cannot bear it!" she sobbed. "I am not old; how shall I endure the long, lonely years? Why must we live when joy and hope and courage are gone? Since my poor, imperfect work is done there is nothing left me but to die. Oh, if I could!"

Overwhelmed by her despair and grief she sank, half fainting to be caught by a strong arm.

"No, no, my lamb! Your work isn't done; it's only just begun. God willing," said Phebe, her rough voice softened by deep feeling. "Never give way, dearie—the best of life is before you. Look yonder at the sun in a sea of purple and yellow and red. This morning it rose in clouds, and there was rain. At noon it shone hot and scorching, and we were glad to shut out its rays. But tonight it sinks in glory, throwing a soft light on every little cloud, turning all the gray to gold. So it shall be with your days, Miss Gladys, the last better and brighter than the first. Ay, hide your face on my shoulder, and cry out your sorrow there. It's not for the first time. Years ago we dared together the darkness of an unknown future. We'll do it again, my pretty, and comforted by your gruff old Phebe, you yet will find the road to happiness and peace."

CHAPTER VII.

It was perhaps to indemnify herself for Phebe's victory that in the succeeding weeks Helen, by her bold course of action, seemed to proclaim herself the acknowledged mistress of the house. She waited in sullen inactivity for a day or two after Harvey had sent the letter to his mother, expecting to be summoned by Mrs. Atherton for a conference, though she had no intention of resigning the keys, the symbol of her authority, without a struggle, having fully convinced herself that as the wife of the defrauded sharer in the estate this authority was hers by right.

It is surprising how readily the covetous and selfish believe what they wish to believe. There is no doubt that Shylock considered himself justly entitled to his pound of flesh, despite the trifling inconvenience the giving of it might cause Antonio, and his line of argument has been pursued by many another, though in a modified degree. Helen was prepared to back up her unauthorized claim with a dozen ingenious arguments which she detailed to Harvey with a sweet plausibility that made him her convert in the end, though some of his scruples were hard to overcome. But she was a convincing talker and knew where to stop; her closing sentence always left him with a new thought that did its work in her absence. Gratitude is not the dominant trait of humanity, and it is pleasant to be convinced that what we have blindly enjoyed as a privilege we may arbitrarily claim as a right.

So the days passed on, and Gladys gave no sign, Helen made vigorous movement. She dismantled the best guest chambers, a suite of two handsome rooms, and fitted them up luxuriously for her sisters, taking furniture from every part of the house to carry out her fancy. Why keep vacant, and in the center of the house, rooms that could be used to advantage? she argued. In this town of short distances they never had resident guests, and the chambers in the wing and on the upper floor were quite sufficient for the few who tarried for the night. Helen's reasons were always logical, and stated in a manner so copiously convincing that in agreeing with her arguments her hearers lost sight of the fact that she was regulating a matter in which she had no concern.

She had excellent taste and ample materials to work with; the suite, now arranged as a parlor and bedroom, which also served as day nursery, looked so charming when completed that with her sister's help and management she extended the work of renovation to other apartments. Every evening, when Harvey returned from business, he was playfully dragged into some room in course of alteration, and his approbation demanded by the group of happy workers. If he had misgivings, they argued them away; if he objected, as he sometimes did, they cooed and laughed him into compliance. The odds were against the boy; there was an excuse for his weakness.

Gladys took her meals in her own rooms, and never left them except for a daily airing upon the upper balcony on which her side windows opened. Phebe, in her pilgrimages back and forth to the kitchen and pantries, saw all that was going on and her face grew grimmer than ever. But she made no protest, and Helen, quick to interpret any sign in her own favor, decided that this was one of the instances when silence meant acquiescence. No doubt Mrs. Atherton had thought everything over, and rather than totally alienate her boy, concluded to yield, at least in a measure, to his just demands. Full surrender would come later, when she realized how tardy she had been in a matter that should long ago have been adjusted. Naturally she found it hard to acknowledge herself in the wrong; but the acknowledgement would surely come, and when it did, even though late, they must receive it very kindly and generously, Helen told Harvey, with the air of a very good person magnanimous enough to pardon a very bad one.

Helen, however, was not afraid of Tomlinson, nor of any living being. To do her justice she had thoroughly persuaded herself she was doing her duty, and thus grounded, flatly refused to surrender the keys.

"When I have given an account of my stewardship to Mrs. Atherton," she said, "I am sure she will give them into no hand but her own. I am ready to see her at any time."

"My mistress isn't strong enough to talk business just yet," said Phebe, hastily. "As for the keys, I'm not particular for a week or so. I can't be much about the house until she is well on her feet again. The thing I am particular about is to get her parlor ready for her right away, and I want every servant in the house to help me."

"The room cannot be disturbed today," said Helen, firmly. "I must first make some suitable arrangements for my sisters."

She glanced at her husband, who stood a little aloof, looking as awkward as men generally do when serving as a buffer for two angry women.

"Did you not explain this to your mother, Harvey?"

"Fully; but my arguments failed to carry weight," he answered with assumed lightness, hoping to win Helen to a less determined mood. He knew Phebe better than she did, and feared serious trouble if the housekeeper was defied. "I think we must try and do what the mater asks, sweetheart. She is seldom exacting, and the fancies of an invalid should be humored."

"I have no patience with sick fancies; they are born of weakness that should not be encouraged. She demands an impossibility. In her weak state she does not need the room. I wonder at you, Harvey, for encouraging her in such selfishness."

"Oh, well, well, don't let us quarrel over anything so trifling. No doubt tomorrow will be soon enough to think about it," he hastily replied, slipping his arm about her shoulders and drawing her to him. She gazed affectionately into his face and put up her hand to meet his, her frown gone. He looked at Phebe, smiling persuasively. "I'm afraid this wilful girl must have her way, Tomlinson. Won't you make it all right with the mater? I'm sure you can if you will."

To any other onlooker the matrimonial tableau would have had its charm. It enraged Phebe. She was jealous of her mistress, pushed aside and treated like a child by this presumptous pair, who seemed to think the world made for them and their paltry love. She glared angrily at them from under her shaggy brows.

"Is that your last word, Mr. Harvey?" she asked with ominous calmness. "Then listen to me, both of you. The rooms will be ready for the mistress in just three hours. I'll give the nurse and parlor maid half an hour to take away their things. If anything is left after that I'll throw it out of the window—and you from the door if you dare interfere!" she added to Helen, who had started forward, hot words on her lips.

"Tomlinson, what do you mean by addressing my wife in that insolent manner?" exclaimed Harvey.

"What do you mean by disobeying the best mother a son ever had, you ungrateful boy?" she furiously returned. "For that's all you are, though you're mightily set up with having a wife and baby. If you were a few years younger I'd larrup you well for your impudence. Get out of my way—you've hindered me long enough. As for this woman, whose jumping jack you are, she'll be dealt with later."

Phebe never gave Gladys the full particulars of the scene that ensued; but for once Helen had found her match, and was forced to yield.

"Though it half killed her to do it," said Phebe. "She was in an awful rage. I though she'd fly at me when I called Mr. Harvey a boy. I had to give her that shot," she chuckled, her shrewd gray eyes twinkling, "and it hit him, too. I never saw him angrier. He vows he'll not forgive either of us for insulting his wife—or rather she said it, and he fell in with the idea."

Gladys sighed. She had gained her point, but at the cost of her boy's displeasure. She looked around her pretty parlor, with its open piano and music and books and bric-a-brac and pictures, all lit up by the dancing flames of the fire, and thought drearily that its comfort meant little when unshared by any congenial person who loved her.

For the next week or so the house was ominously quiet. Gladys took her meals in her own parlor, waited on by Phebe and Annette. No other member of the household came to her. From her windows she saw Helen and the baby on the covered veranda of the south wing, the woman pacing back and forth in the sun, the child clutching at her hair and crowing with delight, and she yearned to hold the little fellow in her arms, close close to her desolate heart. Was she never again to be loved and loving?

CHAPTER VIII.

One morning a letter arrived from Mrs. Leonard. Gladys read it carefully several times, then lay back in her chair to muse on its contents. All that day and the next—the Sabbath—she was very thoughtful, and in the afternoon, having had a long talk with Phebe, summoned Harvey to her room. His answer was a curt note:

"When you have sent for my wife and apologized for the insult offered to her and her sisters I will see you again—not before. Meanwhile, it is only fair to warn you that I shall resist any interference with Mrs. Atherton's plans through a third party, being convinced that she is serving your interests and ours in the course she is pursuing.

Gladys laughed sadly at the mannisl assumption of the letter. Helen had rather an imposing style, she admitted. She could scarcely believe that the writer was her once obedient son. He had been an apt pupil—very ready to turn against her at the bidding of another. A measure of contempt for him, a scorn of his weakness, was making itself felt in her heart. She strove to put it away, but it remained and gained strength.

"I hate Helen," she thought, for she has robbed me of my boy. But she owes me no allegiance, and he does. He should never have written that rubbish, even at her dictation. Their interests! Ah, you are making a sad blunder, poor ingrates!"

She ran over the contents of the note once more, then tore it into fragments and threw them into the grate. There was no fire, the day having been unusually warm for the season, and applying a lighted match to the little heap she watched it burn to ashes, wishing she might destroy the recollection of the written words as easily. Phebe had not returned from her Sunday class meeting. Annette was enjoying her weekly outing. For the coming hour Gladys would be alone and she longed for companionship.

She went to the window after awhile and stood looking at the pretty scene below. The sun was sinking fast, and the grass and the trees seemed to show a deeper green under the burnished sky, and throw in greater contrast the groups of late flowers touched by its fire. Soon all this autumn splendor would be over, to make way for the white lonely winter. She shivered as she thought of the long, cold days and nights.

The door in the south wing opened, and Harvey and Helen equipped for their evening ramble, came forth, laughing back at some one who accompanied them to the entrance. Helen had pinned a black lace shawl about her head and shoulders, and in her hair shone a yellow rose, the companion of which Harvey wore in his coat. It was one of her loving demands that at all times he would wear the flowers she wore, and he humored her in it. "He'd sport a collar and number if she asked him," Phebe once said, commenting on this. And Gladys, who found nothing amiss in the caprice, reproved her for her unkind criticism.

It always flatters a woman to be told that her family lacks that delicacy of mind which is necessary to appreciate her.

The Twentieth Century.

We now stand at the threshold of the twentieth century, and the nineteenth is a thing of the past. It will, however, be known as the century of invention and discovery, and among some of the greatest of these, we can truthfully mention Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the celebrated remedy for all ailments arising from a weak or disordered stomach, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulency, constipation and biliousness.

WEEP LIKE MEN.

Science Has Demonstrated That Animals Shed Real Tears.

Many animals express various forms of sympathy for man; and science has recently discovered that animals actually weep.

A series of carefully conducted experiments have been made on a number of animals, domestic and wild, and the fact has been brought out, says the New York World, that they actually shed tears.

"To cry like a calf" has long been a proverb; but few who made use of it supposed that calves actually wept. The term was an opprobrious one, denoting weeping of a boisterous sort—a clownish bellowing.

Now it comes to light, through experiments conducted by Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, F. Cuvier, E. Tennent and others, that calves do possess lachrymal glands, which operate on occasions which give their owners distress.

Deer are also endowed with a similar apparatus, and when a stag is at bay it "weeps hot tears." On examining the eyes of wounded deer, it was found that they were literally swimming with tears caused by the pain and alarm under which the animal labored.

On removing a calf from its mother, tears were seen to be streaming from its eyes long after its first excitement had passed over. This seemed real grief, and a special record was kept of that case. On examining other calves, under similar circumstances, the fact came out that all wept real tears.

Ordinarily we do not look to the bear for weakness. Bears do shed tears, however. Though the occasions are rare on which Bruin may be observed to indulge this womanly trait, still the fact has been scientifically recorded.

Bears, on the near approach of death, weep copiously. Their whole being seems to be shaken with sorrow. They weep silently. When a bear is dying it lies on its side, with the mouth open, and the scalding tears pour freely from the eyes. Just at the moment of death it gives vent to a few almost human sobs.

When the giraffe is wounded, if the pain is severe, it sheds tears, and its grief is not allayed until the wound ceases to throb. Giraffes have been seen to weep also from wounds which, while not especially painful, are disfiguring to the fine coat with which their body is adorned.

Perhaps the aesthetic taste of the giraffe is wounded deeply at the disfigurement; perhaps its soul cannot bear the sight of blood. These latter points yet remain mysteries to science.

Elks weep when wounded, especially if the wound be slight in its nature.

The lachrymal duct of the ape opens on slight provocation. When vexed, an ape will cry, especially if he is unable to retaliate. Apes have also been seen to weep when badly frightened.

Elephants in captivity have been known to weep incessantly. Captivity is borne by elephants with little grace. All are restless most of the time, and some never cease to shed tears.

When an elephant has been unsuccessful in an attempt to escape, it seems that his spirit is forever after downcast.

Elephants have always exhibited very human traits; but this one of crying brings them closer to the human family than any other attribute. An elephant weeps practically for the same cause which would make a man weep. On setting the animal free, which has been done for experiment, tear-shedding immediately ceases, and the animal returns to its cheerfulness of disposition. On returning to captivity, it again begins to weep.

When seals are tormented they weep and bellow in a way which expresses that they are in distress. They do not exhibit any vengeful feelings, like the ape. Their weeping is sad and appeals to the hearer with great force. While conducting the weeping experiments on seals the French savants were often deeply touched by the piteous pleadings of the animals.

Some remarkable facts have been observed with regard to the dolphin. This fish, as is well known, changes all its colors when dying, but that phenomenon is not all; it weeps profusely. Just at the moment of death it sighs as if in great sorrow. The sighing of the dolphin is not like the gasping for breath of other fish. It is deeply drawn and has almost human qualities.

IN THE CAUSE OF SCIENCE.

Heroic Self-Sacrifice of Two Surgeons of the Navy.

A remarkable example of nerve and self-sacrifice has been exhibited in the experiments that are being conducted with mosquito inoculation by the army surgeons in Cuba. There has been no doubt in the medical profession for several years that yellow fever, typhoid fever and other contagious diseases could be communicated by flies, mosquitoes and other insects, and it has recently been discovered that inoculation can be used to protect people from yellow fever, just as smallpox can be prevented by vaccination. The matter is still in an experimental stage, and has not yet reached that development under which medical men generally can safely use it. In order to accomplish practical ends and ascertain how the discovery could best be utilized for the human welfare in countries subject to yellow fever epidemics, Dr. Jesse W. Lazear and Dr. James A. Carroll, assistant surgeons of the United States army, offered their lives. It was quite as heroic as the act of Hobson in sinking the Merrimac to obstruct the channel of Santiago harbor, but comparatively few people will ever hear of their heroism. They fed mosquitoes upon the bodies of yellow fever patients in the hospital at Havana, and then deliberately allowed those mosquitoes to attack their arms. The infecton of both was promptly discovered, and they were treated with all the skill and care that their associates could devise, while the study of their symptoms and the course of the disease was carefully observed. Dr. Lazear died, but Dr. Carroll survived, and his report is one of the most important contributions to the vast literature concerning contagious diseases.—W. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record.

The old idea that the body sometimes needs a powerful, drastic. purgative pill has been exploded; for Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are perfectly harmless, gently stimulate liver and bowels to expell poisonous matter, cleanse the system and absolutely cure Constipation and Sick Headache Only 25c at Harr's drug store.

Horse flesh is again going down in price. It don't make any difference how many wars there are raging or how many horses and mules are killed or mangled in battles or how great the city hack demand is, or if many mules, jack asses and donkeys are exported, the price of the horse (one of man's most faithful friends) is depreciating and droping off in price and value. One os our town boys, Wm, Lau, the other day purchased a horse for one dollar, skinned him and sent his hide to a shoe factory where they make the Cordovans. Now if the horse died without agony or prolonged torture and we do not have to wear a pair of shoes cut from that cheap animals hide the matter can pass as it is. Nevertheless it was a cheap horse for $1.00.

During a conversation recently we find that the steel range peddlers (whoever they are) who canvassed in Ell towhship a week or two since have left several ranges among the farmers of that vicinity against the will of the farmer and his wife. The peddlers came to the house or houses and tried to sell their wares and the farmers did not care to invest, so the article was left with the farmer in the barn, woodshed or any old place that would afford a shelter for some time. The people of that quarter do not want the ranges. They told the peddlers so and why the man will leave his wares thus on the man's property without the latter's consent is something hard to understand and is truly a problem hard to solve. The only thing we can figure out of so prevous an act is to in some way trap the farmer. If he uses the article at all pay is demanded for same, if he gives up the stove to any one, other than the man who left it he will be responsible for it, and when the fellow who left the article comes to get it and finds it not where he left it he will expect the the "son of toil" to account for it's absence. We would advise farmers in this kiud of a predicament to keep the stove or range —whichever it may be— right in the shed where the fellow put it. Do not use it. Do not give up the stove to any one, no matter how many papers or orders he has for it, unless he be the man who left it. If you do you will surely suffer the consequences!

A Prominent Chicago Woman Speaks.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance, in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I found it was pleasant to take and relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered. Saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I shall never be without this splendid medicine again." Lord Rathmore has told a friend how he once took "Ouida" in to dinner, and how disappointed he was to find that the novelist devoted herself to the dishes rather than to intellectual refreshment. He said at last in despair at having only been able to get "Yes" and "No" in answer to his different subjects he introduced: "I'm afraid that I'm singularly unfortunate in my choice of topics. Is there anything we could talk about to interest you?" To which the chronicler of society's shortcomings replied: "There is one thing which would interest me very much; tell me about the duchesses; I have written about them all my life and never met one yet."

MR. AYERS NOT DEAD.

Very Much Alive and Out with a Letter Telling How He Was Saved.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29.—(Special.)—Few who knew how ill Mr. A. E. Ayers of this city had been with Bright's Disease and Diabetes ever expected he could live. Four doctors gave him but three or four days to live. He recovered through the prompt and continued use of a well-known remedy, and has given the following letter for publication. It is dated at Bath, N. Y., where Mr. Ayers now resides.

Soldiers and Sailors' Home,

Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sirs—I wish to tell you what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me. As far as I am concerned they are the best in the world, for they not only saved my life, but they have given me new life and hope. I lived in Minneapolis for forty-nine years, and am well known there by many people. I suffered severely with Bright's Disease and Diabetes. Four well-known physicians gave me up to die. In fact they gave me only three or four days at the longest to live. I had spent nearly everything I had in the effort to save my life, but seeing an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I scraped what was nearly my last half dollar, sent to the drug store and bought a box. I had very little hope of anything ever doing me any good, as from what the four doctors had told me, it was now a matter of hours with me. I commenced to take the Pills, and from the very first they helped me. I took in all about forty boxes. I doubtless did not need so many, but I wanted to make sure, and after all, $20 is a small amount of money to remove the sentence of death and save one's life.

I have since recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to hundreds of people, and I have yet to hear of the first one that did not find them all that you claim for them. I can remember of two people to whom I had recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills, and who afterwards said to me that they received no benefit. I asked to see their Pill boxes, and behold, instead of Dodd's Kidney Pills, it was ———'s Kidney Pills, an imitation of the genuine Dodd's, and not the real thing at all that they had been using. I gave each of them an empty pill box that Dodd's Kidney Pills had been put up in, so that they could make no more mistakes, and they afterwards came to me and told me that they had bought and used the genuine Dodd's Kidney Pills, and were cured.

I still continue to use the Pills off and on, and would not be without them if they were $50 a box. I think that every old gentleman in the world would be healthier and better if he would take one after each meal.

I wish I could think of words strong enough to express to you my gratitude for what your Medicine has done for me. It is not often, I suppose, that a man who is staring death right in the face, is permitted to live and tell of the means which saved him, and as this is my position, my heart is overflowed with thankfulness to God for his mercy to me in permitting me to see the advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, when it seemed that I was beyond all earthly power to save, I cannot express my real feelings. Any one doubts the statement I make, they may write to me, and I will and prove to them that all I have said in this letter is true, and can prove it true. There are hundreds of people in Minneapolis who know all about my case and the way Dodd's Kidney Pills pulled me through, when I was given up by the four doctors of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and had given up all hope. You are at liberty to publish this testimonial and refer any one you from the bottom of my heart I sincerely wish that I could find words to express my gratitude to you and to Dodd's Kidney Pills, for my restoration to health.

A. E. AYERS,
Late of Minneapolis, now at Soldiers' Home, Bath, N. Y.
Sworn to before me this 30th day of April, 1900.

Many millions of thousands of people say that their lives were prolonged and their lives made worth living by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I, JANUARY 6—MATT. 26: 6-16.

Jesus Anointed at Bethany—"She Hath Done What She Could"—Mark 14: 8—Jesus Defends Mary — Two Lines of Defense.

6. "Now when Jesus was in Bethany." Bethany means "House of Dates," or "Home of Comfort." "In the house of Simon the leper." There were many Simons and this one is distinguished from the others by the fact that he had been a leper.

7. "There came unto him a woman." This woman was Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus (John 12: 3), not the woman in Luke 7, "who was a sinner." "Having an alabaster box," rather, a cruse or flask. "Literally, an alabaster, just as we call a drinking vessel made of glass a glass. Pliny compares these vessels to a closed rosebud."—M. R. Vincent, Word Studies. "Of very (exceedingly) precious ointment." "By the ointment we are to understand rather a liquid perfume than what we commonly know as ointment."—Schaff.

8. "When his disciples saw it, they had indignation." John tells us that Judas Iscariot was the leader and the mouthpiece of the indignation against Mary. "To what purpose is this waste?" This useless squandering of what could have been used to a better purpose. "Waste" is literally "perdition." So Judas is afterwards called "a son of perdition," a man who had utterly wasted his life.

9. "Sold for much." Three hundred pence, silver pennies or shillings, the Roman denarii, worth from fifteen to seventeen cents each. See above. "And given to the poor." This was the real thought of the others, but the pretense of Judas.

10. "When Jesus understood it." The R. V. is much more correct here, "But Jesus perceiving it," at the moment; he knew their thoughts at once; while the common version seems to suggest that it took him some time to learn what the grumbling was about. "She hath wrought a good work upon me." The Greek adjective implies something more than "good," a noble, an honorable work.—Plumptre. It was the act of a noble soul expressing its noblest emotions. The form it took is expressed in V. 12, "She did it for my burial;" R. V. "to prepare me for burial." Mark says, "She hath anointed my body beforehand for the burying."

11. "For ye have the poor always with you." The would have plenty of opportunities to aid them; and the more they did for their Master, the more they would do for the poor, for the poor are left in his stead, and through them would be expressed the increased love of the Master. "But me ye have not always." The opportunity of making such expressions of love directly to Jesus would not occur again.

13. "Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached." The words here show that our Lord expected his gospel to be diffused throughout the world. "In the whole world." The story has been told in every known tongue, and is now being related in more than three hundred and fifty different languages to every great nation on the earth. "For a memorial of her." By which her deed shall be remembered; not to glorify her, but to continue her usefulness, to give immortality to her character and influence.

14. "Then . . . Judas Iscariot." See Lesson IX., on the betrayal of Jesus. Judas was doubtless angry at the reproof he had received. He was disappointed in his desires to gain money. He probably was still more disappointed in his hopes of being treasurer of a great kingdom which would fall if Jesus died. His avaricious spirit was excited and repelled by the praise of Jesus for the spirit of Mary, so opposed to his own. These feelings doubtless grew and deepened by brooding over them during the two or three days which may have elapsed between the anointing by Mary and this plot to betray Jesus.

15. "Covenanted with him." Rather as R. V., "weighed unto him," actually gave him the money agreed upon. Money went by weight. "Thirty pieces of silver." Silver shekels, each worth four denarii, usually translated pence. A shekel was therefore worth sixty-four to sixty-eight cents; in all about twenty dollars, the usual price of a slave.

The Lesson: The principal lesson now to be considered is the contrast between the spirit of Judas and that of Mary. Against the background of his covetousness and the horrid, hateful brood it brought forth is seen in brighter colors the beautiful and attractive spirit of love.

About the Potato.

Recent experiments show that potatoes contain poison known as solanin. New potatoes contain comparatively little of this poison unless they grow above the surface of the ground and have a green skin. Gardeners should therefore be careful to thoroughly earth-up potato rows. Old potatoes contain much more of this poisonous principle solanin, and many cases of serious poisoning have occurred in the late summer when old potatoes were used.

In 1892 and 1893 there was almost wholesale poisoning among the troops of the German army. In this case it was found that in old potatoes kept in a damp place and beginning to sprout there was twenty-four times as much solanin as in new potatoes.—London Tit-Bits.

Club of Many Nationalities.

Unique among woman's clubs, perhaps, is that which was launched five years ago in Honolulu and is now reported to be at last on a firm footing. It was started by an American school teacher, who was wont to invite young girls to her home once a week for informal conversation on some topic. The outgrowth was a full-fledged club of thirty-four members, most of them being Hawaiians, with a mixture, however, of Chinese and Portuguese. The president this year is a Chinese girl, who wears her quaint national costume when she fills the official chair.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

The supreme court has handed down an opinion affirming the verdict against R. W. Boeger, in Decatur county, in which he was assessed $375 damages for having forcibly hugged and kissed Miss Mae Brenner. The court finds nothing in the twenty-two alleged errors in the lower trial which would justify it in disturbing the verdict, which seems to be righteous.

There has been considerable discussion among the Commercial Exchange directors and members of the army post committee in regard to naming the army post. No one seems to know just how the government proceeds in naming new posts, but it is thought any reasonable name the city might suggest would be adopted. It has been suggested that the post be called Fort Hull, in recognition of the work Captain Hull has done in securing its establishment. Fort Des Moines has also been suggested. The latter meets with more general favor. It is thought it will benefit the city more than any other, giving the town a wide range of free advertising. Other suggestions are Fort Crocker and Fort Kirkwood.

A case of smallpox has been reported at Evans, Mahaska county, and one in Fremont township, Hamilton county. Dr. Adams, of the state board of health, who has been making inquiry, reports that the town of Stratford in that county has twenty-eight persons under quarantine, ten families are quarantined in Homer and thirty families in Webster township of the same county.

The State Teachers' association at its meeting elected the following officers: President, A. W. Stewart of Ottumwa; first vice president, J. P. Hugett of Cedar Rapids; second vice president, E. U. Graff of Red Oak; third vice president, E. C. Lilly of Independence; secretary, W. F. Barr of Des Moines; member of executive committee, H. E. Kratz of Sioux City; members of educational council, George E. MacLean of Iowa City and A. T. Hukill of Waterloo.

"First—That we hereby extend our thanks to the citizens of Des Moines for furnishing rooms for the work of the association without expense to this body, and for their manifold courtesies.

"Second—That we thank Miss Harriet Garton, the Simpson Glee club and other persons for the excellent music which they have furnished, thereby adding to the pleasures of the association.

"Third—That we extend our thanks to the press of Des Moines for their untiring efforts to give a complete and accurate report of all proceedings of this body.

"Fourth—That we extend our thanks to the executive committee, the officers and standing committees for their faithful work in caring for the interests of the association in all its various departments.

"Fifth—That hereafter the chairman of the executive committee shall be allowed a sum not exceeding $50 with which to employ a stenographer or a clerk who may assist him in the arduous detail work of his office.

"Sixth—Whereas, The association is any year liable to meet conditions arising from such unforeseen circumstances as an unprecedented storm, a railroad strike or other such thing which would make it impossible to pay expenses for the given year; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we instruct the executive committee to place the sum of $100 annually in a reserve fund which may be used only in an emergency and which may be paid out only by the vote of the general association.

"As it is unwise to create a large fund which might become injurious to us in many ways, we further instruct the executive committee to report the amount of principal and interest in the reserve fund at each annual meeting and to invote our special action upon the matter whenever it shall amount to $1,000.

"Seventh—We note with pleasure the ever widening influence of the public and the traveling library, and also of the efforts now being made in our state in the direction of centralization and the transportation of pupils in rural districts and we most cordially invite the careful, pains taking and sympathetic investigation of these movements by all teachers and school boards and especially of those who are charged with the care of districts which would be affected by it."

At the close of the annual meeting of the Osteopathists of the state at Still college a resolution was adopted empowering the directors of the Iowa organization to make an assessment and use it at their discretion in aiding Dr. C. L. Parsons of Eagle Grove in carrying through the mandamus action he has begun against the state board of medical examiners to compel that body to issue him a certificate. In this connection another resolution was adopted as follows:

"Resolved, that we concur and heartily co-operate in the efforts now being made by one of our numbers to compel the Iowa state board of medical examiners to recognize by mandamus, diplomas from reputable schools of Osteopathy."

KITCHEN CHEMISTRY.

Miss Emma Sickels Plans a Reform Method of Cooking.

Foodstuffs as a fine art. A little laboratory just off the kitchen—a housewife who knows definitions and descriptions of physical and chemical properties, who will do a little analyzing for you in a quiet way before breakfast and who will break into the dinner talk with a chatty story of acids, alkalies, decomposition products and all occurrences in natural food material. Miss Emma Sickels, secretary of the National Domestic Science association, says dreams come true, and adds that she will establish a Chicago normal cooking school. Then she points to these to-be directors: John M. Stahl, secretary of the Farmers' National congress; Prof. G. Bamberger, superintendent of the Chicago Jewish Training school, and Mrs. Charles Wheeler. "Chemistry of foods will be our corner stone," said Miss Sickels, as she nooded her gray head and remarked: "I've had such a beautiful dinner. Your present cooking is so barbarous. I shall transform your kitchen and you will learn how superior nutritive value is to palatability." In the school that is to be founded there will be text books written by Miss Sickels and lectures on methods of food analysis with the illustrations of the awful results of wrong combinations. Diplomas will be issued to students who "master the principles governing dietary standards." After this course a young woman is qualified for marriage and a laboratory of her own, or she may answer advertisements for cooks versed in the composition of milk and milk products, eggs and meats, fish, cereals, breads, legumes, roots and tubers, fresh vegetables and fruits. She will know all about chemical action, why fried onions and ice cream bring about nausea, why cream puffs and lobster are not "proper" breakfast food and why mince pies and cheese sandwiches should not be eaten before retiring. It is a charming art; aren't you perfectly fascinated with it?" asked Miss Sickels. Then she went back to the dining room and picked up a fork. She put the fork into a piece of pie. That pie looked like "what mother used to make." Miss Sickels has not selected her site.—Chicago News.

CAPITAL EVOLVES.

When Washington last beheld the city which bears his name, shortly before his death in 1799, it was a straggling settlement in the woods, almost wholly devoid of streets, with thirty or forty residences—most of these small and uncomfortable—and an unfinished capitol and president's house. Indeed Washington long remained a sparsely built, unsightly city and a comfortless place of residence. For more than a generation its growth in population was less than 600 a year, a rate of increase that would now put to shame almost any village in the land; and so late as 1840 de Bacourt, the French minister, could write that Washington was "neither a city, nor a village, nor the country," but "a building yard placed in a desolate spot wherein living is unbearable."

The opening of the civil war found it a dirty, straggling, unkempt town. The water supply came from pumps and springs; there were neither street cars nor paved streets; no fire department, police force worthy of the name, and not a sewer in the city. Earthen bluffs lined the river bank; stables and wooden fences surrounded the White House; the present departments were not half finished and the parks and commons were given up to weeds. But all this was changed by the struggle for the union, which doubled the population of Washington and brought in freedom and northern enterprise, but more important still, by a thousand moving and glorious associations, endeared the capital to the people of the whole country. Then came its remaking by Shepherd and his associates. Now it is a truly imperial city, and the judgment of Washington and the genius of L'Enfant have been vindicated. —The World's Work.

High Class Navy Men.

The change in the character and methods of naval warfare has brought into the service a class of men entirely different from those who used to "shiver their timbers" and "splice the main brace" on our men-of-war years ago. Battleships, cruisers, gunboats and torpedo boats are now enormous engines composed of the most delicate and complicated machinery. The sailor of to-day is an accomplished scientist. He must be both a machinist and an electrician, and those requirements have brought into the service a high class of men.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE

Is the most important period in a woman's existence. Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are symptoms of a dangerous, nervous trouble. Those hot flashes are just so many calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

MRS. JENNIE NOBLE.

It builds up the weakened nervous system, and enables a woman to pass that grand change triumphantly.

"I was a very sick woman, caused by Change of Life. I suffered with hot flushes, and fainting spells. I was afraid to go on the street, my head and back troubled me so. I was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. JENNIE NOBLE, 5010 Keyser St., Germantown, Pa.

When a girl reaches sixteen, her parents, without going through the formality of a vote, make her the head of the family.

STORIETTES.

"British Museum" Newton, the archaeologist, was a capital story teller, and Mr. Hare has preserved two or three of his tales. One is a spiritualistic seance where an old cockney was informed that the spirit manifested was his deceased wife, whereupon the following dialogue took place:

"Is that you, 'Arriet?"

"Yes, it is me."

"Are you 'appy, 'Arriet?"

"Yes, very 'appy."

"'Appier than you was with me, 'Arriet?"

"Yes, much 'appier."

"Where are you, 'Arriet?"

"In 'ell."

Two colored men on a street car were congratulating one another. The last to talk was newly wedded.

"Sam, I'se understand you'se took-in' unto youseself a new woman?" said Mr. Johnston.

"Did you-all get a good start?"

Sam was apparently very anxious to answer this question, and in a much louder tone said:

"Well, I should say I did get a good start. I got an old woman wid eleben little pickaninnies."

"Down in the south," remarked a man at one of the New York clubs, "there exists more of a religious atmosphere than there is here in the north. So most of the stories they tell have a sectarian flavor to them. One that I heard while in Charleston is entirely new to me, and it appeared to be so in the circle of gentlemen where I heard it. It ran this way:

"A dignified old gentleman stood on one of the city wharves watching an old darky who was fishing. No word passed between them until the darky landed a good sized fish. This was unhooked, and there was a look of disgust on the face of the fisherman as he threw the fish back into the water.

"Why did you throw that fish back into the water, instead of keeping him, uncle?" queried the onlooker.

"He no good, massa."

"What kind of a fish was it?"

"We calls 'em Baptist fish, sah."

"And why Baptist fish, uncle?"

"Ah couldn't say fo' suah, massa, but I specs it's bekase dey spiles soon as you get 'em outen de water."

A HIGH MARK.

The New York Almanac for 1901, issued by Chas. H. Fletcher of New York City, has set a high mark for similar publications during the new century, and shows remarkable enterprise on the part of the publisher when we consider that it is intended solely for free distribution. The numerous publications of this character are usually gotten up with the single idea of cheapness, while the thought of expense has certainly been set aside in the case of the New York Almanac.

The artistic colorings of the cover, the accuracy of its calendars and its fund of information all go to make it well worthy of perusal and preservation. It has innumerable hints for mothers as to the care of children. A unique page is the "Baby's Record" page, which is in blank, to be filled in with baby's name, date of birth, cut first tooth, etc.

The whole is a very creditable piece of work and may be procured at any drug store or direct on request, free.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

Within the present year the "Cedar Rapids Route" will add to it's already extensive system 130 miles of new track, entering the very richest portion of southern Minnesota. The line from Worthington to Hardwick, Minn. with it's four prosperous towns is in full opperation. The grading on the Germania-Albert Lee line, passing through Faribault, Freeborn, Steele and Rice counties, is practically completed, and the four new towns on this branch are already started and doing remarkably well.

The line between Albert Lee and Faribault, Minn, is being extended north at the rate of over one mile per day and is expected to reach Owatonna, and perhaps Faribault, this year. The most important town on this line will be Ellendale, located midway between Elbert Lee and Owatonna. It is the purpose of the Company to make Ellendale THE town, and no other towns between Albert Lee and Owatonna. The location is three-fourths of a mile west of the Cooleyville Creamery, near the south line of Steele county, and in the heart of the very best best dairy district in Minnesota.

It is the policy of companies generally to locate towns too near each other for profitable commercial enterprises. Ellendale is an exception, and has more than double the territory of the ordinary locations. Examine the map and see the very large territory tributary to Ellendale. There is no better country in the northwest than the northern portion of Freeborn and the southern portion of Steele counties, Minnesota. The farmers have been anxiously waiting for a convenient market.

There are needed: Banks, Dry Goods Store, Drug Store, Hardware Store, Furniture Store, Grocery Store, General Store, Harness shop, Barber shop, Restaurant, Blacksmith shop, Agricultural Implement warehouse, Wagon shop, Photographer, Hotel, Newspaper and printing office, Lumber yard, Shoe store, Bakery, Jewelry Store, Clothing store, Millinery store, Livery barn, Meat market, Insurance agent. In a wedding write-up we recently read we noticed that the editor said: "may their only trials be little ones."

There are 28 towns in Iowa which have a population of over 1000, according to advance census reports, and 14 towns that count their popnlation with more than four figures. Des Moines has a population of 62,139.

The Cencus Statistics for the state of Iowa, the county of Hancock and the towns thereof appear in this issue. Ell township is given a population of 756. Klemme has 262 inhabitants. Read the article as it is quite interesting.

The German Medicine Comany which has been here the past week closed their show and the sales of medicines last Saturday night. They were greeted every evening with a full house. Many prizes were given away which were considered as being valuable, but time will tell on these as other things. We may be mistaken but hardly think so.

The Royal (Iowa) Banner, says "that it has been discovered that the home grown, hand spanked, ragged, bare-footed country boy makes a better fighter in the battles of life than does the hampered, well-clothed city boy, whose trousers have been dusted with nothing but a golden slipper" Yes, and they are the kind of boys that make the presidents, senators, congressman and other smart men. The others make dudes.—Britt News.

And, let us add right here that the boy who grows up on the farm and is kept ignorant of the vices of the world is just as good and better than the boy who knows all the petty meanesses and pesky devilishness. Pure and undefiled in mind and body he stands ahead and outshines the "dude" like the moon does the stars. Wisdom in the things which teach of good and ignorance in the things which incite to the bad are what make the true man out of the boy. And the girls the same!

There is another thing we would like to "no," and that is why is it that so many of the young men and young ladies of to-day will go away to college before they "no" how to spell "rite." Why would not a common school course be just as good for that class of boys and girls? It must be that they have got to go away from home in order to cover up their ignorance along these lines. It would certainly be a great saving to the parents if that boy who does not "no" which word needs a capital letter to start it would stay at home like a man and go to the country school until there was nothing left for him to learn. But that does not suit the lad, he cannot stay at home among his friends and learn anything because he is afraid they will find out how much he does not "no," and then he cannot have quite so much fun as he can away from home where there is no one to watch him. As long as father and mother will furnish the cash to let him go to school and learn a lot of unnecessary foolishness like playing ball, foot ball, and "give him a chance he will enjoy it very much. But it is four to one and nine the other way the parents do not get any too many thanks for it. Keep that boy of yours, if he has not gone through the common school, at home! Send him to school in your own district and "give him a chance" to learn the A. B. C's at least, before you start him off to a college or State University!

Cencus Statistics.

Iowa was organized as a territory July 3, 1838, admitted as a state Mar. 3, 1845, and by ex ansion. was enlarged to it's present erea, 56,025 square miles—and re-admitted Dec. 26, 1846.

The Cencus of 1840 gave it 43,112 inhabitants, of 1890, 1,911,896, and that of 1900, 2,231,853 a gain of 16.7 in the last decade. Of the 99 counties in the state all but one have increased in population in the past ten years; Woodbury shows a decrease of 1.8 per cent. The counties showing the greatest per cent of increase are Emmet, 132.5 pct; Dickinson, 84.7; Hancock, 80.4, Winnebago, 73.7 and Kossuth 73.2. The largest cities in the state are: Des Moines, 62,130, Dubuque 36,296, Davenport 35,254; Sioux City 33,111, Council Bluffs 25,802 and Cedar Rapids, 25,656. The cencus of 1860 gave Hancock county 179 inhabitants, that of 1890 7,621, and 1900, 13,752, That is, as before stated, an increase of 70.4 pct. in the last decade.

Amsterdam,	899,
Avery,	885,
Bingham,	587,
Britt,	1,545,
Concord,	1,829
Crystal,	7,18,
Ell,	756,
Elkington,	941,
Erin,	516,
Garfield,	588,
German,	616,
Madison,	652,
Magor,	995,
Orthel,	620,
TwinLakes,	549,

The towns of Hancock county in the order of their population are: Garner 1,988; Britt 1,540, Corwith 651; Klemme 262; Goodell 254, and Crystall Lake 246.—Corwith Hustler.

Athletic Exercises.

The investigation of the Booz hazing business at West Point places that national institution before us in unenviable light. Must we educate our children to be sluggers and prize fighters in order to have them educated as "officers and gentleman?" A thorough overhauling of that institution from the tops to the bottom is wanted, and demanded at once by the American people from the Atlantic the Pacific. The educators of the American schools and colleges have gone "athletic mad" it begins at the school at home, where a game of foot ball is introduced in which the life of every contestant is in more danger every instant from start to finish than it would be in the regular army in actual battle. The ancients who left their children out exposed to the elements to inure them to hardships and make them tough used better judgment than we do They weeded out the weak and saved only the strong, while they were babes and saved the expense of raising them to almost man's estate before beginning the weeding precess. Muscular exercise is no doubt a good thing for a student, but a cord of 4 foot wood and a hucksaw will beat all the foot ball games on earth for "chest development," and a chance to milk a half dozen cows, and then chase the brindle steer over nine plowed fields before breakfast will develope calves and "incite to leg action" to beat all the foot ball games that were ever. If our educators would teach muscular exercise that would be practical in bread winning contest instead of something to fill our hospitals, and leave an army of cripples, they would come nearer to earning their salaries from West Point down to common school.—Britt Tribune.

At the JOSTEN—RENZIEHAUSEN wedding in Monona on Jan. 1st, 40 guests, relatives of the contracting parties and personal friends of the family, witnessed the happy event. Among the relatives present were brothers of the groom, Erick, Peter and wife, and Henry Josten of Klemme, Miss Ella Arnold, neice of the bride, Klemme.

The bride was attired in white taffetta silk trimmed with crepe du chime applique and ribbons. In her hair she wore white roses and carried in her hand a bunch of white roses. The bridegroom was dressed in the conventional black. The maid of honor was Miss Minnie Renziehausen. The best man was Mr. Erick Josten.

One of the pleasing events of the occasion was the reciept of a telegram signed by a number of citizens of Klemme tendering their congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Josten, an evidence of the high esteem in which both are held by friends and associates in Klemme where Mr. Josten is engaged in the art of photography and where his wife conducted a millinery and dressmaking apartment for the past few years.

Mr, and Mrs. Josten will remain in Monona and vicinity for a short time returning to Klemme by the first of March which will be their home.

A host of good friends extend hearty congratulations with the sincere hope that their union may bring forth the happiest of results, the richest of blessing their reward, and joys without number attend them all along the matrimonial pathway.

The above is re-written farm the Monona Leader. As we were pressed for both time and space we were unable to eulogize and elaborate as we would have liked to do. However the important points in the write-up are here embellished and you have them on their merits.

A TRUE TALE.

Concerning Englishman Who Had Never Seen American Dried Apples.

An English gentleman relates an amusing incident in connection with his first visit to this country about a quarter of a century ago. The steamer upon which he had taken passage having put into port at St. John, N. B., our friend took the opportunity to go on shore for an hour or two.

He wandered about, regarding his surroundings with curious interest. Presently he came to a quaint little shop, with diamond-shaped, low windows, wherein were displayed numerous jars, containing cakes, candies and other sweets. Two jars in particular attracted his attention, for the reason that they were filled with eatables—presumably—with which our traveler was unacquainted.

Entering the shop, he pointed to one of the jars in question, saying:

"Give me five cents' worth of that, please."

The little shopwoman, filling a bag of generous dimensions with the commodity indicated, passed it to the stranger. The latter, on sampling the purchase, was rather disappointed to find a tough, leathery substance, devoid of any characteristic flavor. But he heroically, pointing to another jar, demanded:

"Five cents' worth of that."

A smaller bag was filled from the jar now specified, and again the investigator tasted, discovering a vestigate... unpalatable hard, sugary compound, not ... but not greatly to his liking. He silently bore away his two packages. Once outside the shop, he began to consider how he might dispose of them.

Presently he espied a small boy seated on a doorstep, and he hastened to bestow upon him the mysterious purchases. The urchin received the donation with great gratification, and proceeded to polish off the contents of both bags, in the order of their size.

Having watched this disappearance, the visitor withdrew in a self-satisfied frame of mind. His satisfaction was considerably lessened, however, when, on his arrival in this country, he learned that his two purchases were respectively dried apples and maple sugar. Learning of the expansive properties of the former, he has ever since been haunted by grave apprehensions as to the probable fate of the youthful recipient of his bounty.—N. Y. Ledger.

AFRAID OF ANGELS.

Story Told of Little Boy Sent to Bed in the Dark.

Jamie is just as manly as the rest of the small boys on our block, and I fancy he has as many black eyes to his credit as most youngsters of his age, but he does not like to go to bed in the dark. At least that is the way he puts it. It isn't that he is afraid; not at all, but he does not like the dark, and therefore an adoring mother has respected his idiosyncrasy and paid the gas bill cheerfully. But when Jamie arrived at the dignity of a tenth birthday she concluded that it was time to institute a long-deferred reform, and so, filled with birthday cake and despair, Jamie was left in solitude and darkness. But before she turned off the gas his mother, hoping to cheer her disconsolate son, told him that no one need be afraid of the dark, because the angels were always ready to protect one. Jamie listened, cynical and unconvinced, but ready to hear any story that would defer the awful moment when the light should go out. Fifteen minutes later, from her station on the stairway, where she was tearfully meditating on the cruelty of reform methods, his mother heard his voice and crept softly upstairs to listen at the open door. The room was as black as midnight, but from the bedclothes in muffled tones came the moan:

"Mebby it's so, but it beats everything how afraid I am of angels."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Brokers for Bridal Couples.

Marriage brokers are a regular institution in Italy. In Genoa there are regular marriage brokers, who have pocket books filled with the names of the marriageable girls of the different classes, with notes of their figures, personal attractions, fortune, and other circumstances. These brokers go about endeavoring to arrange connections, in the same off-hand mercantile manner which they would bring to bear upon a purely business transaction, and when they succeed they get a commission of two or three per cent. upon the portion, with such extras or bonuses as may be voluntarily bestowed by the party.

EASTERN OFFICE BELVIDERE

"I am so Glad you are well, Dear Sister."

This picture tells its own story of sisterly affection. The older girl, just budding into womanhood, has suffered greatly with those irregularities and menstrual difficulties which sap the life of so many young women.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system.

Could anything prove more clearly the efficiency of Mrs. Pinkham's Medicine than the following strong statement of Grace Stansbury?

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was a sufferer from female weakness for about a year and a half. I have tried doctors and patent medicines, but nothing helped me. I underwent the horrors of local treatment, but received no benefit. My ailment was pronounced ulceration of the womb.

I suffered from intense pains in the womb and ovaries, and the backache was dreadful. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form. Finally, I grew so weak I had to keep my bed. The pains were so hard as to almost cause spasms. When I could endure the pains no longer, I was given morphine. My memory grew short and I gave up all hope of getting well. Thus I dragged along. To please my sister I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her answer came, but meantime I was taken worse and was under the doctor's care for a while.

"After reading Mrs. Pinkham's letter, I concluded to try her medicine. After taking two bottles I felt much better; but after using six bottles I was cured. All of my friends think my cure almost miraculous. I thank you very much for your timely advice and wish you prosperity in your noble work, for surely it is a blessing to broken-down women. I have full and complete faith in the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound."—GRACE B. STANSBURY, Herington, Kansas.

SOME SECTIONAL FEELING.

Southern Representatives Make Passionate Speeches

ON SUFFRAGE QUALIFICATIONS.

Army Bill Discussed in the Senate—The Philippine Question Thrashed Over at Great Length — Frank H. Parsons Favors Government Ownership.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—Passionate speeches were delivered in the house by several southern representatives against the Olmstead resolution, which the [illegible] attempt to revive sectional feeling. During the discussion it developed that there is no state in the union that does not violate the fourteenth amendment to the constitution by imposing some suffrage qualification in addition to that specified by congress as entitling a citizen to vote. After reference of the Olmstead resolution to the census committee the house took up the reapportionment bill. Mr. Hopkins sought to secure by unanimous consent an agreement for a general debate until next Tuesday at 2 o'clock, but Representative Mann of Chicago, in the absence of Representative Crumpacker (Ind.), who he thought should be present when an agreement was reached, objected. It is expected, however, that the house will pass a reapportionment bill next Tuesday.

For five hours the senate discussed the army reorganization bill. The debate took a wide range at times, but was confined principally to the question of the necessity for the increase in the regular army provided for in the pending measure. The Philippine question was thrashed over at great length, but few really new points were advanced. It was urged by the supporters of the army bill that the situation in the Philippines demanded the increase of the army proposed. This was controverted by the opposition senators, who, while they were willing in a general way to provide for such temporary force as might be needful, were vigorously opposed to the creation of a permanent standing army of 100,000 men.

Speeches were made by Carter (Mont.), Teller (Col.), Hoar (Mass.), Stewart (Nev.) and Caffery (La.). One of the sharpest colloquies of the session was between Mr. Carter and Mr. Wellington (Md.), and in the course of it the Alaskan boundary dispute was brought forward prominently, the Maryland senator charging that the president had relinquished sovereignty over territory the title to which he maintained was vested clearly in the United States. Mr. Hoar advanced a proposition to create a commission to be composed of all shades of political opinion to investigate the entire Philippine question and report its findings to congress in order that a basis might be formed for intelligent action. Some slight progress was made toward the completion of the pending measure.

Promotion for Col. Campbell.

The president sent to the senate the nomination of Lieut.-Col. James R. Campbell of McLeansboro, now with the 30th infantry, to be a brigadier-general. Col. Campbell at the outbreak of the Spanish war was a member of congress from the 20th Illinois district.

MAY HAVE TO WHIP VENEZUELA.

United States in Danger of Imbroglio Over an Asphalt Concession.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—Apprehension is felt in official circles that the controversy which has arisen over asphalt-lake concessions in Venezuela may require the United States forcibly to intervene. It may be stated on the highest authority that the president has no intention of interfering between the rival claimants to the concessionaires of their property until a judicial decision has been rendered in support of this action. In case of an armed conflict the United States will have to act, and it is in anticipation of this contingency that three warships were ordered to La Guayra. The navy department received a cablegram from Commander Sargent of the Scorpion, announcing the arrival of that ship at La Guayra, Venezuela.

China Pays in "Raised" Notes.

Shanghai, Jan. 7.—China is again convicted of duplicity in dealing with the foreigners. Recently the Chinese government paid to the foreign consuls here sums of money for idemnity for the missions destroyed by the Boxers at She-Klung. It has been ascertained that many of the banknotes had been "raised." Five pound notes were converted into fifteen pound notes and ten pound notes raised to 100.

Quick Freeze Catches Swans.

Berlin, Jan. 7.—It is zero weather here. The Spree was frozen over so suddenly that the ice inclosed thirteen of the city's swans and the fire department was called out to release them.

Des Moines, January 7, 1901.

The packing house plant, owned by Harry West, was sold on the last day of the century to F. M. Hubbell, Sons & Co. The Hubbells will hold the plant for a tenant, and will endeavor to connect with one of the prospective renters with whom Mr. West has been in correspondence. "We shall not attempt to operate the plant ourselves," said Mr. Hubbell. "The plant will simply be held by us, as it has been held in the past by Mr. West, ready for any tenant who may want to open up the packing business in Des Moines."

The supreme court has handed down a decision of vast importance to temperance people who are fighting saloons in the little towns. In substance, it is held that the canvass of names to a statement of consent must be made from the poll books and that when the town is small and only a part of a precinct, where votes are cast at a general election, there is no poll books showing separately the voters of that town. In such a case the petition of consent is not valid. The case is entitled Hill vs Gleisher and is originally from the Winneshiek county court.

Judge McPherson of the federal court has handed down a decision in the case of R. S. C. Davis, administrator of the estate of S. T. Davis, deceased, in which the question of whether or not a bankrupt may be compelled to give an account of his assets and liabilities after he has received a discharge through fraud is decided. The court holds that in a case of that character when he has evidence sufficient to show a bankrupt to have held back a portion of his assets, plaintiff is entitled to another investigation.

Former State Senator Lathrop has applied to the state executive council for authority to proceed to the collection of about $375,000, which it is claimed the general government owes Iowa as interest upon the funds which she used to fit out her troops during the civil war. The state used about $300,000 during that period, most of which went to this purpose. This money was worth, then, 6 per cent. The government refunded to the states the principal of these funds, but, as in the case of the Spanish war, did not pay interest. This interest, it is computed, amounted to about $375,000 on that portion of the funds used for the troops, directly, for the principal was not refunded for twenty-five years. Auditor of State Merriam has had the correspondence with Senator Lathrop in charge, and will bring the matter before the state executive council. Mr. Lathrop represents that he has Washington connections which will be able to present the state's position there, and he is confident that the state can recover this money. He wishes authority to proceed to collect it. So far it has been found impossible to compute, accurately, the amount which the state invested in the purposes outlined, and it is not yet known whether the government had ever refunded interest on these funds or not. The matter will be taken up at once and pushed, if it is determined by the state authorities that there is a color of right in the proposition. The state is also awaiting $55,000 which the government owes us on account of funds expended on account of the Spanish war. The interest on this quarter of a million at 4 per cent would have amounted to about $15,000.

A Des Moines lawyer has called attention to the following extract from a chapter on legislative intent in a work entitled, "Outline of Criminal Law and Procedure," written by Justice Emlin McClain while he was chancellor of the University law school:

"Legislative Intent.—It is but putting the rule, requiring the purpose of the statute to be considered, in another form to say that the legislative intent is to ascertain and follow. This is the primary object of a l rules of construction or interpretation. When that is made plain by the signs or indications which the law regards as authoritative, there is no further room for such rules to operate. Where the language is clear and explicit, and susceptible of but one meaning, and there is nothing incongruous in the act, a court is bound to suppose the legislature intended what the language imports. 1 Bl. Cow., 59 and Cooley's note."

The attorney thinks that inasmuch as McClain is one of the three disinterested judges who will pass on the case, this little extract from a work of his own preparation and from which he has been engaged in teaching for years may indicate the way he will lean in preparing his opinion on the Titus amendment.

"The post will be named Fort Des Moines," Captain Hull said in an interview here. "That much has been decided upon, though no official action has been taken yet, and probably will not be for some little time. But there is no question about the name. Letters from Des Moines men, including P. M. Casady and Hoyt Sherman, were forwarded to the secretary of war, and Secretary Root added his own recommendation to the request of the Des Moines men that the post be named Fort Des Moines." Congress names the post.

She fully believed in her own reasoning. Harvey was not so confident. He did not understand Mrs. Atherton's silence and complete withdrawal from the scene of action, and Phebe's passivity was incomprehensible. Secretly he was dissatisfied with the position in which he was placed toward his mother, and there were hours when he longed for the old loving confidence that once seemed unassailable.

Helen was quick to detect these moods, and almost as quick to dissipate them. An artful word, the narration of an incident that put Gladys in the guise of an oppressor, and his spirit again rose rebelliously. He was not a boy in leading strings, to be imposed upon and held in check even by his mother—not he! Not he, indeed! echoed Helen. And he held himself very erect as he caught Delilah's cajoling look, poor Harvey, and thought himself a fine, independent fellow.

Meanwhile, Gladys was undergoing one of the revulsions of feeling that are inevitable with mercurial persons who enjoy or suffer keenly. After having for years considered only others, she now thought little of anything save herself, and the plans, lately decided upon, that would perhaps revolutionize her life, and she and her two servants were busy every hour that she might the sooner carry them out.

Slighted love will enable any proud woman to free herself from a bondage of the affections, and Gladys was harder in her pride than most, for her character was not free from an alloy of vanity. After a few days of unrestrained grief, she rose, one morning, pale but cheerful, resolved to cast Harvey from the innermost shrine of her heart, and give him the place he had voluntarily chosen. From that moment life took on a new aspect for her, and slowly, but surely, the past began to recede into the night of things forgotten.

In the flush of her new hopes and schemes she seemed more like the girl of old than she had for years. She laughed and sang, and darted about her rooms like a humming bird, Phebe said, delight in her eyes. She could not understand the suddenness and the completeness of the change; there was no mercury in honest Tomlinson's mental make up; but she dimly comprehended that after an age of self-suppression Gladys' free self was coming to the surface, and a new era of feeling had begun.

One day Helen received the long-expected summons to Mrs. Atherton's room. She was glad it had come at last; nothing would be gained by idle talk, but when everything was explained and definitely understood, life would be pleasanter for all concerned. Harvey missed his mother, and for policy's sake a reconciliation was desirable; it could be easily effected, now that Gladys had indicated a wish to come to terms. And she obeyed the summons promptly, determined to bring the interview to a successful issue as soon as possible.

She expected to find Mrs. Atherton pale and weak, with the inertia of an invalid; but Gladys' convalescence had been rapid, and she looked even better than she had before her illness. She was fully dressed, and Annette had arranged her hair in the latest style, which chanced to be especially becoming to her delicate beauty. Even Helen felt that it was absurd to affect to consider this radiant woman feeble or incapabale.

"I was not prepared to find you so well," she said rather awkwardly, when the greetings were over.

"No? Oh, I am quite myself again; the rest has done me good, and smoothed away incipient wrinkles," answered Gladys. Her tone was conventional, as if she addressed an acquaintance. "I suppose you know why I have sent for you?'

An old feeling of doubt kept Helen silent. She was no longer sure that she did know. This fashionably dressed woman, with the superficial cordiality of manner that holds others aloof more surely than the coldest reserve, seemed a stranger to her. She felt she was not of her world, and the thought gave her an uncomfortable sense of insecurity.

"There seems to be a little difficulty about the household keys," Gladys resumed. "I understand that you wish to deliver them to me in person."

"Yes, if you have fully decided to claim them," said Helen, quickly. "But I hope, as does my husband, that you will leave them in my hands. I am sure you will approve of my methods if you take the trouble to look into them."

"I detest petty details, as you know. You have been very kind to interest yourself in my affairs during my illness, and I hope you will oblige me further by accepting this check for $500," Gladys carelessly pushed the scrap of paper toward her caller and smiled as Helen, with involuntary eagerness, took possession of it, murmuring her thanks. "This closes the matter as far as I am concerned—that is, when you return the keys."

CHAPTER IX.

Helen paused a few moments before answering.

"I really do not feel justified in resigning them until we have talked the subject thoroughly over, Mrs. Atherton, and come to an understanding concerning our general future. This should have been done when my husband came of age. It is true you have told him that he has no direct claim upon your money; but he is one of his grandfather's heirs, and in passing him over the old man committed an act of injustice which we hope you are too honorable to perpetuate."

Gladys bit her lip to prevent herself from making a sharp reply. This self-conscious young woman, with her cut and dried platitudes and implicit belief in her own virtues, brought every bit of evil in her to the surface.

"No doubt you reason correctly from your point of view, but you are not informed concerning the facts," she said calmly. "To return to the matter in hand, it is absolutely necessary for Tomlinson to have the keys, because I am going to New York immediately, and there is packing to be done."

"Going to New York?" Helen almost gasped in her surprise. "Isn't the decision very sudden?"

"Yes. It was made on the day Harvey wrote me that note—you of course remember it." The two looked at each other full, each reading the thoughts of the other. "I should probably have gone eventually, however, for life is too quiet for me here, and I want to enter society again."

"Then your visit will be a long one?"

"I hardly know when I shall return."

Helen looked relieved.

"In that case, we need not go into anything that is past. If you are going away, the changes I have made in the establishment—and believe me, I intended them for the best—will no longer affect you."

Gladys smiled, and the smile troubled her daughter-in-law exceedingly.

"You do not understand. The house will be closed when I go and the furniture sent after me. I do not care to keep up two establishments."

"You intend to close the house!" Helen cried.

"Yes. Saunders and his wife will have charge of it for the present. The other servants, to whom Tomlinson has been paying board wages during my illness—an unnecessary expense occasioned by your kind interest in my affairs—will go to the city with me or follow me there."

"Do you mean to say that Phebe took the liberty of paying wages to the servants I discharged?" Helen demanded, her fine eyes blazing.

"Oh, no—to the servants you dispensed with; she did not recognize your right to discharge them. So you see that instead of lessening my expenses by your considerate kindness, you materially increased them. Fortunately, it does not matter; I have plenty of ready money in hand."

Nothing could be more careless than Gladys' tone. She spoke as though she had scarcely a passing interest in the subject discussed, and met Helen's amazed look with calm indifference.

"I can hardly tell you how much all this surprises and shocks me," said the younger woman, after a pause. "It would have been only fair for Phebe to take me into her confidence, and so avoid such wicked waste."

"Money is never wasted," said Gladys, in a languidly philosophical tone. "Wherever expended it does good to somebody. The spendthrift is always a benefactor, though he may not be his own. We are apt to take a narrow view of this broad question, and regard as wasted the good we do not individually enjoy. None the less it fulfills its mission somewhere, more worthily, perhaps, than when with us."

Helen looked bewildered to hear her butterfly talk in such wide measure. There was no room in her neatly docketed brain for so large and impersonal a truth. She felt she was not keeping the upper hand at this interview, so carefully arranged in advance, and said with less than her customary assurance:

"I can't believe you really intend to shut up the house, Mrs. Atherton. What is to become of Harvey?"

"Oh, my friend, I leave him in your hands; you have shown yourself so well able to manage his affairs that I shall not even offer a suggestion."

Under the circumstances the words were cruel; but there is a touch of the tiger in every woman outraged by ingratitude and injustice, and Gladys was very human.

Helen could not speak. She put her hand to her throat to still its telltale throbbing.

"I leave it with you to tell your husband my decision," Gladys continued, undisturbed by her silent rage. "He can readily find other quarters within a month. Phebe will remain here for a few weeks to superintend the packing of the furniture and close the house. By that time you will be settled somewhere. The furniture in your own rooms and the nursery, with Harvey's piano, books, pictures, easel, everything, in short, that he accumulated during his boyhood and youth I regard as his and Phebe will see that it is sent to you. I think there is nothing more to be said."

A few moments of silence ensued; then Helen said in a choked tone:

"So this is your revenge—this my reward—"

"Don't waste words" Gladys broke in, "not talk fustian. I am only doing what I should have done when Harvey married. I wanted to go to the city then; but I had a foolish idea that I was necessary to him, and so remained. Now I find I am not necessary, and count for nothing in his life, I intend to take myself out of it."

Do you know I fancy you worshipful wives construe that passage rather too literally?" said Gladys, in the half philosophical, half mocking way Helen found new in her, and which held her at an impassable distance. "No one will deny that when a man marries a woman he should forsake all other strange women, and keep to the one he has chosen, or who has chosen him; but there is no reason why he should forsake his kindred of either sex. This Harvey seems to have done, however, and he cannot complain when the forsaken follow his lead."

"And is it possible that you have so little natural affection for your only son that you can coolly leave him to poverty while you, his mother, are rolling in wealth?"

"Fustian again, Helen. Twelve hundred dollars a year is not poverty. In Rockville it is a competence. You are an excellent housekeeper; you managed your father's house on much less."

The color deepened in Helen's face; her father's limited means had always been a sore spot with her. Her good sense, however, told her that it would be unwise to lose her temper.

"You will make Harvey an allowance? You surely do not expect us to live on his salary?"

"I expect nothing; I advise nothing. I have not the right, for henceforth I shall do nothing unless he should come to real want, which is almost impossible. The events of the past year have convinced me that it is better for him to depend upon himself, and work for the money you both so much desire. With your help he may eventually become a rich man. At the worst, the struggle will be morally strengthening."

There was no longer any indifference in Mrs. Atherton's tone. She spoke seriously, without anger, yet firmly, as one who through reasoning had reached a just and unalterable decision.

"It is true I have money enough and to spare. But the lonely days I have endured since Harvey's marriage have suggested a probability long ago discarded—that of my own. In view of it, you can readily understand why, even were there no other reason, I prefer to keep control of my property."

Helen's face was a study. Gladys' arguments were unanswerable, but she could not, would not, believe that her own cause was lost.

"I will bring Harvey to you," she said faintly. "This affair cannot be settled between you and me. There are other things to be considered."

"Do as you please; but my resolve, precipitated by your own action, is taken. However, as I leave early in the morning, perhaps I'd better bid my son good-by tonight. There is no need of your being present at the interview. I prefer to see him alone."

"That you may poison his mind against me?" cried Helen, instantly on the defensive. "No, Mrs. Atherton, I will not trust you with my dear husband. God, who reads all hearts, knows I have tried to do my duty only. That I have blundered is because I have been treacherously dealt with. But I will fight for his right to the last."

"Be careful; you know not what you may do," replied Gladys, earnestly.

"I will, at least, try to undo the evil I have done," said Helen, a break in her voice, and then she was gone, and Gladys, with a fluttering heart, awaited her return with Harvey. A great dread was upon her; she felt that the hour she had foreseen all her life was near at hand, and the sacrifice of years had availed nothing.

To talk about Prince Charming may be all very well, but a girl stands a much better chance of matrimonial happiness if she picks out a plain, everyday man, who can earn enough to pay the rent and store bills.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, JAN. 13—MATTHEW, 21. 1-17.

The Triumphal Entry Into the City—"Blessed Is He That Cometh in the Name of the Lord—Matt. 21-9—The Coming Announcement.

Vs. 1-7. The events of the two days, which form the subject of this lesson, are very dramatic in form, and are pictured before us in a series of vivid scenes. They all bore upon one purpose, the presentation of Jesus to the people as their Messiah, although not long before he had refused when they tried to make him king (John 6: 15). Note many indications that point to this purpose. The first is the emphasis that both Mark (10: 32) and Luke (19: 28) put on the fact that Jesus "went before them" on his way to Jerusalem. They were going into danger and death, and the true Leader stood in the forefront. "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen." Sunday morning, the day after their Sabbath, in the evening of which Jesus had been anointed, he left Bethany, and soon came to the neighboring village of Bethphage. Here he sent two of his disciples to bring him an ass's colt, which probably belonged to one of his known friends. He designated the place by miraculous knowledge. (Another note pointing to his Messiahship.)

6. "The disciples . . . did (even) as Jesus commanded them." As a King he had the loving obedience of his subjects.

7. "The ass, and the colt." "Whereon yet never man sat" (Luke). The untrained colt could be led and ridden more easily when accompanied by the mother. Says Canan Tristam. "Put on them their clothes." Outer garments. As was frequently done in place of a saddle.

8. "And a very great multitude." Rather, "the most part of the multitude," for there were some cold and scowling critics (Luke 19: 39, 40). There were crowds of pilgrims from all parts of the country coming up to the Passover festival. "Spread their garments in the way." "This was a recognized act of homage to a king. So Jehu, when the officers of the army of Israel chose him as their ruler, walked upon the garments which they spread beneath his feet. "Others cut down branches." The imperfect tense denotes continued action.

9. "The multitudes that wen before, and that followed." "Two vast streams of people met on that day." "Cried, saying, Hosanna." "Hosanna" is a rendering into Greek letters of the Hebrew words, "Save, we pray!" (Psa. 118: 25); not save us, but save the king. "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Sent and approved and foretold by the Lord, his Messiah. "Hosanna in the highest." In the highest degree; in the highest strains; in the highest heavens. Putting together all the records, we see how manifold were the shuts of triumph.

10. "Come into Jerusalem." The royal city of the Jews. "All the city was moved." Stirred, shaken as by an earthquake or a storm. "Who is this?" Is this the Messiah who comes proclaiming himself a king?

11. "This is Jesus the prophet of (from) Nazareth." The answer was true, but only a part of the truth. Jesus is revealed in a new light to most of them. This prophet from Nazareth now stood before the nation as the Messiah.

12. "Jesus went into the temple of God." As he had done when a boy of twelve years. "Cast out." Now at the end of his ministry, as he did at the beginning (John 2: 13-17). "All them that sold and bought in the temple." In the court of the Gentiles was the temple market, where animals, oil, wine, and other things necessary for sacrifices and temple worship were sold for the convenience of pilgrims who came from all parts of the world to offer sacrifices at the Passover season, and who could not bring their offerings with them. "Tables of the moneychangers," who were necessary because the pilgrims came from all over the civilized world, and the temple tax must be paid in Jewish money. "Sold doves" for the sacrifices.

13. "It is written." Isa. 56: 7; Jer. 7: 11. In their seeming worship they were destroying the very soul of worship, and robbing God's house of its usefulness. Hence they "made it a den of thieves." They not only robbed God, but were dishonest in their business transactions.

Mystery of a Lost Ring.

I was told a true lost-ring story the other day which I believe has never been in print, although such may be the case. A well-known society woman suddenly missed a valuable diamond ring from her finger. It was a ring she seldom removed, but all that could be remembered about it was that she had just washed her hands. Fearing it had slipped off in the operation the plumber was quickly called in and all the traps opened, with the faint hope of finding the jewel, but without avail, and sorrow reigned in the household, for the diamond was not only intrinsically valuable, but a dearly prized souvenir. Some time later the set bowl in the bathroom had to be replaced, and when it was removed, lo and behold, crowded in behind the water pipes was the skeleton of a mouse, and round the skeleton's thread of a neck hung a diamond ring. Identification was immediate and the mystery quickly cleared up by the poor little beast. He had feasted on a box of bran which milady kept to whiten her fair hands and into which she undoubtedly dropped the ring. Mousie, through vanity or accident, slipped it over his head, but in trying to escape with the loot he died a felon's death.

One of John Brougham's Jokes.

At the close of a performance given as a benefit to John Brougham, the actor and dramatist, one of the audience threw upon the stage a purse of gold. Brougham picked it up and after examining it said: "Ladies and gentlemen, circumstances compel me to pocket the insult, but" (looking grim) "I should like to see the man who would dare to repeat it."

Of law there can be no less acknowledged than that her voice is the harmony of the world.—Rich. Hooker.

The New Cup Defender

Now being built, is confidently expected to be the fastest sailing vessel ever built. Its construction is being kept a secret, but it is whispered that it will easily hold the cup. America is rapidly coming to the front. A good example of this is in that famous household remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has defended health for half a century past. It holds the record for the cure of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, nervousness, biliousness and la grippe.

Eight men with green hair have been discovered by a Berlin professor among 300 laborers who constantly handle copper. The phenomenon is one that it takes years to produce.

A conductor was dismissed from a street car company in Chicago a short time ago for an unpardonable neglect of duty. A child was born in his car and he became so nervous and excited that he forgot to collect its fare.

Huge aples are raised in British Columbia. At an agricultural fair in Kamloops Dr. Isaac L. Wood, of Plymouth, Mass., saw an apple which weighed twenty-nine ounces. He brought home with him as samples one which measured fifteen and three-quarter inches in circumference and weighs twenty-three ounces, and another almost as large.

A Delaware miner lost his dinner in a peculiar way. The articles which were to form the substantials of his noonday meal were steaming merrily in the oven and on the stove. He had a stick of dynamite which was frozen, and to thaw it he laid it carefully on the range. In a few minutes the dinner and the stove were flying in all directions of the compass.

A VETERAN SPEAKS.

The Honorable Moses B. Crane of Tacoma, Wash., Tells How Old Soldiers May Help Themselves.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 5, 1901.—(Special.)—"I used to have Heart Disease, but thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills I now have Heart's Ease.

"Five years ago I was a continual sufferer of Heart Disease. Exposure during the war, and a tendency to grow over fleshy, had greatly aggravated this dread disease. I often had to sit up half the night. I had it so bad when I would lie down. Life looked pretty blue to me, as I thought there was no relief, until one day I read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought a box that same day, and it was the best day's work I ever did. Before I had used all the first box I could eat and sleep better than I had done for many years, and after three months' faithful treatment, my health was completely restored. I am an old man now, but my step is as elastic and my brain as clear as when I was thirty years of age."

These are the words of the Hon. Moses B. Crane, secretary of Odin Lodge, No. 123, I. O. O. F. of this city. The Hon. Mr. Crane is also Senior Vice-Commander of G. A. R. Post No. 5, Tacoma.

Those who know Mr. Crane have the fullest confidence in his honesty and truthfulness, and know that he would not give this unsolicited testimonial unless he had actually experienced the relief which he indicates in his letter. Dodd's Kidney Pills are having a wonderful sale among Mr. Crane's friends—and their name is legion—in this part of the country. There does not seem to be a single case of Heart Disease, Kidney or Bladder Weakness, or Rheumatism, that Dodd's Kidney Pills do not permanently cure.

"Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground," says Shakespeare's character on the storm-smitten vessel. The Elysee Palace hotel, at Paris, is so largely patronized by English people that when, just before the arrival of President Kruger, his agent, Dr. Leyds, andeavored to secure rooms for him there, the managers refused to let him have them at any price, with the result that President Kruger was forced to take up his abode elsewhere.

Now Buffalo contributes to the divorce scandals of the country. A divorce "mill" has been discovered there, which has secured with secrecy and celerity by means of deception, bribery and intimidation. Scores of the cases have been uncontested. George Benjamin Clemenceau, now a "struggle-for-lifer" in Paris, earning a scant living with his pen, was ten years ago one of the foremost figures in French politics. Clemenceau was thrown up to the surface of affairs by the revolution of 1870, and from that time until 1891 he was as conspicuous as any character in Paris. Arising with the storm of the revolution, he sank in the excitement of the Panama affair.

Search for the casket containing the remains of Charles Coghlan has been abandoned at Galveston. The noted actor died there in November in 1899, and for some unknown reason the metallic casket containing the body was still in Galveston when the terrible tidal wave swept over the place September 8 last. The casket was swept from the receiving vault and is now believed to have been carried out to sea.

In Vienna there is a school for waiters. The first course is devoted to a theoretical exposition of the art of serving at table. When the pupils have sufficiently mastered the principles of the art, they are allowed to practice on two ladies and two gentlemen in evening dress who dine at one table. The professor watches the operation, and sharply calls the waiter to account if he uses an ordinary corkscrew instead of an automatic one, or carelessly puts his finger in the soup. If he should be without gloves, he is shown how to conceal the fact by means of the serviette, and so forth. There are 1,900 pupils in this school alone.

The east end of Paris, like that of London, is at present overrun with ruffians of the Hooligan type, who are known as "les ceintures bleues," because each wears a blue belt as the sign of his villainous associations. Last week opened with the arrest of several gangs, which consist of youths aged from 15 to 17 years, who are evidently a continuation of the masked robbers of Montreuil, at present awaiting trial. They employ women as decoys, and their practice is to make midnight attacks on villas and shops, using considerable violence when opposition is offered to their depredations. Scores of extra police have been drafted into the district, and it is hoped the end of Parisian Hooliganism is nigh.

A secret society called the Home Makers has a large membership among the foreigners in the mining districts of Pennsylvania. The purpose of the organization is to provide and maintain pleasant homes for its members and those dependent upon them, and as gossipy, careless wives and mothers are held by them to be the cause of a majority of the unhappy, ill-kept homes and neglected children, the society believes the members have a right to use every possible means to see that their homes ar not neglected. A member who corrects his wife by beating her must do so only after all other means to induce her to do her duty have failed. The society pays for the defense of its members when arrested for wife beating, and in case of conviction pays the fine.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

MRS. WRIGHT DEMANDS PAY.

Surprises Iowa Insurance Men by Coming to This State.

Des Moines, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Wright, arrested at Pagosa Springs, Colo., for the alleged murder of George Barber, on suspicion that the crime was committed for the purpose of securing the amount of insurance policies held by the Annuity Life association of Des Moines and a similar institution at Sioux City, and who was afterwards released, has shown her hand. She has written a letter to the Annuity association, demanding the amount of the policy and intimating that if it is not paid at once there is trouble in store for the association. The exact contents of the letter are not disclosed, but enough is known to form an idea of the substance said to be in the nature of a threat.

When Mrs. Wright and the man Neff, who was with her at the time Barber so mysteriously died, were released it was believed she would make no application for the payment of the policies and the letter received by Manager Baker of the Annuity Life comes in the character of a direct surprise. Parties interested in the case were of the opinion Wright and Neff would not dare to enter Iowa and make their whereabouts known to the associations.

The fact that the letter was post marked at an Iowa station, and the further fact that there is no attempt being made to keep the matter quiet is an evidence that they are not afraid of prosecution either by the Annuity Life or the association at Sioux City.

COULDN'T PRODUCE THE TICKET

Vinton Man Fails to Get the Sioux City Mansion.

Sioux City, Jan. 6.—It transpires that B. M. Bills, of Vinton, who was thought to hold the ticket which won the John Pierce mansion, is not the lucky man. The ticket is held by W. T. Barber, a millionaire thread manufacturer, whose home is in New York City. Through an error, the lucky number 35,365, was registered as having been sold to Bills. It has since developed that the number lies among other tickets sold to Barber and held for him here in Sioux City. Bills has been unable to produce a ticket of that number. Barber has filed a claim for the house. The same took place the day before Christmas. The mansion and the property on which it stands cost about $60,000. It has the finest house in Sioux City.

SUIT FOR A LARGE AMOUNT.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company Defendants.

Clinton, Jan. 4.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has just been made defendant here in one of the largest suits ever filed in the district court in this county. The plaintiff in the case is W. F. McFarland, administrator of the estate of his son, Noah J. McFarland, who was killed in a wreck while acting as fireman on the Milwaukee road, at Sabula, November 18, 1900. The father, through his attorney, T. W. Hall, sues for damages to the amount of $35,229. Young McFarland was but 19 year of age at the time of his death.

HULL AGAINST THE BILL.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Even if the ship subsidy bill passes the senate, it will meet with fierce opposition in the house, for about twenty-five republicans there are planning to delay its passage. Speaker Henderson is said to be one of them. Representatives Burton of Ohio, Hemenway of Indiana, Overstreet of Indiana, Hull of Iowa and Crumpacker of Indiana are arrayed openly against the measure. They know the others who are to fight the bill and who for reasons of personal policy are for the present keeping in the background.

Alleged Fraud in School Books

Fort Dodge, Jan. 5.—A conscienceless school book agent has been doing an extensive business in the counties of northern Iowa by getting contracts from school boards adopting his books for five years. He tells all kinds of fairy stories about his books, one of which is that the county superintendent endorses them. It is said that, not satisfied with lies, he offers pecuniary inducements to the school boards. He has secured five year contracts from dozens of school boards in the different counties in this vicinity. At a recent teachers' convention a discussion of the agent's tactics disclosed the swindling misrepresentations of the agent, and several school boards are seeking an annulment of their five-year contracts.

Davenport, Jan. 5.—The widow of James Coleman, killed in the recent disaster at the glucose factory, has brought suit against the company for $20,000 damages, based on the verdict of the coroner's jury.

Burglars at Clinton.

Osceola, Jan. 4.—William Ford, an old resident of this city, was instantly killed while crossing the railroad tracks at Groveland, a small station near here.

ACTION IN JONES CASE.

Notice of Served in Polk County by Attorney General Remley.

Des Moines, Jan. 5.—Attorney General Remley took action in the Jones case. On behalf of the state he brings action in the district court against Clerk C. T. Jones of the supreme court and his bondsmen to recover $6,336 and interest and costs. Mr. Remley was requested by the executive council to bring suit for such an amount as would protect the interests of the state. He has not sued for as large an amount as it has been charged by State Treasurer Herriott Mr. Jones ought to be compelled to refund. The $6,336 is supposed to represent fees received by Mr. Jones for copying opinions of the supreme court for the West Publishing Co. and others and never turned in to the state treasury. It includes no other classes of fees.

FOR A UNITED FIGHT.

Efforts to Combine Incumbent Officers in One Test Struggle.

Sioux City, Jan. 4.—At a conference here between the Sioux County officials who are trying to hold their places under the Titus amendment entanglement and their attorneys it was decided to unite all of the incumbent officials in the state in a fight against the officers who were elected at the last general election The plan is to concentrate the best legal talent available in one case and make it a test. The promoters of the movement have already had considerable correspondence with county officials elsewhere and they expect to carry out their plan. They hope to save endless expense and also hasten the adjudication of the EXPLOSION IN IOWA MINE.

Three Men Killed and a Number Injured at Cleveland.

Chariton, Jan. 7.—The mine at Cleveland, No. 4, was the scene of an explosion that caused the death of three men and the serious injury of several more, besides considerable loss of property. Shortly after the day shift had left the shaft W. A. Bennett went into the mines where ten men were still at work and the blaze from his miner's cap exploded the gas, killing him, Mr. Duncan and W. E. Junkins instantly and injuring several others. The mine caught fire, but was extinguished. The property loss is not yet known.

Young Horsethief Arrested.

Ft. Dodge, Jan. 7.—Fred Nelson of Lehigh was arrested at the home of his sweetheart at Mondamin, on the charge of horse stealing, and was held to the grand jury on bonds of $1,000 this morning. Nelson stole his father's horse, brought it to Fort Dodge, and sold it for $30 to W. H Arthur of this city. His father reclaimed the horse and the matter was placed in the hands of the sheriff, who located the culprit at Mondamin after a long search. The case has aroused much excitement at Lehigh, because the young man is well connected, and this is his first offense.

Epidemic of Smallpox.

Ottumwa, Jan. 5.—Fourteen cases of smallpox in the town of Lost Creek, a village of 600 inhabitants, is the fact that is alarming this city and county, and prompt measures will be taken to confine the disease, if possible, to that locality. Dr. T. J. McKelveen, a member of the state board of health, visited the place, and instead of one case he found fourteen, with nearly the entire 600 inhabitants exposed. Tomorrow he, in connection with the other members of the board, will take stringent measures to prevent an epidemic.

Big Blaze at Garner.

Mason City, Jan. 5.—Fire was discovered in the First National bank block at Garver and before the fire department got it checked the opera house block, the finest three-story block, was in ruins. The First National loses $15,000 on the building, covered by $7,000 insurance, and $1,000 on fixtures. McMahon's drug store, valued at $6,000, was covered with $4,000 insurance and the Mallock Fair store, worth $4,000, was insured for $2,000. Two small store buildings near by were wrecked by falling walls, but there were no casualties.

Was Scalded to Death.

Marshalltown, Jan. 7.—August Och, a German boiler cleaner in the employ of the Glucose Sugar Refining company, after suffering untold agonies as the result of scalds received while at work, died in the Getz hospital. Och was engaged at the time of the accident in cleaning one of the big boilers. He had raked out a large quantity of live coals and hot cinders, and in cooling them turned on too large a stream of water. The result was that he was enveloped in steam and gas and scalded from his head to his feet.

$15,000 Collected.

Mt. Pleasant, Jan. 3.—Judge McCoy of Oskaloosa, a member of the tax collecting firm of McCoy & McCoy, has been here closing up the business of collecting back taxes for the county a year ago. It is not known how much has been paid in through his efforts, but some place it as high as $15,000. His firm had contracts in Henry, Jefferson, Monroe, Mahaska Poweshiek and Washington counties during the past year.

DIRECT ACTION FAVORED.

America's Attitude as to Chinese Indemnity.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The state department is making a strong effort to secure an understanding among the powers to serve as a basis for adjustment of the question of indemnity to be paid by the Chinese government. It appears from Mr. Conger's reports that it is hopeless to expect the foreign ministers at Peking to reach an agreement on this important subject, and if the problem is to be solved at all, it must be removed from the Peking council and dealt with by direct diplomatic exchange as was successfully attempted in the case of the preceding serious difference between the ministers. Therefore the state department is in correspondence with other foreign offices respecting the subject, though the negotiations have not proceeded to a point where it can be said that a successful termination is in sight. The principal difficulty in the way is believed to be the enormous indemnity demanded by some of the powers.

The efforts of the Chinese government to secure better terms, so far as they tend to protract the negotiations, are also expected to have the result of adding considerably to the sum total which must be paid in the end. This is because the expense of maintaining the foreign military establishments in China probably will be assessed against the Chinese government, and the cost of keeping foreign troops in Peking at this season of the year, and in a country where every necessary of life has to be transported from a distance, will make the bill very heavy. It is believed that the bill of Germany will be by far the largest, and it is a significant fact that the German government has allowed its officers on service in China five-fold their regular salaries, a rate of pay hitherto unknown in military history. The Chinese, however, are expected to pay for this.

WELCOME TO ROBERTS.

All London Greeted Him—Entertained at Buckingham Palace.

London, Jan. 4.—Lord Roberts yesyear's absence in South Africa. The on his return to London after a years abscence in South Africa. The crowds were not so dense nor so demonstrative as during the recent war celebrations, but people paid from three to eight guineas for seats on Piccadillyand St. James street balconies. Stately mansions like Aspley house, Lord Rothchild's and the Duke of Devonshire's were crowded with notable personages, but there prevailed on all sides a feeling that the progress of the campaign did not warrant triumphal ovations, though this in no respect detracted from the affection with which the little field marshal was greeted. It was as a man rather than as a general that London welcomed "Bobs."

Lord Roberts was met at the station by the Prince of Wales and many prominent men, and the party proceeded to Buckingham palace by way of Hyde Park and Piccadilly The general received a continuous ovation en route. After inspecting the guards Lord Roberts was entertained at luncheon at Buckingham palace.

ANXIETY AT CAPETOWN.

Boers Moving in Parallel Columns, Sweeping the Country.

Cape Town, Jan. 4.—The military authorities are preparing for all contingencies. It has been decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

Farmers coming in from Carnavor describe the Boers as traveling in parallel columns with numerous flanking parties sweeping the country of horses, plundering loyalists and carrying off everything eatable. It appears that they are accompanied by strings of pack horses lightly loaded.

Colesburg telegraphs that Kritzinger's commando is crossing the Middleburg, but is getting few, if any, recruits.

The commercial companies have asked the mayor to call a mass meeting to urge the government to suppress the disloyal newspapers and to proclaim martial law.

Cape Town, Jan. 4.—A station master of the Frazerburg road has seized a number of cases marked "condensed milk," addressed to Frazerburg, which contained 3,000 split bullets, 500 detonators and 150 pounds of dynamite.

AGUINALDO AGAIN DEAD.

This Time the Report Is Considered Reliable.

New York, Jan. 5.—Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, who is now staying at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, has received information from secret sources in the Philippines to the effect that Aguinaldo is dead and that his death occurred not less than six weeks ago. The news has been kept secret by Aguinaldo's followers, it is said, for the purpose of prolonging the rebellion, since it is believed that the news of the chief's death would cause such discouragement and alarm that an utter capitulation would result. President Wheeler obtained the news through several Filipino children who have been placed in his care by their parents. Two are sons of Buencamino, a wealthy citizen of Manila, who before the advent of the Americans in the Philippines had been an active leader of the rebellion against the Spanish.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY DEAD.

Suddenly Expires While Visiting His Father-in-Law.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 2.—Ignatius Donnelly, politician, author sage, aged 70, died at 12:03 this morning. The eminent Minneapolitan was taken suddenly ill last night, while visiting at the home of his father-in-law, Batren Hansen, 3027 Twenty-eighth avenue South. From the first Mr. Donnelly sank steadily and soon became unconscious. Dr Murphy was summoned and when he arrived the sick man was still unconscious. The doctor pronounced it heart failure, and stated early in the evening that there was little chance of the patient's recovery Later Mr. Donnelly passed away surrounded by a number of his relatives. From the first they had understood that he could not live, as he was advanced in years, being nearly 70 years in age. He died without regaining consciousness.

ROBERTS MADE AN EARL.

Queen Bestows Honors on the Returning General.

Cowes, Jan. 3.—The queen bestowed an earldom on Lord Roberts with a special remainder for his daughters. He was also made a knight of the garter.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 3.—The steamer Canada, having Field Marshal Lord Roberts on board, anchored off Osborne yesterday.

The ships in the roads were gaily decorated, the sea front was elaborately decorated with bunting and Venetian masts with festoons adorned the route to the Osborne House, at the entrance of which was erected a unique tribute of the queen's appreciation of the field marshal's work, in the shape of an arch of laurel. This was the first time such an arch had ever appeared there in honor of any subject of her majesty.

The field marshal landed from the royal launch at 3:30 p. m., which was the signal for deafening shouts of welcome. Princess Beatrice, in her capacity as governor of the Isle of Wight, and the Duke of Connaught, representing the queen, awaited Lord Roberts, whose arm was still in a sling as the result of being thrown from his horse in South Africa. He was warmly greeted and the party started in royal carriages for Osborne House. After a hearty reception in the council chamber of her majesty's residence by a number of princes and princesses, Lord Roberts was ushered into the presence of the queen. His audience of her majesty was quite private.

Replying to the addresses at the town hall, Lord Roberts said he regretted that his reception was not accompanied by immediate peace, but, he added, while he feared hostilities would continue for some time, he had implicit confidence in Lord Kitchener and had no fear regarding the outcome. He concluded with an eulogy to the magnificent army of Great Britain, all the components of which, he pointed out, pulled together splendidly.

KRUPP FIELD GUNS TAKEN.

German Troops Capture Chinese War Implements.

Tien-Tsin, Jan. 7.—The German expedition which started Christmas for Tien-Cheng-Hsu, under command of Colonel Greuder, has returned. Colonel Greuder reports the capture of forty-three Krupp field guns and the destruction of 2,000 rifles and large quantities of ammunition.

Paris, Jan. 7.—The foreign office is advised from Shanghai, under date of January 3, that advices from Sian-Hu confirms the report of the execution of Yu-Hsien (the former governor of Shan-Hai, guilty of massacreing about fifty missionaries whom he had invited to accept protection under his care) December 19 by order of the dowager empress. Prince Tuan is still at Ning-Hia.

New York, Jan. 7.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: "Your correspondent has obtained copies of important decrees issued by the czar of Russia which go to show that the St. Petersburg government contemplates no departure from the policy of evacuating Manchuria as soon as circumstances permit. These decrees, which are in the form of instructions to military and naval commanders, further show that the czar has been strenuous in his efforts to prevent looting or ill-treatment of the inhabitants of the territory occupied by his troops.

Shanghai, Jan. 7.—A dispatch received here from Tien-Tsin says Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has ordered his staff to cease hostilities, but that some of the commanders have not been informed of these instructions. It is explained that they are in the field after the Boxers.

Lee, Wilson and Shafter to Retire.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The senate committee on military affairs has agreed to accept the amendment suggested by Senator Daniel to the army reorganization bill for the retirement of General Fitzhugh Lee and General James H. Wilson as brigadier generals, and also agreed to an amendment for the retirement of General Shafter as a major general.

Serious Troubles in Turkey.

Constantinople, Jan. 5.—In the course of a serious affray near Ishtib originating in an attempt to arrest a number of Bulgarians suspected of being emissaries to the Macedonian committee, eight soldiers were killed. The troubles continue.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senate—The subsidy bill was today displaced from its position as "unfinished business" by the army reorganization bill. During the discussion of the army measure, the opposition members indicated that their line of attack upon the bill would be against the creation of a large, permanent standing army. There was an intimation that objection would not be offered to a temporary measure to provide an adequate force to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines. Beyond this point, today's proceedings developed nothing.

House—The radical element among the house republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the southern states in which franchise is abridged, suffered defeat today because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. Olmstead of Pennsylvania offered a resolution reciting the alleged abridgement of suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, North Carolina and directing the committee on census to investigate and report the facts to the house in order that a constitutional basis or representation could be established for those states. When it finally came to a vote it was defeated, 81 to 83. The story of the defeat is found in the absentees on both sides who were unpaired. Thirty-two republicans were absent and unpaired against the opposition.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Senate—For five hours today the senate discussed the army reorganization bill. The debate took a wide range at times, but was confined principally to the question of the necessity for the increase in the regular army provided for in the impending measure. Hoar advanced a proposition to create a commission to be composed of all shades of political opinion to investigate the entire Philippine question and report its findings to congress, in order that a basis might be formed for intelligent action. The following resolution from the committee on foreign relations was adopted:

"That it is the opinion of this body the time has come when the principle, twice affirmed in international treaties for Central Africa, that native races should be protected against the destructive traffic in intoxicants should be extended to all uncivilized peoples by the enactment of such laws and the making of such treaties as will effectually prohibit the sale by the signatory powers to aboriginal tribes and uncivilized races of opium and intoxicating beverages."

House—The house had another spirited struggle over the Olmstead resolution to investigate the abridgement of the suffrage in certain southern states with a view to reapportionment upon the actual basis of suffrage. It was finally referred to the census committee where the opposition desired it to go originally. The reapportionment bill was debated at length.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Senate—While the senate was in session for more than three hours today little in the way of important legislation was accomplished. The committee amendments to the army reorganization bill, to which no objection had been raised, were agreed to, but none of the contested amendments were considered. Dilatory tactics were employed by Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, to prevent the consideration of matters that would advance the business of the senate.

House—The feature of the debate upon the reapportionment bill in the house today was a two hour speech of Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, in favor of the Burleigh bill to increase the membership of the house to 386. He had a number of sharp exchanges with Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, chairman of the census committee, in which he sustained his reputation as a hard hitter and vigorous debater.

ROOT ON PHILIPPINE WAR.

Says That He Did Not Predict an Early End.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senators Proctor and Burrows, of the senate military committee had a long conference with the Secretary Root at the war department in regard to the military situation in the Philippines, with special application to the bill providing for an increase of the regular army now under consideration in the senate. Just before the conference the secretary talked with a number of newspaper men. In the course of the conservation he said there was no foundation for the statement published in some newspapers that the troubles in the Philippines would end with the re-election of President McKinley. He explained that he had always avoided the making of predictions in any matter and he certainly had never made the prediction in question about the speedy termination of the Philippine troubles. The nearest he had ever come to doing so was in his last annual report to the president, when he summed up the military requirements in the Philippines as demanding 60,000 men for the immediate future, though this number might be progressively decreased by the restoration of order, the creation of a native police and the use of native troops in place of Americans. We should require permanently an army of about 60,000 American troops, he said, and during the present conditions in Cuba and the Philippines, about the present number, 100,000 would be required.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the U. S. Treasury Recommends Peruna.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, Medical Examiner of U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systematic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does. Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is not a guess nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

A free book written by Dr. Hartman, on the subject of catarrh in its different phases and stages, will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

Insomnia Wrecks the Nerves.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA Makes Health.

INSOMNIA is a forerunner of nervous prostration; what organism is strong enough to stand up under the strain of sleepless nights? It is plain that nothing in the world can possibly take the place of restful sleep, yet many try to eke out an existence without this sustaining power. Their nerves are in such a state of tension that sleep is an impossibility, or at best is a series of hideous dreams. It is not strange that physical and mental weakness, amounting soon to complete prostration, follows inability to sleep. There is no let-up to the strain. Vital forces are drawn upon, confirmed invalidism results.

The recuperative power of natural sleep is wonderful. Complete physical and mental exhaustion gives place, after a few hours of quiet slumber, to a full renewal of energy. The fatigue of body and mind disappears entirely while all the muscles are strong and the nerves absolutely calm.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

Sleep is the indication given by Nature as a guide to human plans to restore health. It shows that there are inherent in the wonderful human organism powers of recuperation which must have opportunity to assert themselves. Based on this clear demonstration, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was constructed by Dr. Greene to help Nature combat the ills that attack men and women. What no amount of powerful drugs could possibly accomplish, can be successfully and promptly effected by healthy blood and nerves, the kind of blood which flows in strengthening flood to every portion of the body, the condition of nerves which permits awakened Nature to seize its opportunity to restore to perfect health.

Mrs. FLORENCE TAYLOR, of 4 Courtland Place, Bridgeport, Conn., writes:

"For four years I was troubled with nervous debility and hysteria in a most aggravated form. It caused sleeplessness and mental depression, and for months I was confined to my bed. My constitution wasted and I totally lost my appetite. I had many doctors, but they failed to give me any relief. I was advised to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I was in a terrible condition when I began its use, and almost immediately there was a wonderful change came over me. I regained my appetite, the dizziness in my head departed; it renewed my interest in life and made me feel, in fact, like another person. After taking six bottles I thankfully proclaimed myself strong and well. Those six bottles did for me what hundreds of dollars and numerous physicians failed to do."

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the Remedy that Cures.

Mr. A. B. Shafer informs us that the Minneapolis Mining Co. of which he is president has sunk a 60 foot shaft and is making rapid strides toward success in the oil business. He says a sample left with the State University of Minnesota has proven to be the best sample of the crude coal oil that has been tested, being twenty five per cent better and above any other test. Mr. Shafer left Monday A. M. for Minneapolis for a few days from where he will proceed to the mine in Missouri.

The big brick building known as the Syndicate block of Garner was destroyed by fire. The fire is supposed to have started in the basement from the coal, which of itself became heated and caused what is known as "spontaneous combustion." The building if we are not mistaken cost originally about $11,000. The First National Bank, the Baas & McMahan drug store, the Fair general merchandise. the opera house, a lodge room and club room were located in this building, A great amount of the stocks of the business enterprises located therein were saved however, and the loss falls largely upon those owning the block. We are not informed as to weather or not insurance was carried.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof, Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and even Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

One of our exchanges reports that a carload of coal which came into their town during a recent famine was unloaded in just three hours.

"That sounds to me,
That sounds to me
That sounds to me,
Like a lie." (Tune: Old Grimes) But perhaps it is so.

The Klemme Market quotations for last week were right up to the notch, our merchants were paying $4.60 per hundred for hogs. We notice the Garner Herald quotations for hogs is $4.25. Thus you find a differance of 40 cents to Klemme's credit on the hog market. Whoop'ee! Klemme against Chicago and the west!

The following letter handed to us by A. B. Shafer proves conclusively that the Minneapolis Mining & Development Co. has a good thing.

"Nov. 23rd, 1900.

Dear Sir:—I have just completed the analysis of the oil left by you for examination a day or two since and beg leave to make the following report:

The oil under examination dark brown and of a thick viscal nature.

Specific gravity at 20 pct. C. 0.9342. Ash (Organic matter) 0.13 per cent.

Flashing Point 154 C. or 309 F.
Fire test 175 C. or 347 F.
Water held mechanically 1 pct.
Proportion of Asphaltic substance 30. per ct.

The quantity was too small to make a careful estimate of the light and heavy oils by fractional distillations and these could only be estimated approximately. It is possible that the asphaltic matter will run a little higher than 30 per cent.

The county printing has been let for another year. The board last week looked up the largest circulation in the county among the leading papers and found that the Britt Tribune had 804 bona fide subscribers. This means that the exchanges, complimentories, and 3 and 6 months subscribers were all cut out of the Tribune's list. The Britt News then comes with 860 subscribers, which takes in everything, exchanges, complimentaries and 3 and 6 month subscribers, thereby beating the Tribune by 56 subscribers. The Hancock Democrat has the largest list in the county, over 900, which we hear, from good athoritative scources is a list like that of the News. The Democrat and the Tribune have secured the county printing—the Tribune having its list weeded and cleaned in proper order to make a good impression As the board has the right to seek further and outside evidence in this regard they awarded the Tribune thusly in preference to the News and they aught to receive at least one credit mark. That, according to our way of thinking is the proper way to submit a subscription list to anyone wanting proof of circulation.

A Clever Scheme

A firm at Toronto, Ont., has just made a pile of money by a clever advertising dodge. They adeertised "On receipt of $1 we will send, securly sealed, a beautiful bound book of four hundred ages. full of good things. Every sport should have one. The most wonderful book ever written. French and English translation. Prohibited in some countries. Write at once." The detective department, scenting the circulation of improper literature, sent a dollar and received a 15 cent Bible. They did not interfer with the sale not caring to curtial the propagation of the gospel.—Kanawha Record.

GREAT TOPICS.

THE WOMEN'S SUFFERAGE QUESTION.

Now that the women are pushing to the front and trying to gain a hold on the affairs of the government by the use of the ballot we think it is about time we all of us—are up and doing some hing either for the good of their cause or for the bad of it. What does a women want to vote for anyway? Does she not suffer enough anyway without wanting to tax her mind with the thoughts of a politican? This political business is more than a woman can stand up under—she will have something to do besides vote. There's the lectioneering to do, the influence to wield, the arguring to do to win recruits for her side, and whoever heard of a woman arguring without getting mad. They do it every time—get mad—of course. Some one said they have a God-given faculty of calling things by their right names—as they are—not as they seem or appear to be—as they actually are and exist. Its funny and queer why they do this—but they do—call things by their right names. There is one blessed consolation left for the men however and that is when the women get to voting they will indict themselves to being called by their right names. Wouldn't it be awful to call some of them that way—by their right names. In time they will undoubtedly learn like the children do to "do as the Romans do" in such matters. If they want to be in polities they must be politicians! One can't always some times tell perhaps they would get to be just like the men—in this politic business. They will want to be in office—the women will—most assuredly. They will want to be Presidents, Senators and Representatives. Congressmen in general will be their watchword. That is alright. The three former they can be, but the latter they cannot be. Congressman! That takes a man. They will have to be congresswomen or stay out. If they manage to carve a way through the living mass of voters into the wall of the whitehouse and take their places as Congress-women what will become of their children? Will they take the whole scad of ten or fifteen to the day and night sessions both? The men cannot take care of these restless little creatures—the children we mean—they were not made for such heavy work—the men. Then the two sided politics of man and wife would serve to make a happy congenia past-time to be sure! A republican—a democrat—both the heads of a family. Perhaps the little Johnnies and Marries are thinking seriously of becoming middle-of-the-road "pops" and socialists respectively. Supposing John took after his father and his mother, too, wouldn't he be a fine speciman of the repdemopublicancrat, and the Marries would be the same thing presumably. To be sure when women get their right of sufferage, when they get the use of the ballot, when they get to be the political bosses it will mix things up in a most extraordinary manner.

Editor Bailey of the Britt Tribune says: Our advice would be different. If we told a man to not leave a stove on our farm and he persisted in leaving it, we would arrest him for trespassing in just 11 minutes by the watch and if there was to be any monkey business about that stove we would have it then and there, and we would be captain general of that farm or know the reason why.

The Reprint has it that, "Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Cooper went to Clear Leak where they enjoyed themselves hugely." This may be a huge piece of information but not very CLEAR. Anyway it wont hold water.

The board of Supervisors began their regular monthly session last Monday, Supervisor R. M. Day coming up from Klemme on that day to attend.

Fred Lenz and Dr. H. A. Richter of Klemme, came up to Garner Thursday evening to attend the Masonic Lodge which gave them an opportunity to see the big fire which occurred the same evening.—Garner Signal.

Farmers' Institute.

The Hancock County Farmers' Institute will hold its annual meeting about Feb. 27 at such place as the officers may select, and will be held in the town offering the best facilities for the meeting. It is expected that the town will furnish the free hall and entertain the speakers. The officers have engaged Henry Wallace of Des Moines and expect Joe Trigg of Rockford, with papers and short talks from local farmers and others. The president or secretary, F. B. Gliddon of Britt will be glad to hear from the citizens of any town in the county which desires to have the institute meeting. Early communications are requested so that the officers can select the place and have plenty of time to make all necessary arrangements.

A Most Liberal offer.

All our farmer readers should take advantake of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper The Iowa Home tead, it's special Farmer's Institute Editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.50. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throghout the West and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Iowa Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the West, The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer while the special Farmer's Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

LESSON III, JAN. 20, JOHN 12: 23-33.

Golden Text—"We Would See Jesus"—John 12:21—The Greeks Seek Wisdom from the Savior of the World — In the Temple.

23. "Jesus answered" to this feeling and expectation. "Them," the desciples and the Greeks, in the presence of the people. Yes, he says, "The hour is come." The long-expected time is at hand. "That the Son of Man should be glorified." His real glory manifested, his reign begun, his royalty acknowledged, his high position as the Messiah recognized, the redemption of the world entered upon.

24. "Verily, verily," words emphasizing a great and important statement. Jesus brings the truth before them by an illustration. "Except a corn (grain) of wheat fall into the ground and die," etc. A grain of wheat, though containing in itself the germs of life and possibilities of vast harvests, yet remains alone, unless, planted in the earth, it dies in giving birth to the plant that grows from it.

25. "He that loveth," places first in his affections, "his life." The Greek word is often translated soul, as in v. 27. "Shall lose it." Lose all that makes life worth living; lose even the earthly rewards which he called his life, and, much more, eternal blessedness. "And he that hateth his life." Treats it, when it comes in conflict with his true life, as if he hated it in comparison; sacrifices, when need be, those outward things which are desirable and blessed in themselves, which worldly men seek chiefly, and which seem to make the life on earth happy and worth living,—honors, riches, pleasures, power. But note this is to be for Christ's sake and the gospel's (Mark 8:35). "Shall keep it unto life eternal." Life here is another word in the Greek, life in the abstract.

26. "If any man (would) serve me, let him follow me." Let him act out the above principle, as Christ had done and was about to do. This is Christ's answer to the request of the Greeks. "And where I am." In character, in glory, in his kingdom, in companionship on earth, and in heaven. "There shall also my servant be." There is no other way to where Christ is, and whosoever walks in this way will certainly come to where Christ is. "Him will my Father honor." As he honors Christ; making him partaker of the joys and rewards of him whom he serves.

27. "Now is my soul troubled." Agitated, like the sea in a storm. The word rendered "soul" is the same word as that rendered "life" in v. 25. (Compare especially Matt. 16: 25, 26.) It is the seat of the natural feelings and emotions. There was a real shrinking from the darkness of the death which was at hand.—Ellicott. Jesus found it difficult to live up to the principles he had just enunciated. If it had been easy for him, he would have been no example to his followers, who do find it difficult. "And what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour." That is, the agony of his trial and crucifixion. "For this cause." To fulfil the duties, and bear the agonies it brings, "came I unto this hour."

28. Therefore he will say something entirely different, even, "Father, glorify thy name." "Not my will, but thine be done." "Then came there a voice from heaven." The plain implication of the narrative is that this was an articulate voice, the words of which were understood by others than Jesus, though not by all.—Abbott. "I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again." The Father had glorified his name by giving Jesus daily and hourly the power to do and to bear all that had been laid on him up to that moment.

29. "Said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him." The whole multitude heard a noice; but the meaning of the voice was only perceived by each in proportion to his spiritual intelligence. Thus the wild beast perceives only a sound in the human voice; the trained animal discovers a meaning, a command, for example, which it immediately obeys; man alone discerns therein a thought.—Godet.

30. "Jesus answered" the discussion among the bystanders. "This voice came not because of me (for my sake)." The inward assurance was sufficient for his needs. "But for your sakes," including the Greeks who had come to see him.

31. "Now, (the hour of vs. 23, 27) is the judgment of this world," as representing all that is opposed to the kingdom of heaven and its principles. To an extent of which now we can form no conception, it was a world without God, plunged in idolatry, worshiping devils,—in open rebellion against God. "Now shall the prince of this world." The title "prince of this world" was the regular Rabbinic title for Satan.—Ellicott. It is perfectly natural that evil beings should exist in the spiritual world as they certainly do in this; and that some leading spirit should assume control, and organize the forces of evil, as is certainly done in this world. That being is called Satan, or the devil, the prince of this world. "Be cast out." "The 'casting out' is from his authority and power, or from the sphere and region in which he has borne sway."—Pres. T. Dwight.

32. "And I, if (contingent on his choice, but he had decided) I be lifted up." Upon the cross, as explained in the next verse. The word for lifted up is usually rendered "exalted." It was by the lifting up upon the cross that Jesus was exalted to be Prince and Savior. The Son of man was lifted up, like the serpent in the wilderness, that he might be seen. The cross brought Jesus into the notice of the world more than all his teachings and deeds of mercy could have done without it. It has ever since been the center of the world's history. "Will draw all men unto me." Or towards me. Christ crucified was and is the attractive power, drawing men to himself. All men. Not merely all nations, people of all ages, but all men. It does not mean that every one would become a Christian; for the facts at that very time refute such an idea; but he was attractive to human nature; even those who were opposed were drawn. They hated the light, but they could not help looking at it. And in the end the whole world will be drawn to Christ.

Prison Abjures Mince Pies.

Current gossip avers that the Charlestown state prison has abjured mince pie as a steady diet for the prisoners because the medical experts declare that it impairs the health of the inmates and tends to increase the death rate.

It is better to take the worst of a deal than to suffer the consequences of a quarrel.

Many a man who imagines himself capable of ruling a great nation can't even keep his own children out of mischief.

The desire of the inhabitants of Sing Sing to change the name of the town recalls a somewhat similar desire on the part of the inhabitants of the town of Rugeley, England, to a correspondent of the New York Times. A man named Palmer had made Rugeley notorious by an atrocious murder, and a deputation of the inhabitants waited on the home secretary with a petition for leave to change the name. The minister hesitated, and asked what name they proposed to substitute. They replied that they had not decided. "What do you say," said he, "to taking my name?" They expressed their unqualified delight, and obtained the home secretary's consent to this method of obliterating the memory of the obnoxious Palmer. The home secretary in question was Lord Palmerston. The town is still known as Rugeley.

To Abolish the Whipping Post.

The law-makers are wrangling over the abolition of the whipping post. The man who succeeds in passing such a bill, will prove as great a benefactor to the breaker of man's laws as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has to the breaker of nature's laws. If you've neglected your stomach until indigestion, constipation, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles are upon you, there's but one cure, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Don't fail to try it for la grippe.

As he was discharging the jury in the superior court of Wilmington, Del., just before the holidays, Chief Justice Lore said that he hoped the members would have a pleasant Christmas and abstain from drinking whisky. Judge Spruance, who was sitting to the right of the chief justice, interposed and said: "That is not the unanimous charge of the court."

"When I was in Springfield, Abraham Lincoln and General Baker, who was killed at Leesburg, Va., during the civil war, made the race for the whig nomination for congress," says Dr. D. B. Hill. "Both were whigs, and both were keen for the nomination. Both had a strong personal following, and if both ran the democrat would win in the district. So a primary election was necessary to settle the contest. Baker won. Both men were at Springfield when the news came. Lincoln was depressed. The crowd, to cheer him up, called on him for a speech. Getting up, he said: 'Gentlemen, I'd like to comply with your request, but I can't make a speech now. I expected to receive the nomination, but I failed. If I had won I know Baker would have got up here and so charmed you with his eloquence as to make you believe you had done him a favor by nominating me. But I can't do it.'"

LIEUT. MABEL C. HUNT.

A Bright Salvation Army Lassie, Who Knows How to Keep Her Corps in Good Health.

Ogden, Utah, Jan. 12, 1901.—(Special.)—The Pacific Coast Division of the Salvation Army, whose noble work in the interests of fallen humanity has done so much for this western country, has its headquarters in this city. One of the brightest and most enthusiastic workers is Lieut. Miss Mabel Clarice Hunt. Everyone knows how these devoted people parade the streets day or night, exposing themselves to all kinds of weather, that no opportunity may be lost of rescuing some poor unfortunate from sin and suffering. In some cases, their recklessness in thus exposing themselves has been commented upon as almost suicidal. Their answer to such criticisms invariably is their unfailing faith in the Divine injunction to "do right and fear not." Lieut. Hunt explains one of the means she employs to keep her "Soldiers" in good health, as follows:

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills of great value in cases of Kidney and Liver Trouble and Diseases contracted from severe colds. Several of our lads and lassies have been repeatedly exposed to cold weather and rain, and have spoken for hours out of doors, often with wet feet and chilled to the marrow. As a consequence of this exposure, Pulmonary Trouble, Rheumatism and Kidney Disorders often ensue. In such cases I always advise Dodd's Kidney Pills, for I have noticed better results, quicker relief, and more lasting benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases than from all other medicines I know of combined. They cleanse the blood, regulate the system and destroy disease."

A medicine which can do what Lieut. Hunt says so positively Dodd's Kidney Pills do is surely worth the attention of all who suffer with any form of Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism, or Blood Disorders.

A man seldom loses the respect of others until he has lost his own.

Forsaking all Others

CHAPTER X.

Nearly half an hour passed before the married pair, looking formidable determined and united, presented themselves at her door, and in the interval she had forced herself into a cold calmness that enabled her to meet them composedly. Almost before they were seated Harvey, who seemed much excited, opened the subject uppermost in the minds of all.

"So you threaten to shut up the house and go to New York?" he angrily asked.

"It is an intention, Harvey, not a threat."

"And do you think I will submit to such a course, merely because you have chosen to quarrel with my wife, whose only offense has been her care for us both? You do not know me, madam."

"I am afraid I have never known you, Harvey."

"Perhaps not; you hadn't applied to my character the test of injustice and the most monstrous selfishness ever shown by mother to son!" he hotly retorted. Helen had made good use of her half hour. "You reared me with the expectation of sharing your property; but for that I should not have married. And now you coolly say that henceforth I must depend upon myself—I, who have been accustomed to every luxury!"

"I think you would have married in any case," said Gladys, in a tone that made his eyes waver for a moment. "It is as well; I do not fear for your future. You certainly have not suffered from my selfishness in the past."

"Don't you think the less you say about your past the better?" he asked, carried beyond all prudence, all kindness, by a burning sense of his wrongs.

For a full minute they looked steadily at each other; her womanly intuition enabled her to read the thoughts that owed their existence to Helen, and her weakened affection for him seemed to fall dead.

"If I live to be a hundred," she said slowly, her face hard with scorn, "I will never forgive you for that insult, even though I know it orginated with the woman who has so strangely perverted your moral nature. Your wickedness and covetousness deserve punishment, and it has overtaken you in the way you will feel most; for though you have no legal claim upon my money, I always intended to provide for you when you came of age, and should have carried out the intention, in spite of the fact that you married against my wish, had not your wife's character so soon revealed itself. Recent events have shown me that you are equally unworthy, and not a dollar of mine shall ever pass into your possession and hers unless you come to actual want."

A dead silence ensued. Both listeners saw that Mrs. Atherton was in earnest, and had been pushed too far, though righteously pushed; for they had so blinded themselves by specious reasoning that even now they would not admit they were wrong. It was Helen who broke the dreary pause.

"You hated me from the first," she said in a voice uneven with rage, "and have well calculated your revenge. You know I would die for Harvey, and by making me the apparent medium of his downfall, you try to inflict upon me the most harrowing of punishments. But here you fail, Gladys Atherton, for it is you who have been his ruin. You have scorned me, not in words, perhaps, but with meaning looks, for having decoyed him into marriage before your appointed time. I know how you regard my people—that, too, your looks have told. And what are you, pray, with all your pride? In the beginning a bold, pampered girl following the first man who though it worth his while to beckon her to shame, for aught she knew or cared, so that her fancy was gratified——"

"Harvey," cried Gladys, deadly pale, "bid this impious woman be silent. She is speaking of your mother."

"A mother to be proud of, truly!" exclaimed Helen, her eyes imperatively demanding Harvey's silence, though she spoke so fast and loud that he had no opportunity to interrupt her, even had he wished. "The wife of a drunkard and gambler, the widow of a criminal! I despise you, and so shall your son. Be very sure of that. But we'll have our right if we claim them in a court of law. I doubt if you have power to withhold what you call your money. How do we know your story is true? You were not squeamish in the past, when you had a purpose to serve, it appears. Why should you be over particular at this late day?"

"You have heard your wife, sir. I have no claim upon her affection, as on yours, and care nothing for her opinion unless you uphold her in it. Do you?"

"This is not the time for heroic speeches and professions of belief in virtues that never existed," he said sulkily, his eyes on Helen's prompting face. "We must recognize the fact that the person who marries unwisely entails certain consequences upon the children of the marriage for which he or she owes them compensation. Through you I am my grandfather's natural heir, and should not be robbed of my birthright. If I am covetous in urging a just claim, what then are you? In keeping control of your property you may be right by law, but you are acting dishonestly none the less. So far I fully agree with my wife."

With a low cry Gladys fell back in her chair. As if waiting for the signal, Phebe entered the room, a terrible old woman in her wrath.

"I am going to tell them the truth, Miss Gladys, whether you forbid it or not," she defiantly announced. "As Mr. Harvey says, this isn't the time for pretending, and I guess we can settle the matter out of court." Gladys put up a protesting hand, but she would not heed. "I'll make short work of it. You're wrong in thinking you have any sort of share in the mistress' property, Mr. Harvey, because her father, Joseph Stirling, your grandsire, didn't own a dollar in it. He married twice—first a poor girl who died when her baby was born; then a rich young heiress, who also died early in life leaving her money to her only child, Gladys, your aunt or half aunt; for you are the son of the daughter of the first marriage."

"My God! The mater is not my mother?" cried Harvey, after a stupefied pause. He sprang to his feet and gazed wildly from one face to the other, with the look of a man pierced to the heart. "Madam, madam, is this true?" he imploringly asked. Then, meeting Gladys' compassionate yet strangely cold look, with a half sob he threw himself into chair and buried his face in his hands, never moving until Phebe had finally ceased speaking.

Helen said nothing; her burning eyes were fixed on the housekeeper; she knew she told the truth, and that from the fair domain which had promised to be her garden of Eden, she was banished forever.

"You know how your mother married. Mr. Stirling swore he would never forgive her; but he was a just man, and sent her the money she would have had when she came of age. It didn't last long. Twenty thousand dollars isn't much in the hands of a gambler. And when it was gone he went too."

"Miss Gladys was at school when your poor mother begged her way to New York, her baby in her arms. She did not seek her father; she knew his unforgiving spirit, but she sent for me—I was in his service—from the hospital where she lay dying, and by her deathbed I promised never to forsake her child, and to hide him from her husband, Matthew Harvey, who would try to make use of the boy to get money from his young aunt, Gladys. He was bad enough for anything, she said. I had a little money saved, and put you to board with a woman I knew. I always had it in my mind to tell the master some day; but he had a heart trouble and I daresn't do it.

"I hadn't a chance to worry long, for in a few months after your motner died he fell dead in the street, without a moment's warning. Miss Gladys came home for the funeral, and after the first shock was over I told her everything. She had a tender heart, my lamb, and wouldn't rest till she had seen her poor sister's baby."

CHAPTER XI.

Phebe paused, overcome by sad memories. Gladys, unnerved by all that had passed, was crying, but not as the wholly desolate weep; she no longer strove to prevent her old friend from speaking.

"Your mother's sorrows had left their mark on you, Mr. Harvey; you were a sad little tot, with mournful eyes and atimorous manner. You ran to my dear young lady, attracted by her sweet voice, and hid your face in her gown, and when we left they had to drag you away; we heard your screams as the carriage drove off, and Miss Gladys sobbed all the way home. After that, the idea of your growing up among strangers, with no one to love you—just considered for the money you brought, mayhap—was terrible to her. We must take you far away to a corner in the west, where none would know us, and you'd be safe from your father. I begged her on my knees not to spoil her life; but she coaxed and argued and cried till she got the better of me, and we left New York unhindered, her having no relations.

"She put on widow's mourning, to make her look older and prevent explanations, and took your grandmother's family name. Your mother had given it you for a first name; it was easy to change it round.,

"Rockville was only a village then; people hadn't taken to coming here for their healths, and what are now streets were farms. It was just the place to be lost in, and until Mrs. Leonard's doctor sent here here last year, nobody but the family lawyer—Mrs. Leonard is his daughter—knew what had become of the pretty Miss Stirling. How much she has been to you, Mr. Harvey, you well know. She was only eighteen when she left New York, a light-hearted girl. Now she's turned thirty-six, with a great sorrow on her of your brewing. She'll get over it, for she's young yet. But you've made a strange return to her for wasted years!"

Not a word was spoken by either of the other three. Helen stole over to her husband and timidly laid her hand on his shoulder. All self-confidence was gone from her bearing; she seemed cowed and beaten; and for the first time her loving touch was unheeded. Phebe looked at her frowningly.

"Ay, comfort him if you can; he'll have need of it," she said in a hard tone. "If he comes to ruin he may thank you; but for your avarice and meddling he'd have had a good bit of money—a hundred thousand dollars, no less. He'll never have it now. Perhaps he'll not reproach you just yet for his loss, since he helped you out with the deviltry you called your duty. But he'll know it's to you he owes it—he wasn't full grown when you took him in hand, and easily led—and the thought will grow and grow until one day he'll despise you in his heart, and turn from the love that dragged him down."

As if that day had come, Helen moved nearer to her husband, the rich color ebbing even from her lips. Gladys half rose.

"Be merciful, Phebe," she gently remonstrated. "You are too hard. Go now, dear old friend; enough has been said."

Muttering still, Phebe lumbered away, furtively wiping her eyes; under her bristling exterior beat a warm heart, and, despite her anger, she felt for Harvey in his hour of darkness. As the door closed behind her he raised his head, revealing a white, wild face.

"I must speak to my—my aunt alone, Helen," he said hoarsely. "Leave us together."

MORE PLAY NEEDED.

Increasing Number of Poorly Developed Men and Women.

It used to be that boys and men who worked had shorter working hours and less work to do in the same time than do the men and boys of today. Consequently they had better opportunities and greater inclination for recreation of the healthiest kind. They felt able to rise in the morning early enough for gymnastics, their work the day before not being so irksome as to make them feel they needed every moment of sleep possible, as is often the case nowadays, and in the late afternoons and evenings they could could enjoy an athletic game. The girls some years ago exerted much less than they do now, their course of study usually being mild in comparison to the average of today, and few of them were in business or the professions. Therefore their need was less for strengthening exercises. Although the mental and physical work that the men and women of this generation do has greatly increased they do not seem to have realized that a counteracting force is absolutely necessary for the number is growing larger every day. We cannot help observing it on the streets and everywhere—of men and women who slouch along with drooping figure and dragging steps, the picture of undeveloped physical manhood and womanhood. There is nothing more pleasant to look upon than a strong, graceful, happy young man or woman and the last two qualities depend on the first and all three on physical exercise and development. Therefore, you know what you must do to be happy and attractive, and it is your duty to be all three. You can, of course, in varying degree and you ought to add much to the beauty of this old world whose fine men and women are its most splendid features.

American Books in Mexico.

Mexico buys more American books than does France, and nearly as many as Germany. Much of this trade is due to the large resident American population to be found in Mexican cities and to the demand from mining camps, where Americans are living, and not a little is due to the growing spread of English among the Mexican people. There is a strong tendency here in favor of popularizing the English language, and the learners of that tongue comprise professional men in middle life as well as thousands of youth. Some large institutions of learning have put English ahead of French.—Mexican Herald.

Estimates by the city's leading physicians place the number of Des Moines people who are ill with colds, grip, innuenza, etc., at 22,500 or thirty per cent of the population. The effects of the epidemic are felt in every branch of the city's life. In commercial circles it has been the cause of much grief. Business houses of all kinds, department stores, banks, insurance offices, and all other institutions which employ men and women have suffered. Interviews with employers and proprietors throughout the city show that over 10 per cent of the employes of all houses are kept from work by the disease, and many others affected but still at work. In the public schools the same condition prevails. At the West Des Moines high school five teachers and fifty pupils are out on account of severe colds. This is over 10 per cent of the total enrollment. About the same per cent is to be found in all the other schools of the city, barely half the pupils being present. Comparison with opening days in the schools on previous years indicate the cause is the influenza epidemic, as ordinarily the first day's attendance is good. The physicians say practically every patient they see at present is troubled with grip. In many instances an entire family is affected at the same time.

Three changes in state officers have just occurred. W. B. Martin succeeded G. L. Dodson as secretary of state, G. S. Gilbertson took John Herriott's place as state treasurer and Charles W. Mullan became attorney general, succeeding Milton Remley. Owing to the doubt of the effect of the Titus constitutional amendment, Messrs. Herriott and Dobson formally resigned their offices, and Governor Shaw appointed their successors and Mr. Mullan to the offices to which they were elected "to fill the vacancy, if any exists." Mr. Remley did not deem it necessary to resign.

If there was ever any doubt that Mayor Hartenbower possesses the power to close the gambling houses whenever he desires it, it is dispelled now. On the strength of an edict issued by him and delivered through Chief Mathis, every gambling house in Des Moines has been closed as tight as a drum. No raid was necessary. The proprietors of the different resorts that have been paying the city the monthly $200 for the sake of immunity were merely notified that they must close and they readily obeyed.

Adjutant General Byers has received telegrams from Nebraska and Wisconsin saying that the governors of those states will not be accompanied by a military escort to the inauguration at Washington, but will have their staffs only. General Byers made this inquiry before asking any of the companies to go. If any of them decide to go at their own expense they can be mobilized into an Iowa battalion and offered the committee on arrangements in Washington.

The Iowa hotel, the old Aborn, corner of Fourth street and Court avenue, was quarantined on the 11th by order of Secretary Kennedy, of the state board of health. About seventy-five persons, including the hotel employes, were in the building when the quarantine was ordered. Thirty of these were dismissed by City Physician Shiltz, after standing a test offered by the physician. They were required to show vaccination marks, and to swear before a notary public that the vaccination had taken effect within three years. The entire hotel building was thoroughly fumigated, and all of the inmates of the hotel, except those few who have come in contact with the patient, will probably be released by Dr. Schiltz after being vaccinated. The patient will be removed to the detention hospital.

Though not generally realized, there is more smallpox in Iowa now than ever before at the same season of the year. Dr. Kennedy, in an interview, said that since last October when cases first began to be reported this year in any considerable number, there had been at lowest estimates, 2,000 cases. In at least 150 localities in Iowa, there are cases of smallpox. The type of the disease is not considered malignant, yet there has been not less than fifty deaths in the state from this cause since last October. The disease is most prevalent in Hamilton, Webster and Boone counties. The danger to the health of the state at large consists in the fact that the contagion exists at so many different localities, each point where a person is sick with smallpox being a center from which the disease may easily radiate.

There is no knowing where the present widespread attack originated from. It appears to have been started from no single locality. All through the summer there were a few scattering cases in the state. In fact, since 1889, when the disease appeared at Storm Lake, smallpox has never been entirely stamped out of Iowa. The winter season is invariably the worst time for the disease, owing to the tendency of humanity to live gregariously and indoors.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

CHARGES AGAINST WARDEN.

Complaint Is Made to State Board of Control.

Anamosa, Jan. 14.—Charges of incompetency have been or will be preferred to the Iowa state board of control against W. A. Hunter, warden of the Iowa state prison at this place. These charges are in the form of sworn affidavits made by former guards and officers of the institution. The charges have not been made public, but an ex-officer who until recently held a responsible position at the prison, when interviewed in regard to the matter, said:

"The charges that have been preferred against Warden Hunter extend back for several years, and not only assert that the warden is incompetent to manage an institution of this character, but that he has shown partiality amongst the prisoners. The September grand jury made an investigation of an alleged case of cruelty, but not enough evidence was obtained to warrant the finding of an indictment."

Des Moines, Jan. 14.—Inquiry of the board of control in regard to the alleged charges has been made. It was given out that the sworn charges so far as they have reached the board have been not directly against Warden Hunter, but against Dr. Druit, the physician at the penitentiary. But one sworn statement has reached the board of control. This makes serious allegations against the physician, but reflects upon Warden Hunter only by virtue of the fact he appointed the physician in question. The board of control has not yet taken steps towards an investigation, as it is waiting to ascertain whether the parties, who have alleged grievances against the doctor or the warden, aside from the one who has already made an affidavit against Dr. Druit, are willing to make sworn statements. The board will pay no attention to anything but sworn statements, but expects to make an investigation of such charges as are preferred and backed up by affidavits.

HON. W. H. REDMAN DEAD.

Died Suddenly of Heart Disease at Newton.

Newton, Jan. 11.—Hon. W. H. Redman died suddenly at his home Wednesday night of heart disease. He returned from a trip to Grinnell, where he had been trying a law suit and was apparently in the best of health. He collapsed so suddenly that he was dead before medical assistance could arrive.

Deceased has long been prominent in Iowa politics. At last summer's republican state convention he was one of the leading candidates for secretary of state. He repeatedly held state office, was a member of the legislature and was speaker of the house of representatives. He served through the civil war with conspicuous honor. He was close to 60 years of age, but seemed strong for his years.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT DUBUQUE.

Elevator Cable Breaks and Three Men Are Badly Hurt.

Dubuque, Jan. 12.—The wire cable for the heavy freight elevator in Farley, Loetcher & Co.'s factory broke and the elevator fell three stories. Three men, B. Vogel, Charles Grode and Wm. Knapp, were on the platform and all were seriously injured, suffering broken bones and other injuries. Knapp had both feet crushed and back injured; Grode had a leg broken and Vogel bones in his feet broken. Knapp is in a critical condition.

Sues County for Damages.

Fort Dodge, Jan. 11.—F. J. Clump of Dickinson county has filed a petition in the district court claiming damages from Emmet county to the amount of $3,000 for injuries which he claims he sustained while crossing a bridge in Estherville last January. While he was driving across the bridge one of the horses caught his foot in a crack between two planks, became frightened, cramped the buggy and threw Mr. Clump out, injuring him quite severely. Mr. Clump later filed a bill claiming $500 from the county, but this was not allowed. He now claims that the injuries which he received were permanent and that he is a continual sufferer, and on this account sues for the amount mentioned. The county will dispute the case, which promises to be bitterly fought when it comes to trial.

Wanted to See Train Ditched.

Toledo, Jan. 12.—William Hack and William Jones have been arrested for attempting to wreck a train in order to see how it would look going into the ditch. This is the only reason they give. They have made a written confession, waived examination and are being held for the grand jury. The attempt was to wreck a Northwestern train by placing a boulder on the track. The pilot threw the stone and no damage was done.

Smallpox Closes the Schools.

Fort Dodge, Jan. 12.—Smallpox has broken out in all parts of Webster county and is causing considerable alarm. Two cases are reported near Vincent, northeast of here, and several families have been quarantined near Badger, about seven miles north of town. Several families have been quarantined with scarlet fever in all parts of the county and some of the schools in this and Humboldt county have been closed.

TITUS AMENDMENT DEAD

Judge Dewey of Washington County Strikes a Body Blow.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Judge Dewey knocked out the Titus amendment in the official test case brought by the attorney general in the Washington county court. The case was brought by County Attorney-elect M. W. Baily to oust James W. Brookhart, his predecessor, and was of a friendly nature. In an opinion of 10,000 words, Judge Dewey reviews the law in great detail and holds that the failure to fully spread the amendment on the record of the lower house was fatal. He also holds that the election shows popular sentiment was against the law as the number voting against it, and not voting, exceeds those voting for it. He holds in part:

"That is was not only the express wording of the law but the undoubted intent that the same was to be spread at length upon the record, is shown by the fact that this is the only legitimate source from which the people could be informed of what the legislature intended to ask the people to vote upon.

"From the provision of the law itself the expression, 'entered on the journal,' could in no sense be construed to mean anything but that which it so plainly expresses, that is, to set forth in full, as the law nowhere else provides for its preservation and for the sole reason that the world could know from some, and in this case the only authentic source, what the legislature asks the people to amend. If this is not true, the court asks with propriety, where could the enquirer go for authentic information? Not to the rolls. There is none provided for. Not to the caption or title of the act, because the law makes no provision for either title or caption.

"The same law provides that such proposed amendment shall be referred to the legislature to be shown at the next general election and shall be published as provided by law for three months previous to the time of making said choice."

CHARGES AGAINST PAT CROWE.

Claimed He Committed the Express Robbery at Burlington.

Burlington, Jan. 14.—A local evening paper prints a sensational story to the effect that Pat Crowe, of kidnaping fame, spent several weeks in Burlington last August, boarding with a family on South Hill, who have since recognized some of the published pictures of the much wanted man. It is claimed that Crowe was the man who planned and with the aid of an express messenger executed the robbery of a $20,000 express package en route from Chicago to the National State Bank in Burlington; that he learned of the regularity of the transmission of these packages of money and the date of arrival in Burlington of this particular package from an express messenger. He suddenly disappeared from his boarding place just about the time of the robbery. Supt. Swift, of the Adams Express Company, was in Burlington Saturday, and it is claimed he was here in the connection with this story.

Manning, Jan. 14.—Some twenty-five or more years ago there lived with his parents up in the country northwest of Manning, near the Five Mile House inn, Pat Crowe, aged 10 or 12 years. This is the same Pat Crowe—now a man—who is accused of being at the head of the gang which abducted the 15-year-old son of Edward Cudahy.

TITUS EXPECTS A REVERSAL.

Does Not Believe Judge Dewey's Decision Will Be Sustained.

Muscatine, Jan. 9.—Concerning the decision of Judge Dewey who ruled the Titus election amendment to the Iowa constitution unconstitutional, Senator Titus said: "I am not surprised at Judge Dewey's decision. He uses, to my mind, the same unreasonable language as in the prohibitory amendment case, and even goes further. His decision would make the clerk of the house or the secretary of the senate the law making power of the state. I feel confident the supreme court will follow the great weight of authority, and I look for a reversal by that tribunal on the 15th."

TAKES ISSUE WITH DEWEY.

Judge Hutchinson Sustains the Titus Amendment.

Sioux City, Jan. 11.—In a decision in a Cherokee county case yesterday Judge Hutchinson handed down an opinion on the Titus amendment that opposes Judge Dewey's opinion and holds the amendment to be valid. He construes, furthermore, the intent of the legislature, and holds that the officers elected last November are entitled to their places. The action arose through an effort to keep Daniel Unger, a newly elected member of the board of supervisors, from taking his seat. The board refused to accept him as a member, so he applied to the courts for help. Judge Hutchinson ruled today that he should have his place. The opinion sustains the Titus amendment at every point.

Died as Result of Joke.

Clinton, Jan. 12.—Some men at Charlotte, a small town in this county, induced Henry Hersberg, a farmer living two miles south of town to get on a broncho. Hersberg, who was intoxicated, got on the horse and started home. He was thrown off and killed. Hersberg was a well known farmer. The community is indignant over the affair. The man leaves a wife and two children.

KITCHENER RECOVERS RAILROAD

Invasion of Cape Colony Now Looks More Serious.

London, Jan. 12.—It is understood that Lord Kitchener now holds securely all the railroad lines in South Africa, having recovered the Delagoa Bay line, which had been cut January 7. According to the Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Mail, Lord Kitchener is now organizing a force of 30,000 irregular horse, which will occupy some weeks. When this force is ready he will resume offensive operations. Meanwhile the invasion of Cape Colony looks more threatening. The news that Commandant Hertzog has two guns is rather startling, as it was formerly asserted that the invadors had no guns. The defenses of Cape Town, including two 4.7 naval guns, are now completed, and the recruiting of volunteers is active throughout the colony. According to dispatches to the Daily Express, the admiral of the Cape fleet is prepared, in an emergency, to land a naval brigade of 2,000 men with six Hotchkiss guns. A Murraysburg telegram this morning says the Dutch there received the British troops sullenly, and it reports that there are rumors that the colonial rebels of the neighborhood are joining the invadors. The Pretoria correspondent of the Morning Post wires that a member of the burgher peace committee, whom he interviewed, frankly confessed that there was no hope of many burghers surrendering.

INVASION IS A MYSTERY

Great Britain Cannot Understand Boer Movements.

London, Jan. 14.—History fails to furnish a parallel to the Boer invasion of Cape Colony. A whole month has elapsed since the republicans crossed the Orange river, and still Great Britain knows next to nothing of their numbers, whereabouts or doings, and still less of the objects of the inroad. The only thing known with tolerable certainty is that they are progressing southward, over some sparsely inhabited tracts, where they escape observation. Other large bodies are traversing the very heart of the colony. The only logical explanation seems to be the largely accepted idea that the invasion forms part of a great organized scheme of that Napoleon of the war, General De Wet, to strike terror in the British colony, which, unquestionably, is nearly denuded of troops, and trust to the chapter of accidents to achieve such success as will enable the Boers to almost dictate the terms of peace.

The halting policy of the invaders, however, seems to threaten to defeat their aims and has enabled the hastily enrolled levies to volunteers to occupy vital strategic points. While there are some signs that the gathering of troops in the rear of the burghers is beginning to press them southward into the arms of the British moving from the seaboard, instead of attempting to drive them back again across the Orange river, where they might be enabled to rejoin General De Wet. In the meanwhile disquieting hints are arriving of the alarming rapidity with which the British army is wasting away. The long lists of dead, wounded and diseased bear out these stories, while there are abundant signs that the troops at the front are becoming stale and discontented, the general expression at home is becoming more acute and the public is becoming skeptical of the competency of the government to get the country out of the wretched tangle.

ABOLITIONIST FEE DEAD.

Anti-Slavery Exponent Passes Away in Kentucky.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—A special to the Tribune from Berea, Ky., says: John G. Fee, founder of Bera college, a famous abolitionist, died Friday night at his home and the scene of his life's labors, surrounded by his surviving daughter and grandchildren.

Mr. Fee was born in Bracken county, Kentucky, on September 9, 1816. His father was a slave owner. He studied in Augusta, Ky., college and Miami university, Oxford, Ohio, and entered Lane Theological seminary in 1842. Here he became an exponent of abolition, the result of prayer, as he tells in his autobiography. He decided then upon his life work. Fee's early years were tempestuous. His stanchest friend was Cassius M. Clay. He was more than once assaulted. Finally, in 1853, he came to Bera and formed a church, the land being acquired by General Clay. Then comes a story of mobs, of entreaties to leave and his decision to hold on. Finally there was born Bera college, open alike to black and white, where people have been educated regardless of color.

LATE NEWS FROM CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Senate—No legislative business of importance was transacted by the senate today. The session was devoted to services held in memory of the late Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota.

House—After an hour spent in miscellaneous routine business during the course of which several bills of minor importance were passed, the house devoted today to a continuation of the debate, in committee of the whole upon the river and harbor appropriation bill, which was interrupted yesterday by private bills. The main feature was an elaborate speech by Catchings in defense of the improvements of the lower Mississippi river.

PRELIMINARY NOTE IS SIGNED.

First Stage of the Negotiations Is Finally Completed.

Paris, Jan. 11.—As a result of inquiries in authoritative quarters, the Associated Press is given the following statement in regard to the Chinese situation: "The Chinese plenipotentiaries signed the joint note yesterday, thus concluding the preliminary stage of the negotiations."

It was added that this important step was insignificant compared with the difficulties to be met with between the powers themselves, whose clashing interests will have full play in the coming discussions.

BOTH LOST HEAVILY.

Boers Attack Several British Camps Simultaneously.

London, Jan. 11.—General Kitchener sends news of a serious simultaneous attack on the night of January 7 by the republicans on the British possessions between points sixty miles apart, along the line of the Pretoria and Lourenzo Marques railway. The losses on both sides were heavy. According to reports the Boers were beaten off after prolonged fighting. Following is the text of the dispatch from General Kitchener:

"Pretoria, Wednesday, Jan. 9.—On the night of January 7 the Boers made simultaneous and determined attacks upon all of our posts at Belfast, Wonderfontein, Nooitgedacht and Wilfontein. Intense fog prevailed and, taking advantage of the cover it afforded, the Boers were able to creep up close to the position held by us. A heavy fire continued until 3:40 a. m., when the Boers were driven off. One officer was killed and three were wounded, while twenty men were killed and fifty-nine wounded. The loss of the Boers was heavy, twenty-four dead being counted.

"A convoy taking supplies to Gordon's brigade, north of Krugersdorp, was attacked by Beyer's commando yesterday (Tuesday). The Boers were driven off, leaving eleven dead on the field. Our casualties were four slightly wounded."

LAND REACHED SAFELY AT LAST

Faraman, Bouches du Rhone, Jan. 12.—After a night of terrible suspense, all of the passengers and crew of the French steamer Russie, from Oran, Algeria, which stranded near here during a violent storm Monday, have been safely landed.

Paris, Jan. 12.—It is announced that the insufficiency of the means of saving life at Faraman will soon be made the subject of an interpellation in the chamber of deputies. A movement is on foot to recompense the brave sailors who, time after time, risked their lives in an endeavor to rescue the passengers and crew of the Russie. The minister of marine, M. De Lanessan, has asked for particulars regarding the acts of bravery, and in response to the proposal of several senators, the men will be decorated. Subscriptions are flowing into the newspapers.

CASH PAID NEW JERSEY.

Corporations Gave the State the Sum of $2,051,209.

New York, Jan. 14.—In his annual report to the state board of assessors, which has just been submitted to the New Jersey legislature, it is stated that 6,605 corporations organized under the laws of the state of New Jersey have paid into the treasury during the last year the sum of $2,051,209.

As the corporation tax rate in this state is one-tenth of one per cent on the paid-in capital stock, or $1 tax for every $1,000 capital paid in, the 6,605 corporations must have paid tax upon $2,051,209,000 paid-in capital stock.

The state corporation department estimates that the 6,605 corporations assessed have a paid-in capital stock of 20 per cent of the authorized capital stock. If the tax of $2,051,290,000 paid-in capital stock is 20 per cent of the authorized capital stock, the authorized capital stock must be five times $2,051,209,000, or the sum of $10,256,047,000.

THE DECADENCE OF ENGLAND.

English People Awakening to the Facts in the Case.

London, Jan. 14.—Great Britain's decadence is becoming quite a popular theme. Self-abasement and self-flagellation seem to be congenial to the chastened spirit of the nation, forced to realize, through the accumulation of reverses, military, diplomatic and industrial, that Great Britain's predominance dream is past. It is almost a daily occurrence for some great London newspaper to parade the shortcomings of the country, instituting comparisons with the United States and Germany little complimentary to Great Britain. "Lost opportunities," says the Morning Post, "is the keynote, and the Britain which could dictate its will to the ends of the earth is today a myth."

Famine Prices Prevail in Alaska.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 14.—According to telegrams which reached Skaguay prior to the sailing of the steamer Danube there is a food shortage at Circle City and on the lower Yukon, amounting to almost a famine in certain commodities. Flour is heeld at $45 per sack and is purchasable only from men with outfits, the stores having run out. Butter, bacon, sugar and rye are not obtainable at any price.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senate—A notable speech was delivered in the senate today by Lodge of Massachusetts. Addressing the senate on the amendment of the military bill striking out the provisions in the army reorganization bill for a veterinary corps, he discussed briefly and principally in the form of a colloquy with Senator Bacon of Georgia the Philippine question and the necessity for an army of 100,000 men. In conclusion he drew a brilliant word picture of the commercial future of the United States, declaring that the trade conflict with Europe, already begun, could result only in the commercial and economic supremacy of this country over the entire world. In this industrial conflict he apprehended no danger from a material contest with any nation of the world, but he urged the necessity of a strong and scientifically organized army and a powerful navy, in order that the United States might be prepared to defend its rights against any possible foe. The speech created a profound impression. The senate ratified the committee's proposition to eliminate the house provision for the establishment of a veterinary corps in the army.

House—The notable speeches today were by Crumpacker of Indiana, dealing with alleged disfranchisement in the south; by Hepburn of Iowa, severely arraigning the present rules as annihilating the constitutional prerogatives of the house, and by Grow of Pensylvania, comparing the old system in the house with that of the present.

Washington, Jan. 8.—An amendment to the army bill was adopted authorizing the secretary of war to appoint one hundred additional hospital stewards in the regular army, hospital stewards for six months in the volunteer army during the Spanish war being given preference.

House—By a vote of 165 to 102 the house accepted the reapportionment plan proposed by the Burleigh bill which increases the membership of the house during the next decade from 357, the present membership and the membership proposed by the committee on election in the Hopkins bill, to 386. The result was largely brought about by the influence of certain senators from several of the larger northern states, who threw the weight of their influence in the scale in favor of the large membership.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senate—The army canteen is to be abolished, as the senate, by a very decided vote, concurred in the house provision relative to the army canteen. Only fifteen votes could be mustered in the senate in favor of the canteen, while thirty-four were cast against it. Beyond disposing finally of the canteen question, the senate accomplished little.

House—The house today considered the river and harbor appropriation bill. Little progress was made.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Senate—Considerable progress was made with the army reorganization bill, but the final vote upon the measure seems to be as far off as ever. The amendment proposing the appointment of General Wilson, General Lee and General Shafter to be made major generals of the regular army and retired was adopted.

An appeal was presented by Teller of Colorado from more than 2,000 persons in Manila, urging the United States government to cease its operations against the Filipinos. The appeal is sensational in its statements and so unusual in form that Hawley of Connecticut made a vigorous objection to its publication as a document. He declared it was a treasonable denunciation of the government and an attack upon our soldiers.

House—The general debate on the river and harbor bill continued in the house until 4 o'clock, when the death of Representative Clarke, of New Hampshire, was announced and the house adjourned out of respect to his memory. The features of the debate today were the speeches of Mr. Cushman, of Washington, and Mr. Hepburn of Iowa. The latter has been a persistent opponent of river and harbor bills for years and he attacked the bill all along the line in his usually vigorous fashion.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Senate—In the senate today a vigorous attack was made upon that portion of the army reorganization bill which confers upon the president discretionary power to increase the strength of the army to the maximum limit fixed by the bill. Macon of Georgia began the attack and Platt of Connecticut, replying, maintained that discretionary power ought to be conferred upon the president and expressed astonishment that anybody should entertain a fear that the power should ever be abused. Bacon declared he rather see his party condemned to universal and never-ending banishment from political power than to see such authority placed in the hands of the president. An amendment, opening the way to the appointment of volunteer officers to grades as high as that of captain in the regular establishment, was adopted. Just before adjournment, Carter of Montana called up the bill apportioning the representatives of the United States among the several states. Without debate it was passed precisely as it came from the house. It now goes to the president for his signature.

House—Not since the Fifty-first congress has the house passed as many private pension bills at a private sitting as it did today. In all 179 special pension bills were passed at the session.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

This is the way he announced the fact in his journal: "The office was not sought after by us, neither was it forced upon us. There's no mistaking our qualification—we know about as much law as a brass monkey. But our friends said they were looking for some good, honest man to make the race. In the face of such an indirect compliment, how could we refuse? In a race for office we would be a monumental fizzle. We wouldn't ask a man to vote for us if he'd give us half a dollar. Our opponent is M. L. Bear. He's an honest man, too. But he's well fixed financially, and don't need the four to five dollars a year that's in the office. Neither of us will make an active canvass for votes, so you fellows who expect to smoke our cigars, drink our whisky and have fun at our expense will get left."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR PRAISES PE-RU-NA

First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, Ga., and Its Pastor and Elder.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

A dignified representative of the Presbyterian church in the person of Rev. E. G. Smith does not hesitate to state publicly that he has used Peruna in his family and found it cured when other remedies failed. In this statement the Rev. Smith is supported by an elder in his church.

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"Having used Peruna in my family for some time it gives me pleasure to testify to its true worth. My little boy seven years of age had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific. As a tonic for weak and worn out people it has few or no equals."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Mr. M. J. Rossman, a prominent merchant of Greensboro, Ga., and an elder in the Presbyterian church of that place, has used Peruna and in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, writes as follows:

"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and tried many remedies, all of which gave me no relief. Peruna was recommended to me by several friends, and after using a few bottles I am pleased to say that the long looked for relief was found and I am now enjoying better health than I have for years, and can heartily recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted. It is certainly a grand medicine."—M. J. Rossman.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' Journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and also Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

KLEMME'S SCHOOL HOUSE GONE UP.

The cry of fire Tuesday morning about 9:30 aroused every citizen in our town to the quick. Fire had in some unknown way started in the basement of the school house was first noticed around the register of the west room, known as the Mrs. Gibbs room, the alarm was spread to the other two rooms, and the teachers proceeded to get the scholars out of danger. This they did heroically and not a child suffered or perished in the flames. As soon as the children heard of danger ahead they made a pell-mell rush for the doors, but were stopped by the teachers and made to file out in order, thus avoiding a calamity which would have been injurious to some of them had they been left to go as they started. Master Ross Phelps brought the cry of fire to the business portion of town when a general rush of our citizens ensued, pails, tubs and barrels were taken in which to carry water to extinguish the flames. Water was used freely but to no avail as the flames could not be reached unless the celler was entered. As there was no way of getting into the basement to quench the flames other than by risking lives by suffication in smoke and gas the building had to be left to it's own unfortnate destiny. The realization that nothing could be done to save the building prompted all to save as much of the loose property as possible from the inside and preparations were made to save the adjacent church building. The sidewalks were torn up and taken to a safe distance, and the windows in the west side of the building were broken in order to let the flames out on the west side and thereby give the workers time to complete their preparations for saving the church. The value of the school house, when first erected was by contract $2,400, then two rooms on the lower floor were only finished, since then two more rooms in the upper story have been finished in shape for school purpose. The building was valued at least at $3,500. An insurance policy of $2,000 was carried, which will lighten the burden to some extent.

In saviug the church a great amount of daring and dangerous work was done. Water was handed up the ladders to the top where the "bucket brigade" ladies used it to their best advantage. Great risks were taken in doing this, as a slip of the foot would cause a fall. that meant broken bones and perhaps lives. The constant heat from the burning building was so intense that the roof was so hot and dry the water when poured onto the top of the roof would not run down to the eves had to be thrown there, the exposure of ones face to the heat while on the church building caused one to shrink back, and a moments presence of the bare skin to that heat would scorch it into blisters. But the boys were determined to do what they could and under cover of their caps and mittens they kept the work bravely going. One exhibition of daring on the part of Mr. Kaiser was by his crawling through an opening in the steeple to his full length with head downward, while being held by the feet by others, to pour water on the flames that could be reached in no other way, is truly something that not every man would attempt to do, and he especially with the others who fought so nobly are to be thanked by the members of this organization for the saving of their building.

It losing the school house the rict is placed in an awkward osition, as the scholars are in want of proper accomodations. We understand some of the town halls will be employed as sceool rooms until another building can be erected and the regular school work was continued thursd y.

The "presence of mind" on the part of the teachers in getting the children, one and all, safely out of harm's way, is well worthy of comment here, and merits the thanks of all parents who had children in these destroyed school rooms.

Knowing that the German Reform church was in great danger of being destroyed during the burning of the school house, we, the undersigned, trustees of this organization, wish to express our thanks in behalf of the members of said church, to those who so heroically fought and battled against the flames and defended the church building. Especial thanks is given to those who manifested courage to face the heat while on the roof and also for the risks taken.

Sunday night shortly after 2 o'clock the J. W. Burzette home, 4½ miles east of Klemme was desturbed by someone going into the cellar. Mr. Burzette noticing an uncommon noise got up and espied two men leaving the premices. He went back to bed only to be awakened again in about an hour. This time a precaution was taken to have the shot gun handy. Upon going to the cellar-way he discovered a man sniping jars of fruit. The fellow was called to a halt at the gun's muzzie and a messenger sent to town after constable Kirkwood. The man was brought to town and questioned as to name, where he was from, and so on. He said his name was Nels Johnson but did not know where he came from or where he was going. Attorney Wichman of Garner was called and the witnessss were to be examined for evidence convicting the fellow of burglary. It so happened that Supervisor Day appearnd on the scene and recognized the fellow as Nels Johnson, one of the County's poor house paupers. Who the other fellow was as yet unknown. Mr. Burzette says they carried away eight or nine jars of fruit, from his place on their first visit. They also called at J. Neuberger but could gain no enterance to Johns celler. The man is unbalanced mentally and in all probability is physically ill and cannot be blamed for his misdeeds. He was taken back to Duncan, to his place in the poor house on the Monday P. M. passenger and is supposed to have escaped sometime Sunday.

An editor out west having been asked if he had ever seen a bald headed woman, replied, "No we never did. Nor did we ever see a woman waltzing around the streets with a cigar between her teeth and running into every saloon she saw. We never a woman go fishing with a bottle in her hip pocket, sit on the damp ground all day and go home drunk. Nor have we seen a woman yank off her coat and swear that she can lick any woman in town, God bless her, she isn't built that way."

This office has about 50 pounds of brevier type it would like to trade for premier, a set of 5 col chases to sell. and would like to buy a paper cutter. Can anyone help us out by trading buying or selling. A bargain will be given or taken.

Let "fire protectiou" be your watchword. Get after the council and make them do something in this regard. You know and they know the town of Klemme is at a fire's mercy should one start.

TOO TIRED TO STIR!

SHE had planned to go out with her husband, but her strength failed her.

Her nerves were excited all day, and when night came she just couldn't find the courage.

It is the old story of weakness and nervousness taking the pleasure out of life and filling it with discontent and suffering. It is not honest fatigue resulting from the daily task; it is weariness born of weakness and ill health.

The ideal strengthener for weak women is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It builds them up in every way by toning up the blood and strengthening the nerves. Nothing else in the world can do Nervura's work. It seeks out the weak spots and strengthens them. It enriches the blood and gives it a healthy circulation, thus putting new life into the entire body.

Strength to overcome the general discouragement is followed by the ambition to be well. A few nights of sound, refreshing sleep brings a new sensation of acquired strength. How ready now is this woman for every duty and every plan for pleasure! The new color in her cheeks shows the potent work of the vegetable elements in Nervura. This woman is now a cured woman, and such transformations are occurring in every community through the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. If you are run-down and discouraged, here is the certain help.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

MRS. OLIVER WILSON, of Northboro, Mass., says:

"I was suffering from nervousness, caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and have obtained my old elastic step around the house. After creeping around for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly."

READ DR. GREENE'S OFFER.

Dr. Greene's advice is free to all who seek it, either by personal call at his office, 35 W. 14th Street, New York City, or by letter through the mail. All who are broken in health should call or write without delay to Nervura's discoverer for free counsel.

The tables which have just been completed for the report of the state railroad commissioners show an increase of $4,487,107.29 in the gross revenue of the Iowa roads in 1900. For the year ending July 1, 1900, there was an increase of $3,971,722.98 in operating expenses and an increase of 5,311 men employed on the railroads of this state at an advance of $2,956,935.79 in wages paid them. The passenger revenues were $1,439,679.73 less than the year previous, but there was an increase of $1,858,391.13 in freight revenues.

Attorney E. B. Evans has gone to Washington, D. C., where he will make oral argument before the secretary of the interior in the matter of application by Monona county for a re-survey of the land along the borders of Blue lake. Something like 1,600 acres are involved. This case is similar to other swamp land cases and involves the title of the county to certain lands that have been seized by adjacent property owners and claimed by rights of the homestead act. A few months ago several thousand acres of land were reclaimed for different counties in the northern part of Iowa by the same process that Mr. Evans is employing in Monona county.

The Iowa Millers association elected the following officers: President, James Taggart, Knoxville; vice president, C. L. Mott, Des Moines; secretary and treasurer, T. P. Rogers, Boone. It was decided to hold another meeting in July at Cedar Rapids.

Governor Shaw has gone to Beaumont, Texas, along with A. Lang of this city, who is interested with the governor in the Des Moines Rice Land company. The property of the company is four miles from Beaumont, where oil has been discovered. The Des Moines Rice Land company is considering the project of sinking a shaft for oil on its own land.

The movement to send Iowa troops to Washington at the time of the inauguration of President McKinley has been revived by a letter from J. W. Clark of Red Oak, formerly commander of Company M, of the Fifty-first Iowa, and now lieutenant colonel in the regiment. In this letter Colonel Clark said the company was willing to go to Washington and pay its own expenses, although he asked Adjutant General Byers if it would not be possible for the state to bear the expense of transportation as far as Chicago. Judge Smith McPherson, who is a resident of Red Oak, interceded with the adjutant general in behalf of Company M. It is understood that Red Oak citizens generally are willing to back up the company, if permission to go to Washington is given it. It is said there is no doubt that the necessary fund can be raised. As the situation now stands, two companies have expressed themselves as willing to bear their own expenses. It remains for Sioux City and Davenport to determine whether troops will be sent. General Byers gave the Red Oak company this answer, that if the four leading companies he had designated, one of them a picked company, made up of members of both Sioux City companies, would provide for their own expenses, he would tender their services to the inauguration committee at Washington. He adheres to the position he took from the first, however, that if any troops at all are to go from Iowa, not less than a battalion should be sent.

Milton Remley, as attorney for the state board of medical examiners, has filed a demurrer to the petition of C. L. Parsons, in which Parsons asked for a mandamus compelling the board to issue him a certificate to practice osteopathy. The board demurs to the Parsons petition on several grounds. It is declared that it is not shown that the board has failed to determine whether or not the school is a regularly conducted college of osteopathy. Until the board termines this it is declared that Parsons has no right to demand a certificate. It is further stated that the petition fails to show that the board has found the school to be regularly incorporated and conducted. Until this question is determined it is declared that no certificate can be issued. Further the petition is demurred to on the grounds that it does not allege that the board has not regularly conducted. Finally it is stated that the act of the Twenty-seventh general assembly regarding the issuance of certificates to graduates of schools of osteopathy is unconstitutional because it is in contravention to the constitution, which denies special privileges to any particular class. It is held that it would be giving the osteopaths privileges denied physicians of other schools if they were allowed certificates without passing the examinations which graduates of other schools are required to pass. It is declared that to grant certificates to osteopaths would be contrary to the medical practice laws of the state, and the board cannot be authorized to violate these laws.

ROBERTS ISSUES AN APPEAL.

Urges Response to the Call for 5,000 Yeoman Volunteers.

London, Jan. 18.—Lord Roberts has issued from the war office a stirring appeal to the country for a prompt response to the call for 5,000 yeomanry, whose past services in South Africa he highly commends to the gratitude of the nation. The authorities continue to hold a hopeful view regarding the South African situation, but they seem to recognize that vigorous measures are necessary. The proclamation of martial law throughout almost the whole of Cape Colony, Lord Kitchener's strong measures against the population of the republics, the placing on reduced rations of the wives of men in the field, and similar measures go to show that there is still heavy work ahead. British offensive operations have ceased for the present. It is supposed that Lord Kitchener is collecting his strength for a final effort to crush or capture the commandoes by a repetition of the tactics which caused the surrender of General Cronje and General Prinsloo. It is alleged that the Boers who are concentrating at Carolina and Ermele are preparing to descend into Natal. The casualty list yesterday shows that the Boers have released 297 British who were captured at Helvetia and Belfast. The facts regarding the captures at Belfast have not yet been made public. It is asserted that more heavy naval guns will be landed at the cape. Information as to the doings of the invadors is hard to obtain, but it is clear that they are getting very little help from the Dutch.

QUEEN AT DEATH'S DOOR

Indications That the End Is Not Far Off.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 20.—The queen of England lies at death's door. She was stricken with paralysis last night. Reuter's Telegraph company understands that the Prince of Wales has received authority to act in her majesty's stead, and thus has been created a practical, though not constitutional, regency.

Gathered at her bedside are the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Louise and other members of the royal family, while Mr. Ritchie, the secretary of state for home affairs, officially represents the cabinet. Lord Salisbury is in constant telephonic communication with Osborne house and it was rumored that he had arrived at Osborne house, but this does not appear to be true.

Beyond the bulletins, nothing official is obtainable; but not a soul connected in anyway with Osborne house seems to believe that her majesty can survive this attack. In fact, locally, the announcement of her death is awaited with something approaching equanimity. Never in the memory of her subjects has the queen been ill before, and now that at her advanced age she has been stricken it seems to those who have lived around her that it is impossible for her to recover.

London, Jan. 20.—The specific malady from which the queen is suffering is of an intestinal character, and it is generally understood that the trouble is of a cancerous nature, which, of course, precludes all hopes of recovery. It is a malady similar to the one with which the Empress Frederick is afflicted, and it was a cancerous disease that likewise carried off the Duke of Coburg, second son of the queen, last summer.

London, Jan. 20.—Those Britishers who have persistently opposed the Boer war charge the queen's condition to what they call "this giant folly." They declare unequivocally that her majesty has been sacrificed to the blundering diplomacy of her ministers. There is not the least doubt that the war, with its long train of horrors, has been principally responsible for the empire's pending apprehension and grief. The queen's own grandson, Prince Christian, gave his life for the country. Many of those closely associated with the sovereign have lost near relatives and dear friends at the front.

Will Not Hasten Vote.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The republican senators decided not to set a day, at least for the present, for taking up the Nicaragua canal bill. The decision was reached after an hour and a half in caucus and was unanimous. The caucus was called largely because of Senator Morgan's importunities in behalf of the bill and an earnest effort was made to effect a satisfactory solution of the problem. There was a general exchange of views and many speeches were made, but after all had been said the senators concluded that so long as Great Britain's attitude toward the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is undecided it would not be wise or expedient to agitate the question of the construction of the proposed canal.

MISS FRANCES M. ANDERSON, daughter of HON. JUDGE ANDERSON, of Virginia, is at present in Washington, D. C., as Corresponding Secretary of the Higher Educational League, of that city. Cured of la grippe by Peruna.

MISS FRANCES M. ANDERSON, Corresponding Secretary of the Higher Educational League, writes from the "Astoria," Washington, D. C., the following:

"About two months ago I was taken very ill with la grippe and was obliged to go to bed. I took three bottles of Peruna with very beneficial results, and was able to leave my bed in a week and regained my usual strength very soon.

"I have nothing but praise for Peruna, and recommend it to those similarly afflicted whenever I can."—Frances M. Anderson.

La grippe is, strictly speaking, epidemic catarrh—that is to say, a variety of acute catarrh which is so contagious and runs a course more or less definite, the same as scarlet fever, whooping cough, etc.

During the acute stages of la grippe it is not a very fatal disease, but the condition in which it leaves the system has caused the death of a countless number.

Indeed nearly every person who has had la grippe within the last three years finds himself more or less deranged by the pernicious effects of this disease. The majority of those who have escaped death find life scarcely worth living.

If this vast multitude of people could only know with what certainty and promptness Peruna would relieve them of all the bad effects which la grippe has brought upon them, what an untold amount of suffering would be averted!

Thousands have already heard how quickly this remedy will cure in these cases and have been saved; but tens of thousands have not yet heard, and continue to suffer on, dropping into the grave one by one.

Peruna cures catarrh in all stages and varieties, whether acute or chronic, and is therefore the most effective remedy ever devised for removing all the derangements which follows la grippe.

Samuel M. York writes from Union Grove, Ala., the following letter:

Dear Sir—"Last week I was taken with la grippe and catarrhal deafness. I wrote you for advice and followed your directions. After taking two bottles of Peruna I found myself well of la grippe, and my hearing was fully restored. My health is better than it has been in five years.

Miss Caroline J. Kahl, Otisco, Ind., writes as follows:

"Three years I had la grippe and pulmonary trouble. I was very sick. I had hemorrhages of the lungs nearly every day for a year and three bottles of your Peruna cured me. The doctor said I had consumption. I am now in better health than I have been for many years.

"I highly recommend Peruna to all my neighbors and friends. Peruna is my favorite medicine. I shall always have Peruna in the house."—Miss Caroline J. Kahl.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

No one ever knew what passed in that interview. Harvey briefly told his wife he had begged for forgiveness and gained it, but the old relations between Gladys and himself would never be renewed—she was through with the life of which he had been a part. When Helen threw herself in his arms in a passion of grief for having done him hurt while striving only for his benefit, he kissed her sadly. It was all a mistake, he said; he had been the more culpable of the two. Together they would take up life under the new conditions, never alluding to the errors of the past.

He was very kind, very gentle; but there was that in his manner and look which told her Harvey, the boy, was dead, to make way for the grave, almost stern man who henceforth walked by her side through life, affectionate and true, yet with the ineffable quality that tinges the humblest marriage with romance forever stricken from his love.

Within a year after her departure Gladys was married to a man slightly her junior, whose wealth doubled hers. Her beauty and vivacity made her the center of a wide social circle, and having been shut away from city pleasures so long she enjoyed them now with childlike enthusiasm. Engrossed in a bewildering happy present the past became to her a dream, and after the arrival of her first child, a half forgotten one.

The house in Rockville was sold, and long years passed before she again saw Harvey. In the careworn man with stooping shoulders she found it difficult to recognize her once handsome boy. He was only forty, but life had gone hard with him. There were many mouths to feed at home, and all Helen's thrift could not make one dollar do more than the work of two.

Long ago Gladys had wholly forgotgotten her grievances, but not the affection for which she had sacrificed so much. Even now, though she had many sons of her own, she loved her unfortunate boy too well to allow him to endure anything approaching privation, and with her husband's assistance secured to Harvey an annuity sufficient to place him and his family well above need. Phebe, an old woman then, grumbled when the news was told her; but really she was pleased; even her anger could not endure forever. And Harvey had been her boy as well as Gladys'.

So all were in their way happy and content—all but one. It is hard for the covetous soul to come near to fortune yet never grasp it; and even when better days had dawned, and want was forever set at bay, the bitter knowledge that she had doomed her husband to a struggle with poverty that robbed him of youth and hope and ambition was with Helen Atherton all the days of her life.

(The End.)

White Feather

There is no need to mention the name of his regiment here. That is a secret that belongs to the army alone. Suffice it to say that his comrades are proud of his name.

He should never have entered the army at all, much less a hard riding cavalry regiment which had a reputation to sustain by a yearly tribute of broken necks and collar bones.

His proper vocation was that of a linen draper's assistant, and he had filled that occupation very satisfactory till one evil day he had fallen in love with a girl, a silly, shallow girl, at whom no practical man or boy would have taken a second look.

He adored her, and she adored soldiers. In their walks abroad she would direct his steps toward the Horse guards or Wellington barracks, that she might gaze in admiration at the fine, strapping soldiers who were to be seen there, and every time she pinched his arm and exclaimed: "Oh, Jack, look at that lovely soldier!" his heart gave him a pang at the thought that he was only a draper's assistant, with nothing in common with the military but the handling of red cloth! He was a dreamer by nature, and falling in love did not lessen his weakness in this direction. Dreaming is pardonable in a poet, but an unpardonable crime in a linen draper's assistant, and as he stood at his counter his mind was far away from his work. Instead of listening to the "Forward!" of the shopwalker he could only hear the short-flung word of command and the blare of the bugles that sounded through his dreams; wherefore it was not long before he came into conflict with his practical chief. A few sharp words passed. He threw up in three seconds a position it had taken six years of hard, unremitting labor to attain. Then he enlisted.

He gained his title on his first display in the riding school, where, after a short ride on the neck of the riding master's pet buck jumper, he turned deathly pale and cried aloud that he might be allowed to dismount.

The horse at once gratified his desire by throwing him on to the tan, where he lay trembling in every limb, much to the diversion of a couple of rough riders who were standing by. They were quick to inform their respective squadrons, and, his former occupation being known, he was promptly christened White Feather.

In those dark days it was the joy of the more hardy recruits to take him aside solemnly and request the service of three-pence three farthings worth of white feathers. Any morsel of down or fluff that might float into the barracks was promptly captured and presented to him with due ceremonies by Trumpeter Pipes, the low comedian of the regiment.

The older men forbore to join in with these somewhat tiring repetitions of a stale joke. They remembered their own experiences in the riding school and recognized that White Feather was a quiet and inoffensive fellow, devoid of the impudence and bad manners peculiar to recruits and respectful and helpful to his seniors.

The sergeant instructor, too, after a time took a fancy to his timid recruit, and took extra trouble to teach him how to keep his heels out, his hands down and his head up.

"I've made smart cavalrymen out o' bigger duffers than you," he used to remark encouragingly as he flicked White Feather's horse into a canter, "and I'll make a rider o' you, or I'll break your neck!" White Feather's neck remained unbroken so it is to be presumed that the sergeant instructor fulfilled his word.

Presently he began to lose the hangdog look of suppressed terror with which he had been accustomed to enter the riding school and to acquire the easy swagger of a cavalryman. His chest, contracted by long hours at the counter, developed under healthy training. Fresh air and much exercise helped White Feather's development, which had been sadly retarded by the heavy, gas-laden atmosphere in which he had lived. His nerves acquired tone, and he learned to take a tumble now and then as a matter of course and to fire his carbine without shutting his eyes and blanching at the explosion of the cartridge.

"Blow me, if he isn't going to shape into a man at last!" quoth the sergeant instructor.

Then a great blow fell upon him. He received one morning a letter from the girl to tell him that she had given him up in favor of a shopwalker who had expectations of being set up in business by his father. She admitted that she had adored soldiers and that she had caused him to enter the army for her sake. But she had omitted to state that the soldiers she adored were soldiers who possessed the Queen's commission and who wore stars instead of a worsted stripe.

If poor White Feather was a physical coward, he was a moral hero. There is no chance of a display of feeling in a barrack room so, like the Spartan boy of old, he hugged his trouble to him, slipping the cheap little engagement ring with which he had sealed his troth into his pocket without a sign beyond the twitching of his white lips. Then he lit his pipe with the letter, not out of contempt, but because there is little privacy accorded in the correspondence that comes to the barrack room, and a private soldier is not provided with a desk wherein to keep his faded flowers and other sentimental tokens of the past.

The blow was a very heavy one, for White Feather was without the worldly knowledge that should have told him long since that he had fixed his affections upon a vulgar, selfish and brainless flirt, and he still believed in her.

For her sake he had learned to overcome his physical cowardice. He had dreamed of a possible commission in the dim future and had rejoiced in the recently acquired promotion as a step toward her.

For her sake, too, he received the news cheerfully when the word passed through the barracks that the regiment was ordered to South Africa to meet the Boers. He knew that he was by nature a coward, but for the memory of her he swore an oath to himself to do his duty without sparing himself in the coming fight.

"Look 'ere, old chap, we ain't going to call you White Feather no more!" said Trumpeter Pipes as they lay together behind the shelter of a large bowlder, against the face of which the Boer bullets were pattering like a heavy rain.

In full sight of the whole army their squadron had crossed the Boer front amid a hail of bullets which had brought 20 men to earth.

White Feather's horse had been shot under him, and, at the risk of his life, he had carried the wounded trumpeter into the shelter of the bowlders. He was unhurt, but trembled in every limb from fear and great exertion.

From between two bowlders he peeped out and saw, amid the bodies of men and horses that littered the plain, a wounded man crawling on his hands and knees amid a spatter of bullets that were kicking puffs of dust from the dry earth all around him.

It was his captain.

White Feather watched him for a moment; then he saw him stop and lie down on his side despairingly. He could crawl no more.

"I will, for her sake!" He murmured between his clenched teeth, and, rising from the shelter of the rock, he faced the hail of death that pattered to the earth around him.

As he walked into the open a faint cheer reached his ears from the British troops half a mile behind him. The Royal artillery backed him with a shrieking flight of shrapnel, which whistled for a moment overhead, then burst over the Boer lines a quarter of a mile away in a shower of bullets that for a moment quelled the storm around him.

He reached the wounded man, lifted him on his back and returned step by step to where Trumpeter Pipes lay hidden.

The trumpeter gave him a faint "Bravo!" as he staggered and fell with his burden into the kindly shelter of the rock.

That was White Feather's reward.

"Tell the general to keep down the fire on the right there and get those men in from behind those bowlders," he said to his aid, "and bring me that man's name. If he is alive, tell him that I saw it all and that I'm going to recommend him for the cross. Never saw a finer show of fire discipline in my life!" added the commander to himself as his aid galloped off.

White Feather's eyes glistened as he received the message and heard the cheer that swept along the lines as he was carried in.

"Perhaps I shall get that commission after all," he said to himself; "then she will think more of me!"

Perhaps it was just as well that he died five minutes later—this faithful worshiper of a goddess of clay.

THRIFTY FEMALES.

There are Many Remunerative Occupations for Women.

One thrifty woman who had watched the vegetables and fruit rotting day by day at her grocer's, and which were a dead loss to him, proposed that they enter into an arrangement in the future whereby she should preserve and pickle his entire surplus, either for regular pay or upon commission, in the latter case he furnishing the sugar and spices. Another woman, with sharp business instincts, a butcher's wife, made up soup stock, and found a ready sale for it to many overworked housekeepers. Still another, who knew but one thing thoroughly, and that was cookery, called every morning at certain physicians offices and formed a list of families in which sickness prevailed. To these families she offered to come every day for an hour or so and prepare in their own homes mutton broth, beef extract, chicken jelly, panada, gruels, fruit and herb drinks, wine whey, custard, etc., furnishing her time and labor cheaper than the articles could be bought at restaurants or women's exchanges. Some women are specialists in one branch, such as handkerchief embroidering, lampshade making, fan painting, feather curling, glove cleaning, and the like, or can make beautiful neck scarfs, or launder fine laces. Such can easily make their specialty pay, some by the aid of friends, some by the patronage of dealers in such goods, some by a house to house canvass made by themselves. A young girl in one of the large eastern cities was recently puzzled by finding herself left almost helpless and homeless, with no talent in any one direction. There was but one thing of which she never tired, and that was of children, all of whom seemed to adore her; so this young girl went out at so much an hour to amuse sick and irritable children. Many a worn-out mother found her presence a most grateful repose. She was indefatigable in inventing new games and perfecting old ones, and her naturally retentive memory came also to her aid as a story-teller. It is the woman who takes advantage of opportunities, the woman who can plan as well as execute, whom the world wants and for whom it will push its ranks apart to make place.

After a man has sown his wild oats in the years of his youth he has still every year to get over a few weeks and days of folly.—Richter.

CADETS WILL QUIT HAZING.

Students at West Point Adopt Resolutions Against the Practice.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 21.—The congressional investigation of the West Point Military Academy has borne fruit rather unexpectedly. Saturday night when the congressmen were hurrying their inquiries to a termination, the cadets of all four classes held a meeting in Grant hall and unanimously decided to abolish hazing of every form, as well as the practice of "calling out" fourth classmen. This is exactly what General Dick and the other members of the congressional committee have been trying to impress upon the cadets who have testified before them as the only course open to them if they desired to see the fair names of the United States Military Academy unsullied and above reproach. The communication was addressed to Superintendent A. L. Mills, and he quickly brought it to General Dick. The committeeemen are delighted with the action of the cadets, and General Dick, in a few words, said that they would all go back to the house of representatives with the firm belief that in spirit and letter the agreement would be steadfastly adhered to by the cadets who made it voluntarily.

GUILTY OF MURDER.

Three Men Convicted of Causing Jennie Bosschieter's Death.

Patterson, N. J., Jan. 19.—Walter C. McAlister, Andrew J. Campbell and William Death, three of the four persons indicted for the murder of Jennie Bosschieter, a mill girl, who was murdered on the night of October 18 last, were last night adjudged guilty of murder in the second degree. According to the law the maximum penalty for the prisoners is thirty years' imprisonment. The jury took fourteen ballots. When the verdicts were announced the prisoners evinced neither elation nor relief. Judge Dixon said he believed the verdict a just one.

AMERICAN PROTESTS IGNORED.

Venezuelan Officials Said to be Holding Up and Robbing Foreigners.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Dutch West Indies, Jan. 21.—Via Haytien Cable.—The United States auxiliary cruiser Scorpion (Lieutenant Commander Sargeut commanding) has just arrived here on her way to Guanaco, Venezuela, the nearest port to the scene of the trouble between the rival asphalt companies. She recently left LaGuayra (the port of Caracas) and brings the latest news of the Venezuelan troubles. The situation is described as being serious. It is said that the emphatic protests of the government at Washington have been defied, and bloodshed at the lake of the Bermuda Asphalt company was feared. The most hot-headed of the foreigners in Venezuela go so far as to say that if the Washington authorities do not take steps to protect American citizens now, all foreigners may as well leave the country. The officers of the Scorpion are quoted as saying that the diplomatic corps at Caracas is unanimous on this point, as are all the foreigners. They admit, however, that the United States minister at Caracas, Mr. Francis B. Loomis, is working vigorously in the efforts to arrange matters.

EXPELLED FROM PARTY.

Democrats Expel From Party Those Democrats Who Voted for Quay.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 18.—A joint caucus of the senate and house democrats was held, at which resolutions were adopted expelling from the party those democrats who aided the Quay republicans in the organization of the house, and William J. Garvin of Shenandoah, who also voted for Mr. Quay for United States senator. None of those democrats against whom the resolutions are directed were present, except Representative Samuel H. Rothrock. Senator J. H. Cochran presided.

CONCENTRATION OF BOERS.

Three Thousand of Them Have Gathered Near Carolina.

London, Jan. 18.—General Kitchener, telegraphing from Pretoria, under date of Wednesday, January 16, says the concentration of 3,000 Boers at Carolina, in the Transvaal, is reported. He adds that Colville's mobile column was engaged near Van Tondes Hoek. The Boers were driven off with heavy loss. Three hundred Boers entered Aberdeen yesterday, looted the stores and retired on the arrival of a hundred British infantry.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

MEANT TO PROTECT ANIMALS ALSO

Railroad Signals Are Not for Protection of Human Beings Alone.

Des Moines, Jan. 21.—The supreme court held that in requiring trains to give signals before reaching crossings the legislature intended to protect animals as well as men and in an opinion written by Judge Sherwin sustained a decision of the Pottawottamie ed a decision of the Pottawattamie district court in the case of W. A. Graybil vs. the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company, appellant. The appeal was made by the railway company from Judge A. B. Thornell's court. Graybill owned stock that escaped from an enclosure and were killed in the day time on a highway crossing by a train running as a special. Negligence was charged in the operation of the train in not using due care and watchfulness and in not using the whistle and bell before reaching the crossing where the cattle were killed. It was also charged the train was a wild one and was running at a dangerously high rate of speed. There was a trial to a jury and a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff.

The supreme court sustained the trial court in holding that the statutory requirements as to signals being sounded with whistle and bell before a road crossing was reached, was for the safety of animals as well as of persons. The supreme court says: "A failure to give these statutory signals when approaching a crossing makes railway companies absolutely liable for all damages which shall be sustained by any person by reason of such neglect; such failure is also a misdemeanor. There is nothing in the language of the statute tending to show legislatuve intent to restrict its operation to the human family."

IOWA BOY SHOT IN PHILIPPINES.

Lieutenant Morrison, of Hedrick, Slain From Ambush.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Adjutant General Corbin received a cable message from MacArthur at Manila saying that First Lieutenant John Morrison, Jr., fourth cavalry, was killed near Gapa, P. I. No particulars are given but it is supposed the officer was shot from ambush while he was away from his company. Lieutenant Morrison was a native of Iowa, and was graduated from the military in June, 1896. He was assigned to the third cavalry and served with that regiment in the campaign against Santiago. In February, 1900, a few months after he had reached the grade of first lieutenant, he was transferred to the Fourth cavalry, and served with that regiment in the Philippine Islands up to the time of his death.

Des Moines, Jan. 21.—Lieutenant Morrison is the son of Hon. "Jack" Morrison, postmaster at Hedrick, who served several years in the Iowa legislature, and has often been mentioned for congress from the Sixth district. His son, John, Jr., was born and reared in Keokuk county and obtained his preparatory education at Ames college from which he graduated in 1892, just preceding his appointment to West Point.

PECULIAR CASE AT SIOUX CITY.

Man Who Has Voted for Thirty-seven Years Cannot Prove Citizenship.

Sioux City, Jan. 18.—The court of claims of the United States has decided that John Hornick, one of Sioux City's oldest citizens, and the senior member of the wholesale drug firm of Hornick, Hess & More, is not a citizen of the United States, in spite of the fact that he has a record of honorable service in the civil war and has been voting ever since he cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln in 1864. Twenty-five years ago Sioux Indians captured and killed several hundred head of cattle belonging to John Hornick and others in the Black Hills. After litigation, which lasted for years, the court of claims has awarded damages to the amount of $4,556, but Mr. Hornick is cut out of his share of the recovery because of his non-citizenship. He was unable to show proof that his father had been naturalized.

No Saloons at Oelwein.

Oelwein, Jan. 18.—When the returns of the last census were made public it was found that this city was large enough to have saloons if the required number of names could be secured to the petition of consent. The petition was filed with the board of supervisors at West Union. The antisaloonists began looking for flaws and found that in a number of instances the date had not been placed opposite the names on the paper. These cases were numerous enough to throw the petition out. As the board cannot act on more than one petition in a year, it is knocked out for twelve months at least.

Mrs. Hossack Denied Bail.

Indianola, Jan. 19.—Mrs Margaret Hossack, charged with the murder of her husband and indicted by the grand jury of Warren county for murder in the first degree, was last evening refused bail by Judge Applegate, and as a consequence must remain in the county jail until the March term of the district court, at which time it is expected that the case will be heard.

Handsome Gift to College.

Boone, Jan. 19.—Senator Erickson has presented to the trustees of Augustana college at Rock Island, the famous Swedish college, two tracts of land in Wapello county, of 120 acres and 160 acres each, which have a value of $30,000.

DES MOINES COURT HOUSE FIGHT.

River Fronters Given a Hard Blow by the District Court.

Des Moines, Jan. 21.—The effort of James H. Windsor and other river fronters to prevent the erection of a new court house in Des Moines, unless on the river front, has terminated, in so far as the district court is concerned. The board of supervisors is now free to go ahead with tearing down the old court house and build a new one. Judge Bishop, in the rescission petition case, discharged the jury, then dismissed the mandamus petition of Windsor against the board, after which he entered judgment against Windsor for the costs of the case.

Immediately the river fronters, by porter Forbes to prepare a transtheir attorneys, ordered Court Recript of the record in the case. This it is hoped to have completed in time to file an appeal in the supreme court at this term. As soon as the appeal is perfected, it is the intention of the river fronters to ask for a restraining order from the supreme court to prevent the board from tearing down the old court house and building a new one until such time as the supreme court can pass finally on the case. Whether the supreme court will grant a restraining order on the record to be submitted to it is a question.

THE MONEY MISSING.

Registered Package Said to Contain Two Thousand Dollars Disappears.

Hampton, Jan. 19.—A registered package said to have contained $1,000 in currency and consigned from Dubuque to a bank at Clarksville has been stolen from the mail car on the track of the Great Western railway in this city. The statement of H. L. Morey, postal clerk in charge of the car, is that he forgot to deliver the package at Clarksville and carried it by, expecting to deliver it on the return trip east at night. When the train arrived in this city he locked the package in his desk and when he returned in the evening it was gone. No trace of the missing package has been discovered up to the present time. Postoffice Inspector Stewart of Iowa City is looking the matter up.

ALLEGED ABDUCTION.

Warren Munzel, Aged 11, Disappears from His Home at Grinnell.

Grinnell, Jan. 19.—Warren Munzel, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Munzel, has been missing since the 15th and circumstances point very conclusively to abduction. When last seen young Munzel was in the company of an unknown youth. They went east and from that moment all trace of the boy has been lost. The boy is of medium size and wore a brown-checked coat. The stranger was almost a man in appearance, and may have been older than he looked. The town is greatly excited, and officers are making every effort to discover his whereabouts. The boys' parents are wealthy.

GIVES MONEY THROUGH HENDERSON

Carnegie Sends Check for $25,000 to Upper Iowa University.

Fayette, Jan. 19.—Andrew Carnegie has sent his check for $25,000 as a gift to Upper Iowa university. The money will be used for library purposes, though Mr. Carnegie did no stipulate that it must be so applied. The donation was made through the efforts of Speaker Henderson, who is a graduate of Upper Iowa university, and also a warm friend of Mr. Carnegie. President Benton of the university first enlisted the active interest of Speaker Henderson, and through a letter of introduction from the latter laid before Mr. Carnegie the needs of Upper Iowa.

Titus Amendment Case Is Advanced to January 23.

Des Moines, Jan. 17.—The supreme court yesterday entered the following order, in sustaining the motion to have the Titus amendment appeal case advanced to the head of the calendar:

"State of Iowa ex rel Marsh W. Bailey vs. S. W. Brookhart, appellant.

"The motion to advance cause is sustained. Cause to be submitted January 23, at 9 o'clock a. m., in print. Counsel interested in like questions in other cases to have permission to file printed arguments in this case. This case may be argued orally by two counsel on a side, each to have one hour."

INDICTED FOR MURDER.

Mrs. Hossack Must Stand Trial for Killing Her Husband.

Indianola, Jan. 18.—The grand jury has made formal announcement that it has indicted Mrs. Hossack for the murder of her husband, John Hossack. She is charged with murder in the first degree. The case is expected to be tried at as early a date as possible though it is not likely that it will be reached this month. Henderson & Berry, attorneys for the defendant, are anxious to have an early trial. Both deny that they will ask for a change of venue to Polk county or any other place and declare their confidence in being able to obtain a fair trial in this city.

Wild Engine's Havoc.

Council Bluffs, Jan. 18.—A runaway engine in the Rock Island railway yards at Council Bluffs crashed into and overturned a coach on the Wabash train, killing Jesse Bell, a porter, and injuring a woman passenger and two children, and then collided with and disabled an engine on a Rock Island train.

A CRY FOR HELP.

Result of a Prompt Reply.—Two Letters from Mrs. Watson, Published by Special Permission.—For Women's Eyes Only.

March 15, 1899.

To MRS. PINKHAM, LYNN, MASS.:

"DEAR MADAM:—I am suffering from inflammation of the ovaries and womb, and have been for eighteen months. I have a continual pain and soreness in my back and side. I am only free from pain when lying down, or sitting in an easy chair. When I stand I suffer with severe pain in my side and back. I believe my troubles were caused by over work and lifting some years ago.

"Life is a drag to me, and I sometimes feel like giving up ever being a well woman; have become careless and unconcerned about everything. I am in bed now. I have had several doctors, but they did me but little good.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been recommended to me by a friend, and I have made up my mind to give it a fair trial.

"I write this letter with the hope of hearing from you in regard to my case."—MRS. S. J. WATSON, Hampton, Va.

November 27, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to acknowledge to you the benefit that your advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"I had been suffering with female troubles for some time, could walk but a short distance, had terrible bearing down pains in lower part of my bowels, backache, and pain in ovary. I used your medicine for four months and was so much better that I could walk three times the distance that I could before.

"I am to-day in better health than I have been for more than two years, and I know it is all due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I recommend your advice and medicine to all women who suffer."—MRS. S. J. WATSON, Hampton, Va.

This is positive proof that Mrs. Pinkham is more competent to advise sick women than any other person. Write her. It costs you nothing.

Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Loss of Appetite, Foul Breath, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Sick Headache, Heart Palpitation, Loss of Energy, Nervous Exhaustion, General Debility, Constipation, Liver Ailments, Impure and Thin Blood, Female Troubles, Bronchial and Lung Diseases, etc., all are due to a Diseased Stomach. STORIETTES.

One night, at the Garrick club, a number of the members were discussing the merits of a new Hamlet who had appeared that evening. W. S. Gilbert had taken no part in the arguments, for or against. At last one of the others ventured: "Well, Gilbert, what do you think of his Hamlet?" "Oh," responded the witty librettist, "I think it was funny without being vulgar."

According to the testimony of an American correspondent in Porto Rico, we still woefully lack popularity among the natives there. This is his description of the manner in which a suit, to which an American is a party, is conducted in one of the insular courts there: Court—"You are the plaintiff in this case?" Litigant—"Yes, your honor?" Court—"You are an American, I presume?" Litigant—"Yes, your honor." Court—"You lose."

Among the clever epigrams which occur in Mrs. Craigie's new society drama, "The Wisdom of the Wise," which is now being performed in London by George Alexander, are: "Mrs. Bistern has made so many experiments that she has had no time to gain experience." "What a man has done bores everybody, but what he is going to do is always delightful." "I hate a man who can only love those whom he esteems. He always runs away with his friend's wife." "It is easy enough to be faithful to some one you don't love—that, in my opinion, is true virtue." "Where is Sarah now? In bed with ice on her temples! She may be a woman for a crisis, but we have to know it for weeks afterward."

Gold! Gold! Gold!

The latest El Dorado is reported to be on Nome City Beach, Alaska. Thousands of people are hastening there, many of whom return broken in health. Of what avail is gold when health is gone? Guard your health with the best of all medicines, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will regulate the bowels, stir up the liver, invigorate the kidneys, and absolutely cure indigestion, constipation, malaria, chills and fever. It's a good medicine to keep on hand.

Here is a conundrum which Thomas B. Reed recently propounded: "If killing ten thousand Filipinos in ten months, as our soldiers are said to have done, is benevolent assimilation, how many must the Spanish have killed in three hundred years to warrant us in calling their rule in the archipelago tyrannous?"

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison, one of the ablest men who has figured in our public life, has always been handicapped by his unresponsive, cold manner. When he was in the senate, at Washington, D. C., in the early eighties, he always brought his luncheon to the committee room. He carried it in his coat pocket, and would eat it while he went on with his work. One day when he got it out as usual from his pocket, he looked it all over ruefully, for it did look rather flat and dubious. He finally remarked to those near by that he guessed he must have sat on it accidentally. One of his colleagues—one who had recently been ignored by Harrison—spoke up impulsively: "Well, by Jove, Harrison, if you've sat on it, I'll bet you a sixpence it is frozen solid"; and of course a shout went up from the whole committee. Harrison took the joke kindly and joined in the laugh.

Some men acquire that tired feeling from looking for an easy job.

POLICE OFFICER RESCUED.

Officer A. C. Swanson of the Council Bluffs Force Tells an Interesting Story.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 19, 1901.—(Special.)—Kindhearted Officer Swanson of the local police force is very popular in this city. He has lived here for seventeen years, and has enjoyed many high offices in social and society work. He is now Vice-President of the "Dannebrog" Brotherhood, the largest Danish secret society in America, which combines benevolent with the social features. Owing to the constant exposure and many hours on his feet, which his duty as a police officer makes unavoidable, Mr. Swanson became the victim of serious Kidney and Liver Trouble. He was very bad, but has entirely recovered. He gives the story in his own words as follows:

"I have been a sufferer for many years with Kidney and Liver Trouble, and have tried many remedies, some of which gave me temporarily relief, and others which were absolutely worthless. I began to think that there was no help for me, when my nephew gave me a part of a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills which he had left, saying that it would do no harm to try them, as they had certainly fixed him all right. What he gave me helped me so much that I felt justified in purchasing more, and I grew slowly better. It took almost two months to effect a complete cure, as mine was a very bad case, but I can cheerfully and truthfully say that I am a well man today, and I am very grateful that Dodd's Kidney Pills were thus brought to my notice."

The wonderful cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills in Iowa have created quite a sensation in some parts of the state. There does not seem to be any case of Lame Back, Rheumatism, Kidney or Bladder Trouble which these wonderful Pills cannot cure. They are certainly popular here, and the sale through the local druggists is very large.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Senate—While the senate was in executive session today an effort was made to secure the confirmation of the nomination of James H. Harlan, son of Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court to be Attorney General for Porto Rico, but the action was prevented by the objection of Senator Pettigrew, who severely criticized the appointment of sons of Justices Harlan and McKenna of the supreme court to positions in Cuba, and said that the act was indecent. Bacon's amendment to the army bill to strike out of the bill the words "conferring upon the president power to increase from the minimum to the maximum limit the strength of the infantry, artillery and cavalry arms of the service," was defeated.

House—The house spent another day on the river and harbor bill without completing it. Twenty-six pages were disposed of today.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Senate—Speeches in opposition to the army bill were delivered by Allen, Teller and Butler. McCumber made an argument in support of the measure. The feature of the debate was the denunciation of the practice of hazing at the West Point Military Academy. Allen, Money and McCumber declared it to be an evidence of brutality and cowardice, the Mississippi senator maintaining that a cadet whom others attempted to haze would be justified in killing his assailants.

House—The river and harbor appropriation bill was passed today by the house. The bill has been under consideration for over a week and has been assailed from many quarters, but its friends have stood solidly by it and defeated every amendment to which the river and harbor committee would not agree. The bill passed practically as it came from the committee. It carries slightly less than $60,000,000, of which $23,000,000 is in direct appropriations. The section empowering the president to negotiatewith Great Britain for the maintenance of suitable levels on the great lakes was broadened so as to provide for a joint commission to conduct the negotiations.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senate—Mr. Quay's friends from Pennsylvania came to Washington by the hundreds to witness his induction into office and they brought with them floral offerings literally by the carload. While Mr. Quay's desk and the desks of other senators adjoining his were banked with beautiful and costly floral pieces, scarcely an appreciable quantity of the profusion of flowers his friends had provided could be displayed in the senate chamber. The demonstration accorded to Mr. Quay when he entered the chamber amounted to an ovation, the hundreds of persons who thronged the galleries, rising and applauding him tumultuously. During the day's session the army reorganization bill was discussed at length by Money, McComas and Bates. The Mississippi senator devoted some attention to the practice of hazing at West Point, which he bitterly denounced.

House—The entire day was spent upon the bill to revise and codify the postal laws.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Senate—Just before 6 o'clock the senate finally disposed of the army reorganization bill. The measure having originated in the senate, the final question was not upon its passage, but upon agreeing to the senate amendments. They were agreed to by a vote of 43 to 23. While party lines were drawn on the measure, four democrats voted for it. Senators Lindsay of Kentucky, McLaurin of South Carolina, Morgan of Alabama, and Sullivan of Mississippi. Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, who was detained at his home by illness, was paired against the bill with Senator Spooner of Wisconsin. Numerous amendments were made to the bill, but in general the committee was sustained, and the measure, with the exception of the elimination of the canteen clause, is not widely different from that reported to the senate. A determined effort was made today to amend the bill so as to provide against sale of liquor in the Philippines and to prohibit the importation of any kind of intoxicants into the islands, but it was defeated.

House—The house spent the entire day today on the bill to refer to the court of claims the claims of William Cramp & Sons' Ship Building Company of Philadelphia, for alleged damages due to the delay of the government in furnishing the plate and material for the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana and the cruisers New York and Columbia. The claims aggregate $1,367,244. The bill has been conspicuous at every session of congress for several years. Its opponents filibustered against the bill, but the previous question was finally ordered.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senate—Under a special order the senate devoted the greater part of its session today to eulogies upon the late Senator John H. Gear, who died in this city last July. Mr. Allison at the conclusion of routine business, presented resolutions expressive of the regret of the senate at the death of Senator Gear and providing that business of the senate be suspended in order that his associates might pay fitting tribute to his memory. Senator Gear was much beloved by his colleagues in the senate and the tributes paid to his character and distinguished services were heartfelt and eloquent. Those who paid tributes to his memory were Senators Allison of Iowa, Platt of Connecticut, Cockrell of Missouri, Nelson of Minnesota, Spooner of Wisconsin, Morgan of Alabama, Mason of Illinois, Clay of Georgia and Dolliver of Iowa.

PARISIAN LAWYERS.

Their Life Is Very Different from That of the American Attorneys.

Lawyers in France, according to a Rochester gentleman, who has just returned from a three years' sojourn in Paris, do not have such an easy time as they do in this country, says the Rochester Union and Advertiser. There, far from encouraging the bright young men of the land to enter into the legal profession, it would seem that that they are discouraged and every obstacle thrown in their path, the result generally being that it is only a rich man who can be a lawyer. "Under the regulations at present in force," says this Rochester gentleman, "barristers, after they have kept their terms, and passed a sort of three years' novitiate, during which they have the title of advocate, but have no voice in the deliberations of the council of discipline, and are not inscribed on the rolls, can plead during the three years' probation, but it is a sort of empty privilege in nine cases out of ten. When an eminent barrister in France employs a junior it is generally some one incribed on the rolls; should he employ the probationer, the honor thus accorded him must suffice. He does not pay him. But he must live, and here is where the problem comes in, which is usually more easily solved by the American or English young lawyer than it is by his Parisian brother. In the first place, there is the outlay for his gown, or beretta, which comes close to 80 francs, unless he prefers to hire it at the rate of 10 cents per day. Then he must engage some one to teach him deportment, for this is an essential qualification in this land, where King Etiquette rules with an iron hand. The services of a professor of the conservatory must also be called in to train his voice, unless nature has been kind to him in that respect. But these expenses are mere incidents. He must, above all, not live in small chambers and rent dingy offices. Poverty is a poor key to open the pockets of his clients.

"Macaulay improves, Macaulay improves!" Sydney Smith remarked one day: "I have observed in him of late flashes of—silence." The "sonorous vivacity" of this enormous talker nettled Smith, who found it impossible often to voice his own wit and wisdom. "I wish I could write poetry like you," he complained to a friend; "I would write an 'Inferno,' and I would put Macaulay among a number of disputants and gag him!" Another contemporary described Macaulay as "slopping all over on every subject and standing in the slops."

Congressmen Get Curious Letters.

Congressmen get curious letters, and probably the most curious of recent date is that just received by Mr. McCall of Massachusetts from one of his constituents, asking him to "send at once one good, healthy male baby." But congressman are not the only persons subject to freak inquiries. The secretary of the Chicago board of trade received a letter a while ago from a Kansas man, who wrote: "Please send me at once all news and all facts about Chicago." Another westerner wrote to say that he had forwarded a carload of jack-rabbits, and added: "Sell them at once and forward the money, as I need it right away."

The Size of It.

He—Weally, I don't wish to boast, but I'm suah my fam'ly is quite awistocratic. She—Yes; under certain conditions it would be above criticism. He—Aw! How, may I awsk? She—Well, if you had been born an orphan and died in infancy, say. He—Aw!—Brooklyn Life.

Almost Blind.

Mr. D. Kessing, Bannock, Ky., says: My little four year old girl's eyes were so weak from birth that she could not stand any light at all. Was treated by several physicians without benefit. Three bottles not only restored her sight, but made her stronger and healthier than she ever was in her life. Sold by agent in every town.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance, in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

We had intended to have Mr. Terhufen appoint us mayor pro-em during his absence, but for some reason failed.

What's the matter with building a brick school house for the Independent district of Klemme? Just as well as not.

The Cudahy "kidnaping" case has caused more gossip and terror among the rich than all the distruction in the Texas storm.

Patronize those who advertise. They deserve your trade because they ask for it a good deal harder than the fellow who don't advertise.

Representative Loud of California is "working the house" to pass some of his postal laws. He wanted to change the rate of postage on second class mail matter last winter; this winter he wants to change the whole postal code and next winter we expect to here of his wanting to change, revise and codify the whole constitution.

South Dakota productions. The claim is made for South Dakota that it has for he third consecutive year produced more wealth per capita than any other state in the Union, the total for the year 1900 being $106,500,000. Of this sum $27.000,000 comes from live stock. $18,000,000 from corn, $15.000,000 wheat, and $12,000,000 from minerals.

Look out for the month of February! It will be a bad one. The snow is going to snow and the wind is going to blow, and the storm period will last 'thru-out' the greater portion of the mouth. Place your confidence in lots of snow and high winds—blizzards and bad ones at that. The wind will be colored next month, when it snows it will be white and when it don't snow it will be blew.

Everyone who witnessed the fire last Tuesday will say that Klemme's "bucket brigade" is hard to beat. Correct. But would it be a feasible idea to always depend on a "bucket brigade" to quench the flames or work in defence of them? No sir. Fire protection of the right kind is the proper thing! Josh Billings said: "The proper time to set a hen is when the hen is ready" The proper time to set a water works is when the people are ready. Try it and see. Now!

One hundred and seventy pension bills have been passed at the last session of congress. The pension of Gen. A. V. Rice a reminiscence of the Civil war who lost a leg in the battle of Vicksburg, has been raised from $36 to $100, dollars per month Mr. Davis, father of Senator Davis is slated to receive $50.

If the people of Iowa will look around they will find many a decrepit citizen and many a reminiscence of the civil war, who has lost almost complete control of his hands or feet for which he gets the paltry sum of $12 or $15. And that's what we call good legisation.

It is not only ridiculous but amusing to note how some of our county papers throw boquets at themselves! In every issue telling of their superiority to the other county papers, 'self praise is half rot' and it wouldn't be so bad to say self praise is three quarters rot; the remaining quarter being very unwholesome. Anyway it's blamed disgusting—this braggadocia, puffing, vain conceit, boasting, ostentatious business.

Fred Goodwin, alias Lew Kirby, formerly and better known throughout this section as "Jasper Highpockets" is found to be of a bigimistical inclination, having married not less than three women. He is now badly wanted by the authorities in Mason City and other places. When he is caught he will undoubtedly have his memory jogged enough to realize the folly of his misdeeds. Then he can figure out why it is so—hard to sing in Sing Sing or be jolly in Joliet.

What's the matter with having fire protection of some kind here in Klemme. We ain't so good but what a fire would burn here just as well as at Garner. If you don't beleive it look at the school house. If nothing better can be done a carload invoice of squirt guns can be purchased and distributed among the people and then when a fire breaks out every man can grab his squirt gun, rush off for a pail of water, rush back to the scene of destruction and squirt till his squirter runs dry and then—rush off for more water.

There is a rumor afloat among our people that the location of the new school house will be changed. The old site is a little bit out of the way and if a location could be found more conveninly located near the center of the town it would be much better. Some are thinking seriously of placing it in the southern part of town, others want to rebuild on the old site, and some would like to have it placed on the block just east of the photograph gallery The laitor idea seems the most feasible, as it would then be alongside of main street. This would easily bring it within range of fire protection—when we get it.

The TIMES office is in receipt of a neat little "hand book for Iowa schools." The 1901 edition issued by the Department of Public Instruction, and a compliment from Richard C. Barrett, Supt. of Public Instruction. This book is the property of the school district and is an invaluable aid to teachers of much practice as well as those just beginning the work of education. It gives rules and regulations that should be impressed and vivfied in the minds of every teacher, principal and public instructor. The teachers throughout this section have been supplied and Superintendent of Public Instruction, Richard C. Barrett is deserving of praise in his noble work of building up Iowa's Schools.

Sometime ago a statement was published in the Times saying the population of the Incorporated town of Klemme was 262. While it would not be wise to dispute the census enumerators report it grieves our citizens to think that the population is so limited. In consequence some of them have taken another census of our village, leaving out all new residenteis who have taken up abode in Klemme since June 30th, or since the census was taken. By so doing the town is found to be inhabited by 317. These are actual Klemmeites, they live here and stay here; the heads of families and their subheads. This number does not enroll all the young men who were away from town last summer when the enumerator made the rounds. They are in town now and must be counted as part of Klemme's real population. The statemhnt that 350 people belong here would not be greatly amiss, and that is precicely it.

Gliddon of Britt will be glad to hear from the citizens of any town in the county which desires to have the institute meeting. A Most Liberal offer.

All our farmer readers should take advantake of the unprecedented clubing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper The Iowa Home tead, it's special Farmea's Institute Editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four ne year only $1.50. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throghout the West and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. VICTORIA DEAD Passes Peacefully Away, Surrounded by Her Family.

London, Jan. 22.—7:03 p. m.—A telegram from the Prince of Wales to the Lord Mayor, timed at Osborne, 6:45 p. m., says the queen has passed away. The text of the Prince of Wales' dispatch to the Lord Mayor is as follows:

Osborne House, Jan. 22, 6:45 p. m.—My beloved mother has just passed away, surrounded by her children and grandchildren.

ALBERT EDWARD.

The greatest event in the memory of this generation, the most stupendous changes in existing conditions that could possibly be imagined, has taken place quietly, almost gently, upon the anniversary of the death of Queen Victoria's father, the Duke of Kent.

The end of this careeer, never equalled by any woman in the world's history, came in a simply furnished room in Osborne house. The most respected of all women, living or dead, lay in a great four-posted bed and made a shrunken atom, whose aged face and figure were a cruel mockery of the fair girl who in 1837 began to rule over England.

Around her were gathered almost every descendant of her line. Well within view of her dying eyes there hung a portrait of the prince consort. It was he who designed the room and every part of the castle.

In scarcely audible words, the white-haired bishop of Winchester prayed beside her, as he had often prayed beside her sovereign, for he was her chaplain at Windsor. With bowed heads the imperious ruler of the German empire and the man who is now King of England, the woman who has succeeded to the title of queen, the princes and princesses, and those of less than royal designation listened to the bishop's ceaseless prayer.

Six o'clock passed. The bishop continued his intercession. One of the younger children asked a question in a thrill, childish treble, and was immediately silenced. The women of this royal family sobbed faintly and the men shuffled uneasily.

At exactly half past 6 Sir James Reid held up his hand, and the people in the room knew that England had lost her queen. The bishop pronounced the benediction.

The queen passed away quite peacefully. She suffered no pain. Those who were now mourners went to their rooms.

The body of Queen Victoria was embalmed and will probably be taken to Windsor on Saturday. The coffin arrived last evening from London.

It was thought that the queen was dying about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and carriages were sent to Osborne cottage and the rectory to bring all the princes and princesses and the bishop of Winchester to her bedside. It seemed then very near the end, but when things looked the worst the queen had one of her rallies, due to her wonderful constitution, opened her eyes, and recognized the Prince of Wales, the princes and Emperor William. She asked to see one of her faithful servants, a member of the royal household. He hastened to the room, but before he got there the queen had passed into a fitful sleep.

The Prince of Wales was very much affected when the doctors at last informed him that his mother had breathed her last. Emperor William, himself deeply affected, did his best to minister comfort to his sorrow-stricken uncle, whose new dignity he was the first to acknowledge.

For several weeks the queen had been failing. On Monday last she summoned Lord Roberts and asked him some very searching questions regarding the war in South Africa. On Tuesday she went for a drive, but was visibly affected. On Wednesday she suffered a paralytic stroke, accompanied by intense physical weakness. It was her first illness in 81 years, and she would not admit it. Then her condition grew so serious that, against her wishes, the family were summoned. When they arrived her reason had partially succumbed to paralysis and weakness.

ACCOUNT OF QUEEN'S ILLNESS.

Deaths of Relatives and South African Reverses Caused Nervous Collapse.

New York, Jan. 22.—A dispatch to the World from London says: Your correspondent has obtained from a source within court circles the first comprehensive and actual account of the queen's illness that has been given out. The facts given place the illness of the queen in a startling and pathetic light. They show that her mind has been failing for many months, even before her visit to Ireland. She had been a mental wreck for months. Whenever it was officially announced that she made felicitous responses to speeches at public functions it is a matter of cold fact that the poor old queen was in such a daze that all she could say to her companions was: "Where am I?"

Several times when she has appeared in public during the past six or eight months she has fallen asleep.

Had it been anyone else but the queen of England it would have been plain long ago that the malady was senile decay. And that truthfully is what affects Victoria.

But for her physical breaking up of the past week, due to an attack of paralysis in the left side, it would have been possible for the court and the royal household to have kept from the British people knowledge of her mental decay for an indefinite period. For the queen had lapses of intellectual vigor, but these were more distressing to her than her periods of mental density.

The assassination of the king of Italy, the illness of her eldest child, Emperor Frederick, the death of her second son, the duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the death of Prince Christian, son of her daughter Helena, and the death of her oldest and dearest friend, the Dowager Lady Churchill, senior lady of the bedchamber and member of the royal household for forty years, have all contributed to the undermining of the queen's health. The war in South Africa has caused her untold mental agony and with the disclosures made by Lord Roberts came the beginning of the end.

Shot Through the Heart.

Dubuque, Jan. 23.—Frances Quinn, a girl of 13, accidentally shot herself at Elkader through the heart with a revolver, which was lying on a dresser. She died in a few minutes.

Success comes from not making the same mistake twice.

Organ grinders have struck a snag in Boston. In that city there is an ordinance which gives the right to any citizen to object to an organ grinder playing his instrument within three hundred feet of the objector's residence. If the musician fails to move on, the police are required to enforce the law.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

AN INHERENT DEFECT.

Titus Amendment Made Up of Several, Separate Amendments.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—In a leading article the Register says: "It has been discovered that the Titus biennial election amendment is inherently defective. It is made up of several separate amendments to the constitution. The Iowa constitution guarantees the people the right to vote on every proposed amendment to the constitution separately. The constitution says:

"'Article 10, Section 2: If two or more amendments shall be submitted at the same time, they shall be submitted in such a manner that the electors shall vote for or against each of such amendments separately.'

"The Titus amendment for biennial elections proposes amendments to at least a half dozen different sections of the constitution of the state. Some of them are in conflict. In any event, though submitted under the guise of a single mendment, they are separate amendments to the constitution, and that fundamental guarantee of the rights of the people provides that every amendment shall be voted on separately."

A CHILD GROUND TO PIECES.

Horrifying Accident Witnessed by Grief Stricken Mother.

Waterloo, Jan. 25.—Willie Fry, six years old, son of Henry Fry, was struck by a double header train on the Chicago Great Western railroad here and instantly killed. Both engines passed over the body and it was cut in two and horribly mangled. The horrifying accident occurred at a place on the road but a few feet from the home of the boy, and the mother stood on the porch and watched the sight of her child being ground to death under the wheels of the train. She ran to the scene of the accident and threw herself down on the lifeless trunk of her boy and became crazed with grief. The boy's older sister had crossed the track just ahead of him to buy some buttermilk from a milkman, and the child attempted to follow her and was caught.

Compromised a Criminal Case.

Clinton, Jan. 27.—A few weeks ago George Durstein, son of a wealthy farmer living near Galena, shot Amelia and Tillie Bergman, because the former did not seem to reciprocate his affections. Durstein was arrested and placed in jail. His father called upon the young woman and has effected a reconciliation. He proposes to deed Amelia a good farm and give her $2,000, when she and her son are married. The girl and her mother have agreed to the proposal, but as yet they have not succeeded in getting the complaint dismissed. The girl will not appear against the accused, and the case will most likely be dismissed.

Accused of Extortion.

Marshalltown, Jan. 25.—Caluse W. Reed of Zearing and Otto Radloff, residing near here, have been arrested on the charge of extortion, preferred by Mrs. Callie LePlant. She claims that the two young men visited her home, and that Reed demanded of her that she sign a $150 note, payable to him in sixty days, or he would have her arrested for an alleged crime. He claimed that she had been instrumental in causing the separation of himself and wife. Mrs. LaPlant refused to sign the note, according to her story, and swore out the information. Extortion is a penitentiary offense.

Set Fire to a Livery Barn.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—Officers Livingstone and King arrested Rudolph Muhlehalter, a native of Switzerland, upon the latter's confession that he fired the Star livery barn, burning up twenty-five head of horses. The fellow took the officers to the barn and showed them where he started the blaze. He gave no reason for the crime other than that he was mad and determined to set fire to that barn or some other building. Muhlehalter is thought to be of unsound mind. He has been in police court a number of times and is regarded a sort of an imbecile.

Claims His Employes Robbed.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 25.—H. S. Minnick, a prominent grocer of this city, filed a petition in bankruptcy this morning. Creditors have claims against him to the amount of $4,000 and he is indebted to several banks of this city for large sums. Mr. Minnick states that he has been systematically robbed by employes, claiming that he has lost $2,500 from this source recently. The case is arousing a sensation, as Mr. Minnick was considered a wealthy man and his failure was totally unexpected.

Object to Machine Goods.

Sioux City, Jan. 25.—Representative candy makers from Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Missouri and South Dakota met and decided to make a covenant among themselves that they would not put in one of the new chocolate drop machines that are being introduced into the east. The machines cost $3,000 each, but have a capacity of 3,500 pounds each day, the work of forty girls. This action means the retention of about 10,000 girls in the six states named in their present employment.

Two Boys Missing.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Johnnie Moriarity, aged 14, and his brother, aged 9, started from their home six miles north of the city about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, with the intention of going to school, and have not been heard from since. The community near the Moriarity home is excited over the disappearance, but the boys' parents believe they ran away voluntarily. The parents are wealthy and prominent and some believe it a case of kidnaping.

Lumberman Lamb Badly Hurt.

Clinton, Jan. 24.—It is learned that Artemus Lamb's injuries, sustained in the Union Pacific wreck, are much severer than at first reported. At the time of the accident he was eating in the diner. It went off the track and turned over two or three times. Mr. Lamb's condition is not dangerous. He is at the head of the big saw mills here and has extensive lumber interests in Minneapolis and other places in the lumber district.

Attempted Abduction at Mt. Pleasant.

Mt. Pleasant, Jan. 22.—Considerable excitement was occasioned by an attempt to abduct Ruth Porter, the 9-year-old girl of Mr. and Mrs. Asbury Porter. The little girl was on a nearby pond skating, when two men in a buggy drove up. One sprang out and grabbed her by the arm. Frightened half out of her wits, the little girl screamed and fought so viciously that the man desisted and, hastening to his team, jumped in and drove rapidly to the north. The child is the favorite niece of Mrs. Beckwith and Mrs. McClure, who would be willing to pay handsomely for her recovery.

NOW IN HANDS OF THE COURT.

Titus Amendment Appeal Case Submitted to Supreme Court.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—The Titus amendment case was formally submitted to the supreme court yesterday, and a decision on this much-involved controversy is expected in the course of the next ten days. For four hours the court heard the oral arguments, the court room during both forenoon and afternoon being crowded with spectators, both from Des Moines and from various parts of the state.

The court took up the case at once, on convening at 9 o'clock. The opening argument was presented by A. B. Cummins of Des Moines, who argued for the validity of the measure. Marsh W. Bailey of Washington, the plaintiff in the district court of Washington county, and now appellee, followed Mr. Cummins, taking the position the amendment was unconstitutional. Milton Remley, ex-attorney general, made the third argument, holding the amendment should be construed according to intent and the terms of the old officers were not extended. These three arguments occupied the forenoon. From 2 o'clock to 2:30 S. W. Brookhart of Washington, the appellant in the case, made an argument for the validity and literal construction of the amendment, and from 2:30 to 3 o'clock C. A. Irwin of Sioux City presented arguments on the same side of the question.

WILL BE A REGIMENTAL POST.

Plans for the Army Post at Des Moines Are Revised.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—The fondest hopes of the promoters of the army post have been to see established here a squadron of cavalry, four troops, and possibly a battery or two of artillery. Now comes the authorized statement from the war department that the post will be built and equipped to accommodate a full regiment, twelve troops of cavalry. This means an expenditure at the outset of three times as much as was anticipated. While the full regiment will probably not be placed here as soon as the post is completed, yet in time it will come and every move made and every dollar spent from the start will be with this end in view. As a beginner, the army post committee hopes to secure an appropriation of $150,000 or $200,000 from congress at its present session, in order that the work may be begun this spring. But this will be only a drop in the bucket. The total appropriation in the end will probably be over $1,000,000.

Boone Man Asks $10,000 Damages.

Boone, Jan. 28.—R. F. Williams of this city has filed papers in a suit for $10,000 against L. Holloway, charged with alienation of Williams' wife's affections. Both parties are residents of Marcy township. Mr. and Mrs. Williams had lived together twenty-five years, or up to the year 1899, when Mrs. Williams left her husband and four children and went to live with her parents. Williams claims that because his wife was of unsound mind, her parents, who are Mr. and Mrs. L. Holloway, took advantage of her and influenced her to leave her husband and children. He alleges that they were instrumental in having his wife sue for a divorce and for financially ruining him.

Pay Absconder's Debts.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Daniel Taylor, of the firm of Smith, Taylor & Co. of New York, has just settled all of "Jake" Hite's accounts with the Washington banks. The shortage was close to ten thousand dollars. Mr. Taylor says Hite was a member of the firm and had their unbounded confidence. He says they will likely prosecute him if they can locate him. It is also reported that a charming (?) widow may have accompanied the gay horse buyer. His wife and family are heart broken. Hite was the best known horse dealer in Iowa and was known almost as well throughout Illinois and Missouri. He had a beautiful home here, unlimited credit and was a devout church attendant.

Fort Dodge, Jan. 28.—A curious will case has just developed at Spirit Lake. A resident of that place, John Landers, died recently, leaving property to the amount of $30,000. He had one child, a daughter, who had married H. P. Asp contrary to her father's will. Landers left all of his property in the hands of trustees for her children, but carefully arranged that neither his daughter nor her husband should receive the benefit of any of it. His daughter claims that he was insane and has brought suit to break the will.

Emberling was 41 years of age and married.

Bank Robbers at Dallas Center.

Dallas Center, Jan. 27.—The Citizens' bank and S. H. Goodwin's real estate office were entered by robbers. They broke the combination off the bank vault, but did not get inside and probably were frightened away. Goodwin's safe was broken open and papers and notes carried off, but no money was taken. Martin Was Tired of Life.

Ottumwa, Jan. 25.—Andrew Martin, a well known farmer 23 years of age, living eight miles north of this city, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the head. The deed was committed on the public highway. Parties living near the scene heard the shot and going to where it came from, found Martin, who was not yet dead. He was revived at a farmer's house and admitted that he had shot himself, giving as the reason that he was tired of life. Martin had only been married two weeks. Hopes are entertained for his recovery.

PROCLAIM EDWARD KING.

Proclamation Read at Various Places in the City of London.

London, Jan. 25.—London yesterday was given a glimpse of mediaeval times. The quaint ceremonies with which King Edward VII was proclaimed at various points of the metroplis exactly followed ancient precedent. The officials purposely arranged the function an hour ahead of the published announcement and the inhabitants, when they awoke, were surprised to find the entire way between St. James palace and the city lined with troops. About 10,000 soldiers, life guards, horse guards, foot guards and other cavalry and infantry regiments had been brought from Aldershot and London barracks after midnight. All the officers had crepe on their arms, and the drums and brass instruments were shrouded with crepe. The troops in themselves made an imposing spectacle, but they were entirely eclipsed by the strange spectacle presented by the officials of the college of arms.

The ceremony began at St. James palace, where at 9 o'clock Edward VII was proclaimed kind of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. The proclamation, which was read by William Henry Weldon, king-at-arms since 1894, and formerly Windsor herald, was as follows:

"Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to call to his mercy our late sovereign, Lady Queen Victoria, of blessed and glorious memory, by whose decease the imperial crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince Albert Edward, we, therefore, the lords spiritual and temporal of this realm, being here assisted with those of her late majesty's privy council, with numbers of other principal gentlemen of quality, the lord mayor, aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby with one voice consent of tongue and heart to publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince Albert Edward is now, by the death of our late sovereign of happy memory, become our only lawful and rightful liege lord, Edward VII, by the grace of God, king of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, defender of the faith, emperor of India, to whom we acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom all kings and queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince Edward VII with long and happy years to reign over us."

CONGER CALLS ON PRINCE CHING.

Prince Regrets that Foreigners Do Not Give Up Forbidden City.

Peking, Jan. 28.—United States Minister Conger called upon Prince Ching Saturday. The visit was mainly a social one. Prince Ching expressed regret at the refusal of the ministers to give the Chinese the Forbidden city in order that they might prepare for the emperor, saying that it was impossible for the emperor to return to Peking until a place had been prepared for his residence. Prince Ching also stated that he had informed the missionaries that the Chinese government had no objection to their remaining in the country and continuing their work, which was often beneficial to the country. He considered many of them good men.

BOERS CAPTURE A TRAIN.

And a Number of British Troops Were on Board at the Time.

Kimberley, Jan. 28.—A train with troops and military stores on board was waylaid and captured by the Boers at Slijplijp, near Fourteen Streams (north of Kimberley) Friday morning. The republicans captured a small post of Dubli fusileers, then blew up a culvert and waited for the train. An armored train has gone in pursuit of the Boers.

Cape Town, Jan. 28.—Twenty Cape police surrendered to the Boers at Devondale, north of Vryburg, January 21, without firing a shot. It is reported that General Prinsloo was wounded in the fighting of January 16.

Washington, Jan. 22.—His Majesty, the King, Osborne House, Isle of Wight: I have received with profound sorrow the lamentable tidings of the death of her majesty, the queen. Allow me, sir, to offer my sincere sympathy and that of the American people in your personal bereavement and the loss Great Britain has suffered in the death of its venerable and illustrious sovereign whose noble life and beneficent influence have promoted the peace and won the affection of the world.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Teddy's Slaughter of Carnivora.

Meeker, Colo., Jan. 25.—News direct from Keystone ranch, at which the Roosevelt party is stopping, shows that between the 12th and 22nd of January twelve grown mountain lions, three kittens and eight lynx cats were killed. On Saturday last the party had quite an exciting adventure with one lion. The lion was held captive by and was fighting with the whole pack of hounds. Suddenly it seized one of the dogs. Governor Roosevelt shoved the breech of his gun into the lion's mouth, holding the gun by one hand, with the other striking the lion a death blow with his knife. The governor has decided to stay for another two weeks.

Towne to Talk.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senator Towne, of Minnesota, has offered the following joint resolution: "That justice, welfare and national order demand the immediate cessation of hostilities in the Philippines upon terms recognizing the independence of the people and conserving and guaranteeing the interests of the United States." The senator gave notice that he would address the senate on the resolution Monday.

Charity covers a multitude of sins and a buttoned-up coat hides from view a dirty shirt.

Free education, as some people understand it, is any kind for which somebody else has to pay.

Some men acquire that tired feeling from looking for an easy job.

Purchase Two More Islands.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The senate has ratified the treaty with Spain for the acquisition of the islands of Sibutu and Cagayan, of the Philippine group, at a cost of $100,000. There were no votes to spare, a two-thirds vote being needed, and the vote standing 38 to 19. In the debate prior to the ratification a number of senators manifested a disposition to oppose the further acquisition of Oriental territory. Senators Lodge and Chandler spoke in behalf of the treaty and Senators Bacon, Money and Pettigrew in opposition.

CORONATION IS FAR DISTANT.

Court Gazette Indicates It Will Not Take Place Until 1902.

London, Jan. 25.—An extraordinary gazette publishes an order in council, that "it is expected that all persons upon the present occasion, the death of her late majesty of blessed and meritorious memory, will put themselves into the deepest mourning."

Another order in council substitutes "king" for "queen" and "Edward" for "Victoria" in the prayer book. It also inserts "Our gracious queen Alexandra; George, Duke of Cornwall and York, and the Duchess of Cornwall and York."

The fact that the court goes into mourning for a year, and the further fact that the public is enjoined to go into the "deepest" mourning, lead to the supposition that the coronation will not occur until 1902.

The instruction that the Duke of York is to be named in the prayer book "Duke of Cornwall" seems to throw light upon the much debated question of the heir apparent's title. It was supposed that the title "Prince of Wales," which belongs only to a son born of the king, would be conferred upon the Duke of York by royal patent; but the gazette announcement seems to indicate that this will not be done, and that the Duke of York will henceforth be known as the Duke of Cornwall.

MONTREAL'S COSTLY FIRE

Buildings Destroyed Valued at A most $3,000,000.

Montreal, Jan. 24.—One of the most destructive fires from which this city has ever suffered began at 8 o'clock last night, and notwithstanding the efforts of the entire fire department, the progress of the flames was not checked until 1 o'clock this morning. By that time it had destroyed property valued at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000, and was still burning, though the appearance was that the firemen have at last got it under control.

Included in the property burned is the splendid Board of Trade building, which cost over half a million dollars, with over a hundred tenants and a half dozen large firms and two scores of smaller concerns. Outside of the Board of Trade building there was not a modern structure among those burned. The narrow streets, antiquated buildings and the inflammable nature of the stocks they contained, made a combination which the department was powerless to overcome. The fire practically burned until it came to an open space, which gave the firemen an opportunity for effective work.

CHOCTAWS JOIN CREEKS.

Indian Uprising Assumes More Serious Proportions.

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 25.—The reports of the Choctaw uprising are fully confirmed. Scouts sent out from this city report that the disaffected Choctaws have a number of Creek Snakes among them and they have been quietly organizing and arming for some time. They call themselves Choctaw Snakes. They comprise all those Indians who are opposed to allotment, and the conflict is between them and the treaty Indians. While non-citizens are not in danger, it is stated that the Snakes have planned to destroy all the railroads in their nation by burning bridges and section houses on a preconcerted night.

They have deposed Governor Duke and issued an order to all citizens to cease leasing or renting to whites. The first offense they will punish with fifty lashes, they say; ears will be cut off for the second offense and death for the third. They have organized and have leaders in every Choctaw county, and claim to have a membership of 2,600.

United States Marshal Grady has sent the leaders word that arrests will follow the first violation of the law, no matter what may be the result. He has wired the department for permission to swear in special deputies and if this is granted, he says he will be able to handle them and will not ask for troops.

Muskogee, I. T., Jan. 25.—The fact that General Lee has ordered a detachment of cavalry from Fort Reno to the scene of the recent Indian uprising in the Creek nation has aroused the Creeks to a greater degree of defiance, and they are sending out light horsemen all over the five tribes country, appealing to those dissatisfied to join them against the soldiers.

Governor Brown of the Seminoles, has appealed to the authorities here for aid, as a number of his tribe threaten to join the Creeks, and it is expected that within twenty-four hours they will number over 1,000 armed Indians, all of whom will be compelled to swear allegiance to their cause, and stand in defense against the soldiers.

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 28.—There are no new developments among the Choctaw Indians. Gov. Dukes says he can maintain order without the help of the federal government. It is not believed the Indians made the threats accredited to them. They say they will not destroy or injure railway property or molest the whites in any way. The trouble in the Creek nation is believed to be over. The presence of troops is desired, however, to maintain order. A report that the Choctaw Indians had donned war paint and feathers is not true.

ISLANDS IN NEED OF IT.

The Philippine Commissioners Advocate the Spooner Bill.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The president has transmitted to the senate a report of the secretary of war enclosing the report of the Taft Phililine commission. In his message of transmittal the president says that the report includes not only the reports of the commission but its acts of legislation "and other important information relating to the conditions and immediate wants of the Philippine islands." Concluding the president says:

"I earnestly recommend legislation under which the government of the islands may have authority to assist in their peaceful industrial development in the directions indicated by the secretary of war."

The report itself is a voluminous production, divided into many heads exhibiting the progress made by the commission in carrying out its plans for the Americanization of the islands. The commission urgently recommends the passage of the Spooner bill.

Turkish Government Will Pay.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Satisfactory assurances have been received here that the Turkish government has arranged to meet the American claims for indemnity on account of the destruction of the American missionary property at Harpoot. The details of the arrangement have not been made public.

King Edward to the President.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Following is the text of the reply which the president received from King Edward VII in answer to his message of condolence on the death of the queen:

"Osborne, Jan. 24, 1901.—The President, White House, Washington: Am most grateful for your kind sympathy in the irreparable loss which the nation and I have sustained. I feel convinced that it will be shared by you and the American people.—Edward R."

Many a "plebe" at West Point has felt at least once that he was full of prunes.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senate—The announcement of the death of Queen Victoria today, conveyed unofficially to the senate, was recognized by that body in the adoption of an appropriate resolution which was ordered to be engrossed and forwarded to the prime minister of Great Britain. Mr. Allison offered the following resolution: "That the death of her royal and imperial majesty, Victoria, of noble virtues and great renown, is sincerely deplored by the senate of the United States of America." The resolution was adopted unanimously. During the sitting of the senate in open session, the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill was completed, so far as the committee amendments were concerned. It is now subject to amendment by individual senators.

House—The house adopted a resolution expressing profound regret and sympathy for the English people on account of the death of Queen Victoria. The president was requested to communicate the expression to the British government, and as a further mark of respect to the memory of the dead queen, the house immediately adjourned. Before the announcement of the death of the queen, the house passed on the bill to send to the court of claims the claim of Cramp & Sons, amounting to something over $1,300,000.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Senate—The senate today passed the legislative appropriation bill and resumed consideration of the shipping bill. At the instance of Frye of Maine, who relinquished the chair temporarily to take charge of the measure on the floor, it was made the unfinished business of the senate, thus restoring it to its privileged position. Vest of Missouri took the floor immediately in a characteristically brilliant, forceful and interesting speech lasting nearly three hours. He advocated free ships and vigorously attacked the navigation laws of the United States, holding that they were responsible for the decadence of the merchant marine of America.

House—The house passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The senate resolution for the celebration of John Marshall day, February 4, was adopted. The house then took up the naval appropriation bill, sixty-five pages of which were completed.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senate.—The senate today devoted the day to the Indian appropriation bill, and made only fair progress. The chief feature of the debate was a sharp attack made by Pettigrew on the Dawes commission, which he said was extravagant, and which he said was accomplishing little in the way of results. The shipping bill was not taken up.

House.—The house today considered the naval appropriation bill all day and completed it with the exception of one paragraph. The item for increase of the navy will remain as reported, namely, two battleships and two cruisers. Some opposition was manifested to an increase of the navy and Cannon of Illinois sounded a note of warning as to the size of our annual appropriations and added that with the present appropriation $310,000,000 would have been spent on our new navy and we should stop.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senate.—Senator Depew, of New York, today dilivered in the senate a characteristically forceful and eloquent address in support of the shipping bill. The address, which lasted just an hour, was in the nature of an appeal for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine, by the granting of subsidies as provided for in the pending measure. His discussion of the problems of transportation which now confront American manufacturers and American farmers, was notably interesting and effective. The peroration in which he urged that the American flags be restored to the mastheads of the freight carrying ships of the United States was a brilliant piece of oratory, and elicited cordial applause from the senators on the floor and the crowds in the galleries. Little progress was made with the Indian apprpopriation bill. The last hour of the senate day was consumed in the passage of private pension bills.

House.—The house adopted the conference report upon the army reorganization bill, by a vote of 133 to 100. The contest over it was brief. The naval appropriation bill was finally passed, and also twenty-seven private pension bills.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senate—National irrigation was discussed in the senate for three hours today, the text being an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill providing for surveys looking to the construction of an irrigation dam and ditches for the watering of the reservation of the Pima and Maricopas Indians at San Carlos, on the Gila river, Arizona. During the day the report of the conference committee on the army reorganization bill was presented and Hawley announced that he would call it upon Monday.

House—The house today made good progress with the bill to revise and codify the postal laws. Only twenty-eight pages of the 221 pages remain to be disposed of.

AMSTERDAM PRESS SEVERE.

Holland Newspapers Offer Comment Upon Situation in England.

Amsterdam, Jan. 24.—The newspapers here are full of respectful sympathy with Great Britain, but the views of the political aspect of the death of Queen Victoria are largely influenced by the prevailing sentiment concerning the South African war. The Handelsblatt says: "The end of her pacific reign was obscured by the shadow of war and insurrection, and, alas, finishes with an unjust war against a little people, which is all the more humiliating as England has not conquered the valiant Afrikanders. The queen's death is profoundly regretted by her people, whose great love and respect she merited, but the end of her reign was stigmatized by the most unjust war of the century. Victoria, fulfilling in the fullest manner her duty, twice prevented the war, but as an octogenarian she no longer had her former power and will and the republics were forced into a war which has deprived England of all her moral prestige. The monetary markets of the world instinctively feel that the ministers of King Edward cannot count on the patience of Emperor William and the czar, who avoided everything which might render the queen's last days unhappy. Consequently her death will evidently have a great bearing on the future of England, which is sombre."

Private Services Held.

Cowes, Jan. 26.—Private funeral services over the remains of the late queen were held at Osborne house yesterday. The coffin was then closed by command of the king, never to be re-opened.

No matter how changeable a man may be, he always wants a little more change.

Claims Will Not Be Paid.

Manila, Jan. 24.—The disallowance by the military board of the claims of Holman & Co., merchants of Iloilo, for damage to and destruction of property during the period of appeasement, which findings have been approved by General MacArthur, establishes a precedent against recompensing for similar property losses in the territory in which the war operations were conducted. Some claims, notably that of the Manila and Dagupan railroad, which are now before the board, will probably go to the court of claims at Washington, and possibly eventually to congress.

Des Moines, January 28, 1901.

Mrs. A. B. Devoe, the young widow of A. B. Devoe of Creston, the daughter of a mother who, according to evidence given in the courts, was an object of public charity, who worked as a servant at the Devoe residence and who in 1894 married her employer when he had reached the age of 73 and she was but 27, has been finally defeated in the legal battle she has fought for months with the heirs to the estate. The supreme court, in an opinion written by Judge Sherwin, settled the controversy, affirming the decisions of Judge Townier of the Union county district court, and sustaining the claims of the Devoe children to the property, valued at $120,000. Prior to marriage, Mrs. Devoe, or Miss Carrie Seely, as she was then known, signed an ante-nuptial contract waiving her dower right to one-third of the estate, and in spite of the fact that but a part of this contract was brought forth in evidence, the page on which the signatures were written having been destroyed, the validity of the document is fully affirmed.

The statement showing the condition of the state and savings banks of Iowa, as indicated by reports from the different banks furnished in accordance with the last bank call, has been completed in the office of the auditor of state. The reports from the banks show their condition at the close of business December 12, 1900. The statement evidences a flourishing condition of the banks of the state, and a large increase in the volume of their business since the last preceding report to the auditor. There are now 246 savings banks in Iowa and 128 state banks, a total of 464, and sixteen more than were reported in the last preceding statement.

The Iowa State Medical Veterinary association, which has just closed its thirteenth annual session, adopted resolutions severely criticising the action of the federal government for the alleged indiscriminate distribution of vaccine among gentlemen who do not know how to properly use it. Officers were elected as follows: President, P. O. Kato, Forest City; vice presidents, S. H. Kingery, Creston, and P. Malcolm, New Hampton; secretary and treasurer, J. D. Brown, Oskaloosa.

The supreme court decided in a case from Winneshiek county that bondsmen of saloon-keepers under the mulct law cannot be held for penalties for sales to minors. The law imposes a fine of $100 for each sale to a minor. Saloon-keepers are required to give bonds to obey the law. But the court holds that there is an exception in the law providing that only bondsmen of permit holders, that is, pharmacists holding permits from the district court, can be held for penalties for selling to minors. Bondsmen of mulct saloon-keepers are liable, however, for civil damages to be collected by parents, guardians, etc., of minors to whom liquor has been sold.

The Bonaparte dam case which has been furnishing food for thought to the supreme court of the last five years has been settled for all time by the overruling of the petitions of both the state and Byron F. Meek for a rehearing. The case will stand according to the decision rendered at the October term in which it was held that the owners of the dam were not compelled to provide a fishway. The series of cribs constructed below the dam make a perpendicular structure and furnish a complete obstruction to the passage of fish in the Des Moines river. The dam was built by the government for the improvement of the Des Moines river in 1852 and in 1866 after it had been bought by the Meeks the locks were closed by a wall and no fishway was provided. As early as 1893 information was filed to abate it as a nuisance, but the supreme court holds that a fishway cannot be required in a non-navigable river. It is the largest and best constructed dam in the state and the case has been watched with keen interest by all sportsmen.

The state of Iowa is going to receive two Chinese cannon from the walls of Peking, captured by the United States troops when they entered the Chinese capital to relieve the besieged legationers. In a letter just received by Governor Shaw, United States Minister Conger says:

"I am today starting on their way to you two Chinese cannon, with their carriages (knocked down), which our troops on their arrival here captured on the city wall near our legation. They are undoubtedly the guns which were sending shot and shell into the legation during the siege. I have billed them to you, sending on a United States transport to San Francisco, and have requested that they be shipped thence to Des Moines by rail. I beg you to accept these guns for the state of Iowa as a souvenir of a most disagreeable situation in which some of her citizens were placed, and from which they were providentially rescued. I shall be glad to see them properly mounted and planted before the new historical building or in any other place about the capitol which you may select. I have found this convenient opportunity to ship them and so take advantage of it, not waiting for a reply to my previous letter to you concerning them."

The cannon will probably be mounted on each side of the walk leading to the state historical building.

Battle flags of the Ninth and Fifteenth Iowa infantry have been removed from the sealed glass cases on the second floor of the state house and will be forwarded at once to Gen. Grenville M. Dodge at New York City, who will place them in the tomb of General U. S. Grant. The last general assembly ordered two flags from the Iowa collection to be sent to Grant's tomb. The selection was made by Governor Shaw because both the Ninth and Fifteenth had several flags, while some of the other regiments had but one flag, and to have selected any of those flags would have left the regiment without representation in the Iowa collection.

NERVOUS WOMEN CURED BY Dr. Greene's NERVURA.

THE ceaseless drudgery of household cares is more than the strongest man could endure, and it is no wonder that women show the effects of work and worry.

Thousands of women in offices, shops, and factories break down in health under the strain and become weak, tired, nervous, and debilitated, tortured with female complaints, or racked by headache, neuralgia, backache, and kidney trouble.

Here lies the great strain upon the nervous systems of women. They have little or no rest; their life is one continual round of work, duties here, duties there, duties without number. What wonder that such women go to bed at night fatigued, and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning!

What women need is that great strengthener and invigorator of womankind, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy—that remedy which rebuilds health and strength, purifies and enriches the blood, gives strength and vigor to the nerves, and the strong vitality and energy to the system which will enable women to do their work and yet keep strong and well. It is this great medicine they need. Nothing else in the world can do its work.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

MRS. M. D. PERKINS, of 100 G St., So. Boston, Mass., says:

"I was completely run down and could not eat, for the sight of food made me sick. I did not sleep at night and was as tired in the morning as when I retired at night. My head and back ached all the time. I was completely exhausted if I tried to do my housework, and could not walk without being dizzy. I was excessively nervous and very weak.

"Then I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I cannot say enough in its praise. I have not felt so well for years as I do at the present time, thanks to this splendid remedy.

"I can now eat and sleep soundly, waking mornings strong and refreshed. I do my housework, which is now a pleasure instead of a burden as formerly. My weight has increased about twelve pounds in the last two months. I would recommend any one afflicted as I have been to use this wonderful remedy."

Dr. Greene Will Advise You Without Charge.

The benefit of Dr. Greene's special advice is at the disposal of every sickly woman, and it is well to write for it or call and see Dr. Greene at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City. Doing so may shorten the time required for recovery of full strength, and give information which will guide aright in the future. Absolute confidence is observed in all consultations, and no charge is made.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

CHRISTIAN WORK TYPIFIED BY FISHERMEN.

The Gospel Net and How It Should Be Kept in Repair—Christ's Disciples as Fishers of Men—Religion of Christ a Soothing Omnipotence.

(Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.)

Washington, Jan. 27.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage describes the gospel net and how it is to be repaired after being damaged; text, Matthew 4: 21, "James, the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, in a ship with Zebedee, their father, mending their nets."

"I go a-fishing!" cried Simon Peter to his comrades, and the most of the apostles had hands hard from fishing tackle. The fisheries of the world have always attracted attention. In the third century the queen of Egypt had for pin money $470,000 received from the fisheries of Lake Moeris. And, if the time should ever come when the immensity of the world's population could not be fed by the vegetables and meats of the land, the sea has an amount of animal life that would feed all the populations of the earth and fatten them with a food that by its phosphorus would make a generation brainy and intellectual beyond anything that the world has ever imagined. My text takes us among the Galilean fishermen. One day Walter Scott, while hunting in an old drawer, found among some old fishing tackle the manuscript of his immortal book, "Waverley," which he had put away there as of no worth, and who knows but that today we may find some unknown wealth of thought while looking at the fishing tackle in the text.

Easy to Get In.

The trouble with many of our nets is that the meshes are too large. If a fish can get his gills and half his body through the network, he tears and rends and works his way out, and leaves the place through which he squirmed a tangle of broken threads. In our desire to make everything so easy we relax, we loosen, we widen. We let men after they are once in the gospel net escape into the world, and go into indulgences and swim all around Galilee, from north side to south side, and from east side to west side, expecting that they will come back again. We ought to make it easy for them to get into the kingdom of God, and, as far as we can, make it impossible for them to get out. The poor advice nowadays to many is: "Go and do just as you did before you were captured for God and heaven. The net was not intended to be any restraint or any hindrance. What you did before you were a Christian do now. Go to all styles of amusement, read all the styles of books, engage in all the styles of behavior as before you were converted." And so, through these meshes of permission and laxity, they wriggle out through this opening and that opening, tearing the net as they go, and soon all the souls that we expected to land in heaven, before we know it, are back in the deep sea of the world. Oh, when we go a-gospel fishing, let us make it as easy as possible for souls to get in and as hard as possible to get out.

Is the Bible language an unmeaning verbiage when it talks about self-denial, and keeping the body under, and about walking the narrow way and entering the strait gate and about carrying the cross? Is there to be no way of telling whether a man is a Christian except by his taking the communion chalice on sacramental day? May a man be as reckless about his thoughts, about his words, about his temper, about his amusements, after his conversion as before? Alas, the words of Christ are so little heeded when he said, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me cannot be my disciple." The church is fast becoming as bad as the world, and when it gets as bad as the world it will be worse than the world by so much, as it will add hypocrisy af a most appalling kind to its other defects.

A soothing Omnipotence.

Do you know that the world's heart is bursting with trouble and if you could make that world believe that the religion of Jesus Christ is a soothing omnipotence, the whole world would surrender tomorrow, yea, would surrender this hour. The day before James A. Garfield was inaugurated as president I was in the cars going from Richmond to Washington. A gentleman seated near me in the cars knew me, and we were soon in familiar conversation. It was just after a bereavement, and I was speaking to him from an overburdened heart about the sorrow I was suffering. Looking at his cheerful face, I said: "I guess you have escaped all trouble. I should judge from your countenance that you have come through free from all misfortune." Then he looked at me with a look I shall never forget, and whispered in my ear: "Sir, you know nothing about trouble. My wife has been in an insane asylum for fifteen years." And then he turned and looked out of the window and into the night with a silence I was too overpowered to break. That was another illustration of the fact that no ones escapes trouble. Why, that man seated next to you in church has on his soul a weight compared with which a mountain is a feather. That woman seated next to you in church has a grief the recital of which would make your body, mind and soul shudder.

When you are mending your net for this wide, deep sea of humanity, take out that wire thread of criticism and that horsehair thread of harshness and put in a soft silken thread of Christian sympathy. Yea, when you are mending your nets tear out those old threads of gruffness and weave in a few threads of politeness and geniality. In the house of God let all Christian faces beam with a look that means welcome. Say "good morning" to the stranger as he enters your pew and at the close shake hands with him and say, "How did you like the music?" Why, you would be to that man a panel of the door of heaven; you would be to him a note of the doxology that seraphs sing when a new soul enters heaven. I have in other days entered a pew in church, and the woman at the other end of the pew looked at me as much as to say: "How dare you? This is my pew, and I pay the rent for it!" Well, I crouched in the other corner and made myself as small as possible and felt as though I had been stealing something. So there are people who have a sharp edge to their religion, and they act as though they thought most people had been elected to be damned and they were glad of it. Oh, let us brighten up our manner and appear in gentlemanliness or ladyhood.

Mending the Nets.

Oh, this important work of mending our nets! If we could get our nets right, we would accomplish more in soul saving in the next year than we have in the last twenty years. But where shall we get them mended? Just where old Zebedee and his two boys mended their nets—where you are. James and John had no time to go ashore. They were not fishing for fun, as you and I do in the summer time. It was their livelihood and that of their families. They mended their nets where they were—in the ship. "Oh," says some one, "I mean to get my net mended, and I will go down to the public library and I will see what the scientists say about evolution and about the 'survival of the fittest,' and I will read up what the theologians say about 'advanced thought.' I will leave the ship awhile, and I will go ashore and stay there till my net is mended." Do that, my brother, and you will have no net left. Instead of their helping you mend your net, they will steal the pieces that remain. Better stay in the gospel boat, where you have all the means for mending your net. What are they? do you ask. I answer, all you need you have where you are—namely, a Bible and a place to pray. The more you study evolution and adopt what is called advanced thought, the more useless you will be. Stay in the ship and mend your net. That is where James, the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, staid. That is where all who get their nets mended stay.

I notice that all who leave the gospel boat and go ashore to mend their nets stay there. Or if they try again to fish they do not catch anything. Get out of the gospel boat and go up into the world to get your net mended, and you will live to see the day when you will feel like the man who, having forsaken Christianity, sighed, "I would give a thousand pounds to feel as I did in 1820." The time will come when you would be willing to give a thousand pounds to feel as you did in 1901. These men who have given up their religion cannot help you a bit.

These dear brethren of all denominations afflicted with theological fidgets, had better go to mending nets instead of breaking them. Before they break up the old religion and try to foist on us a new religion let them go through some great sacrifice for God that will prove them worthy for such a work, taking the advice of Talleyrand to a man who wanted to upset the religion of Jesus Christ and start a new one when he said, "Go and be crucified and then raise yourself from the grave the third day!" Those who propose to mend their nets by secular and skeptical books are like a man who has just one week for fishing, and six of the days he spends in reading Izaak Walton's "Complete Angler" and Wheatley's "Rod and Line" and Scott's "Fishing in Northern Waters" and Pullman's "Vade Mecum of Fly Fishing for Trout," and then on Saturday morning, his last day out, goes to the river to ply his art. But that day the fish will not bite, and late on Saturday night he goes to his home with an empty basket. Alas, alas! If when the Saturday night of our life drops on us it shall be found that we have spent our time in the libraries of worldly philosophy, trying to mend our nets, and we have only a few souls to report as brought to God through our instrumentality while some humble gospel fisherman, his library made up of a Bible and an almanac, shall come home laden with the results, his trophies all the souls within fifteen miles of his log cabin meeting house.

In the time of great disturbance in Naples in 1649 Massaniello, a barefooted fishing boy, dropped his fishing rod and by strange magnetism took command of that city of 600,000 souls. He took off his fishing jacket and put on a robe of gold in the presence of howling mobs. He put his hand on his lip as a signal, and they were silent. He waved his hand away from him, and they retired to their homes. Armies passed in review before him. He became the nation's idol. The rapid rise and complete supremacy of that young fisherman, Massaniello, has no parallel in all history. But something equal to that and better than that is an every-day occurrence in heaven. God takes some of those who in this world were fishers of men and who toiled very humbly, but because of the way they mended their nets and employed their nets after they were mended he suddenly hoists them and robes them and scepters them and crowns them and makes them rulers over many cities, and he marches armies of saved ones before them in review, Massaniellos unhonored on earth, but radiated in heaven. The fisher boy of Naples soon lost his power, but those people of God who have kept their nets mended and rightly swung them shall never lose their exalted place, but shall reign forever and ever and ever. Keep that reward in sight.

But do not spend your time fishing with hook and line. Why did not James, the son of Zebedee, sit on the wharf at Cana, his feet hanging over the lake, and with a long pole and a worm on the hook dipped into the wave wait for some mullet to swim up and be caught? Why did not Zebedee spend his afternoon trying to catch one eel? No, that work was too slow. These men were not mending a hook and line; they were mending their nets. So let the church of God not be content with having here one soul and next month another soul brought into the kingdom. Sweep all the seas with nets—scoop nets, seine nets, dragnets, all encompassing nets, and take the treasures in by hundreds and thousands and millions, and nations will be born in a day and the hemispheres quake with the tread of a ransoming God. Do you know what will be the two most tremendous hours in our heavenly existence? Among the quadrillions of ages which shall roll on what two occasions will be to us the greatest? The day of our arrival there will be to us one of the two greatest. The second greatest, I think, will be the day when we shall have put in parallel lines before us what Christ did for us and what we did for Christ, the one so great, the other so little. That will be the only embarrassment in heaven. My Lord and my God! What will we do and what will we say when on one side are placed the Savior's great sacrifices for us and our small sacrifices for him; his exile, his humiliation, his agonies on one hand and our poor, weak, insufficient sacrifices on the other. To make the contrast less overwhelming let us quickly mend our nets, and, like the Galilean fisherman, may we be divinely helped to cast them on the right side of the ship.

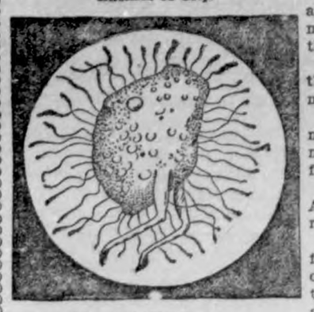
EPIDEMIC OF GRIP WORST EVER KNOWN

GRIP BACILLUS EVERYWHERE—IN THE AIR WE BREATHE, IN THE WATER WE DRINK, IN THE FOOD WE EAT.

Bacillus of Grip.



Magnified 10,000 times.

Hundreds of car loads of Peruna are shipped in all directions to meet the extraordinary demand of the grip epidemic.

Everybody laying in a stock of this valuable remedy in time to meet the terrible enemy, the Grip.

The extensive facilities of the manufacturers taxed to their utmost to meet the urgent demand for Peruna.

Almost everybody has the grip. Almost everybody must have Peruna.

Taken at the appearance of the first symptoms of the grip, not only is Peruna a prompt cure for the grip but it prevents those disastrous after effects so characteristic of this dread disease.

Taken in time thousands of lives will be saved in this present epidemic.

Every family should take the precaution to secure a supply of Peruna at once, for the retail and wholesale stock of the remedy may be exhausted by the enormous demand for it.

It is wisdom to have Peruna in the house even before the grip attacks the household.

It has been ascertained by a reporter that the following people of national reputation have given public endorsement and testimonials to Peruna as a remedy for la grippe:

Congressman Howard, of Alabama, says: "I have taken Peruna for the grip and recommend it as an excellent remedy to all fellow-sufferers."

Congressman White, of North Carolina, says: "I find Peruna to be an excellent remedy for the grip. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it."

Miss Francis M. Anderson, of Washington, D. C., daughter of Judge Anderson, of Virginia, says: "I was taken very ill with the grip. I took Peruna and was able to leave my bed in a week."

Mrs. Harriette A. S. Marsh, President of the Woman's Benevolent Association of Chicago, writes: "I suffered with grip seven weeks. Nothing helped me. Tried Peruna and within three weeks I was fully restored. Shall never be without it again."

At the appearance of the first symptoms of grip people should stay indoors and take Peruna in small doses (teaspoonful every hour) until the symptoms disappear. This will prevent a long, disastrous sickness and perhaps fatal results.

Imagine a newsboy enroute to the moon 250 years selling fresh dates.

A building is being erected in New York seventeen stories high. It will cost $5,000,000, and has 2,300 rooms.

The Wright County papers, like the Hancock County sheets, have been enjoying a scrape over the county printing.

The Upper Des Moines Editorial Association Meeting is to come off at Forest City on Feb. 14th and 15th. A good time is in store for the editors of the state, both big and little "fries." Outsiders are not barred. Anybody is welcome.

The Britt News says: "The income from a good gusher will grease the machinery for 1904 when our Leslie measures strength with Teddy." Gospel truth. But that machine has all the grease it needs. Tar would work to better satisfaction. Anything, so it is a change!

The preachers in Des Moines, according to the press reports, have been doing some very effective work in the way of ridding the state Capitol of gamblers, slot machines, and gamblers devices of various kinds. Cuss the preacher, if you want to it wont change him a whit.

The editors throughout this section have been making great ado over Gov. Shaw. Some want to run him for president, others would like to see him in the presidents cabinet, and still others who have the audacity to ask the people to support him for a third term as Governer of Iowa. The dutchman said; 'Too much ov a ting is "nough."

An exchange remarks that the British are doing a mighty wise thing in capturing the Boar children. As fast as they get rid of the older Boars the young ones become able to handle the human system ventilator. The idea is to be shown that war will last so long that boys and girls of to day over there will be a fighting just as hard in 30 years hence as their fathers are now.

The Wright Co. Democrat says the ship subsidy bill is being driven through congress because it will benefit the International Navigation Co. to the extent of $43,000,000, worth, the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., gets only a little bit, $550.000 worth, and that poor insignificant Standard Oil Company also gets a portion. Poor, starving souls they need help and the people should be taxed heavily on that account! Charity is the greatest thing on earth.

Those of our readers who have been following up the advance made by the Minneapolis Mining and Development Co., will perhaps be interested in the following bits of information as regards this company. Not only is Mr. A. B. Shafer interested in the oil industry, but he has considerable equity in the lead mining business of Missouri, having a large 60 foot shaft sunk, which according to the forman's report to the President, two weeks ago with two men took out 3000 lbs. of lead ore; and last week the former amount of diggings was expected to be doubled. He has control of eighty acres of these rich mineral lands, and machine equipments are on the grounds doing very effectual work. The paraphernalia for the oil well, consisting of drills, power, etc, wherewith a well can be sunk a thousand feet if necessary has been purchased and will be on the field of operation in the very near future. A tract of two hundred acres of land has been leased by this company and aside from this it has an option for lease on several hundred acres in the immediate vicinity of the present aforesaid lease. The Company feels confident of it's prospects of doing an effective and lucrative business in either of these lines, as lead and oil are good marketable properties there being no perishable or deminutive qualities either.

There is always a story in circulation about some one.' says an exchange. "There is always a confidential lie being whispered through the neighborhood about some citizen, and every one is admonished to say nothing about it but the one in question. If you have a friend who is made the target of town gossip it is your duty to tell him of it. If you keep still and allow his reputation to be strained and trampled under foot you do him a great injustice. We do not beleive in hatching up trouble in the mind of any one. and we hate to see a man convicted of crime in the minds of the people without a chance to explain the matter. It would be a good thing if lies were left painted on the atmosphere where they are told with the lier's picture attached to them. There wouldn't be so many lies told. but the atmosphere would be full of pictures which would bear the image of seeming sainted ones. Oh, hypocrisy. thou art a stench to a civilized community!"

Mrs. Cary Nation, temperance woman of the first degree, has been creating havoc in some of the southwestern states, where liguor is sold regardless of law, by gathering a mob of men and women of her stripe and dealing out justice upon the heads of the joint keepers by smashing in the doors and windows and demolishing the inner furniture of their places. Incongruous as this may seem to some people, she has as much right to do her work as the joint keeper has and dod gast us if we were a woman down there we would join the crusade against the devil and lift hades in general. One party is doing as legitimate a business as the other. If Mrs. Nation can create a public sympathy and get the laws enforced or made she will have done something very deserving of praise. It's queer how people will how when a little damage is done to someones property in this way, but the saloon keeper can drive some mother's son's precious soul to hell every minute and they scarcely notice it As long as a license is paid to build sidewalks, a miracle is being wrought!

In an address before a farmer's association one of the speakers said: "As a rule the farmer has no firmer friend than the country press. The home paper is distinctly the farmers own paper; supported directly and indirectly by Farmers who compose the backbone of the printer's subscription list and largely for what the enterprising merchant advertises. Now brother, let us not forget our friends. Let us see that our subscription is paid before the first of January and a year in advance if we can afford it. The man or the paper that fights my battles shall have my support. Another thing, the merchants who advertise are the ones who make it possible for us to have a good local paper, and the men of firms who are too penurious to advertise and help support the local press, have no right to the farmer's patronage. I propose hereafter to go to a live advertiser and a man who will do his share in supporting the local press, thus contributing to my support rather than to buy of a man who proposes to take all and give nothing in return. If farmers as a class would support their friends, the other fellow would soon go out of business.

The hog is the mortgage lifter, the sheep the farm fertilizer, the cow the barn builder, and the hen the grocery-bill payer, remarks an exchange.

When a woman fails in life, she lays the blame on the men, and all the other women aid her in deceiving herself.—Exchange.

As it is said that fires like railroad accidents "go by threes," it is hoped that the late fire at Klemme will end the series for the town on the east side of the county.—Signal.

Baas & McMahon the druggists have purchased the Wilson lots and it is understood will have plans and specifications prepared for the erection of fine business houses which will be put up in the spring.—Signal.

Bro. Chas. P. Ell, of the Klemme TIMES, was a business caller. By-the-way Chas. has changed the form of his paper which is quite an improvement. The TIMES is rapidly forging to the front as one of the bright newspapers of the county, and we wish it much success.—Signal.

The small pox is making the citizens of Livermore jump sideways now A country dance was held at which a young man came down with the disease. Nearly 40 persons were exposed and the most of them have since came down. Quarrantine is maintained as strictly as it is possible, but still the disease seems to be spreading.—Ex.

Chas Schroeder will move to Rushmore, Minnesota, next Monday to go on a farm that he bought last year. We dislike to see such farmers as the Schroeders leave Hancock county. They are the kind we want to keep as many of as possible. - Britt Tribune.

Mr. Schroeder left via the B. C. R. & N., from this point Tuesday.

It is said that Britt has a pretty young lady so charmingly cross-eyed she can entertain three young gentlemen at once and send them away each thinking that he monopolized the most of her attention during the evening.—Algona Courier.

Here is one of the best sermons on temperance ever written: "It is said that of 700 ten dollar marked bills, paid on a Saturday night by a Massachusetts manufactory to it's hands, 400 by the following Tuesday were deposited in the bank by saloon keepers."—Fort Dodge Post.

That's what we would call a sermon on intemperance.—Walt Elder.

Anyone who is desirous of owning a fish pond, peat bed or good melon patch should call on Auditor Keeler, he having been authorized by the supervisors at their recent session to sell the lake beds of Wright county at not less then nine dollars per acre. If the county will give a warranty deed and agree to keep the water drained from the premices referred to, an opportunity is offered for "soft snaps" in Wright county real estate.--Wright County Monitor.

Des Moines, February 3, 1901.

An opinion has been handed down by Attorney General Mullan, in which he holds that the board of agriculture has no authority to appropriate money of the department for an exhibition at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. The opinion was addressed to S. B. Packard of Marshalltown. At its annual meeting in December the department of agriculture made no appropriation for an exhibition of Iowa products at the Buffalo exposition and it has been strongly urged that the board now act in the matter in order that the state need not go unrepresented. Mr. Mullan's opinion renders that impossible.

The negotiations for the property of the International distillery, located near the packing houses, have been completed and the property now belongs to F. M. Rubbell. There is a clause in the deed which prohibits the use of the property as a malting institution for fifteen years, but this clause does not prevent the use of the building as a brewery, and it is thought very likely that the plant will be leased to the Cochrans, who have signified their willingness to open up a big brewery as soon as a brewing consent petition is secured.

Attorney General Mullan has handed down a decision in relation to school administration, in which he holds that townships may abolish sub-districts and sub-district boards of directors and manage the schools on the township plan as a unit. This is an important and sweeping decision.

The capitol improvement commission, provided for by the last general assembly, for the purpose of making recommendations to the governor on improvements to the capitol building, has recently returned from a visit to leading public buildings in eastern cities. The members of the commission are Peter A. Dey of Iowa City, C. A. Cumming of Des Moines and H. S. Joselyn of Cedar Rapids. Their purpose in making the trip was to glean ideas from buildings in other states, such as would be useful in deciding on the improvements for the state house in Des Moines. Mr. Dey, who is a civil engineer, took especial notice of plumbing, lighting, heating, ventilating and general plans of buildings and gained much valuable information along these lines. Mr. Joselyn, being an expert architect, studied matters pertaining to architecture more especially, while Mr. Cumming, who is the head of the Cumming art school here, looked into the subject of artistic decoration and arrangement. A meeting of the commission will be taken then toward preparing a report to the governor, which, according to the measure creating the commission, is to be made not later than December 1, 1901.

Fred Cahow, Jr., of Valley Junction was defeated in the supreme court in his suit for damages against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway company. Cahow brought action in the Guthrie district court to recover damages for personal injuries sustained while in the employment of the road in November, 1897, in the shops at Valley Junction as a helper. A verdict and judgment for $7,085 was rendered in favor of the plaintiff in the lower court. In an opinion by Judge Given the supreme court reverses the lower court's decision on errors.

CONTINENT AND AN OCEAN

Crossed by the Harriman Transportation Lines.

New York, Feb. 2.—Another railroad transaction, reaching, it is believed, much further in its ultimate results than any of the deals which have thus far marked the closing of the old and the beginning of the new century, became known just a few minutes before the closing of the market yesterday afternoon, when the transfer of the control of the Southern Pacific railroad into the hands of a syndicate in which Union Pacific interests predominate was announced. The transaction completes the last link necessary for the establishment of a transcontinental railroad under a single control. This control is at present vested in E. H. Harriman. The new route includes the following lines, in all of which except the Southern Pacific Mr. Harriman is officially connected. Starting at San Francisco, running over the Central Pacific over the Southern Pacific direct to Ogden, thence first over the Union Pacific to Kansas City and thence over the Chicago & Alton to Chicago, or second, over the Union Pacific to Omaha and thence over the Dubuque & Sioux City branch of the Illinois Central direct to Chicago, where the Baltimore & Ohio connects direct to the Atlantic seaboard.

The control of the Southern Pacific, just transferred, includes the large holdings controlled by Speyer & Co., and also the Huntington holdings.

The importance of the new deal grows when viewed in connection with the acquisition in November last by the Southern Pacific of the Pacific Mail Steamship company with its immense distributing power on the Pacific coast. The acquisition of the Southern Pacific is merely another move in the community of international policy which has already secured such a vast hold on the railroads of the country. It means the establishment of an all-rail transcontinental road governed directly by this policy.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HOME FOR EX-CONVICTS.

L. S. Coffin of Fort Dodge to Establish One at "Willowedge."

Fort Dodge, Feb. 4.—Hon. L. S. Coffin, known throughout the United States by his efforts to improve the conditions of railway employes, has just announced a gift of $10,000 to establish a home for prisoners discharged from the state penitentiary. Part of Mr. Coffin's beautiful country home, "Willowedge," near Fort Dodge, will be used as the basis of this new reform movement. A society known as the Iowa Benevolent association has been formed by leading citizens of Fort Dodge, headed by Judge Kenyon, to support and sustain the movement inaugurated by Mr. Coffin. Articles of incorporation provide that: "The object of this association shall be to assist those worthy thereof who have been inmates of either of the Iowa penitentiaries, and been discharged or paroled therefrom, in securing them employment or in otherwise aiding them, and more particularly in maintaining the L. S. Coffin home, an institution to be located at or near Fort Dodge, Iowa, for the purpose of providing a temporary home for discharged or paroled prisoners for a limited time. This corporation shall have full power to purchase or receive gifts or bequests of real or personal property, and assumes to itself all rights, duties and privileges incident to and conferred by law upon benevolent and charitable institutions by the statutes of Iowa." The board of trustees of the association consists of Hon. S. T. Meservey, Webb Vincent, L. S. Coffin, Geo. W. Mason, T. H. Wright, A. R. Wright, Rev. H. D. Wiard and Judge W. S. Kenyon. Plans of the association thus far outlined consist in setting aside eighty acres of "Willowedge" farm as the location for the home, and the erection of buildings thereon. All prisoners, immediately upon leaving the penitentiary, will be welcomed here and provided with a home and helped to secure positions beyond the influence of their former record.

TAX ON PENSIONERS.

Collection Being Contested in Wapello County.

Ottumwa, Feb. 1.—A new law point which is of exceeding interest to the better paid class of pensioners throughout the nation is raised in a suit brought here in which Calvin Manning, who was one of the United States commissioners to the Paris exposition is plaintiff and County Treasurer John H. Spry and Wapello county are the defendants. In short, the question is, can pension money be taxed? The plaintiff is guardian for John Schwabkey, an insane person, who served through the war of the rebellion, and who, on account of his total disability, draws a pension of $72 per month. In 1894 the plaintiff, for his ward, received $11.244 as back and accrued pension, and some time during January Treasurer Spry levied upon such moneys as were held by the plaintiff in 1895. 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899 and 1900, the total tax for that time amounting to $2,101.83, and this sum now appears on the tax books as against said plaintiff and his ward, who brought suit as stated under the provisions of section 4747 of the revised statutes of the United States for the year 1878, and it is especially prayed by the plaintiff that he be granted absolute immunity against the assessments and levies for the past, present and henceforth. It is also pleaded that under the laws of Iowa said moneys and the credits are exempt from taxation.

NEW IOWA RAILROAD.

Milwaukee to Build From Davenport to Hedrick, Through Washington.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Information comes here from headquarters that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will soon build their proposed short line between Muscatine and Hedrick or Ottumwa. As surveyed, the line will run from Muscatine north of the Rock Island road till near Ainsworth, where it will cross and go in a southeasterly direction, passing Washington about three miles to the south. It will go north of Brighton and from there to Hedrick or Ottumwa. It is more likely that Hedrick will be the terminus, as the Milwaukee can there make connections to ship freight to Kansas City by a short route. From Rock Island to Muscatine a short line may be built to connect at that point. The reason for the new line is the heavy traffic on the Milwaukee over its line, which passes too far north to make good time to Kansas City.

BANK FAILURE AT LOGAN.

A Harrison County Financial Institution Closes Its Doors.

Logan, Feb. 2.—The private bank here, known as the Harrison County bank, operated by Harvey & Ford, has closed its doors. No statement of the assets and liabilities has been made, but it is thought the liabilities do not greatly exceed the assets. The assignment was caused by bad investments and carries with it the firm of Berkley & Co., of which Messrs. Harvey and Ford were the largest stockholders. The estates of the gentlemen interested will cover the liabilities.

Caught by a Shaft.

Waterloo, Feb. 4.—Egloff Hansen, an employe at the Creamery Packing Company's plant, lies at the point of death as a result of injuries received by being caught in a swiftly revolving shaft and whirled through the air at the rate of 150 revolutions a minute. He ascended a step-ladder to repair the shafting and in some manner his clothing became caught. The first intimation that his companions had of the accident was a thud which caused them to look up. The young man was being hurled through the air at lightning speed, and at each revolution his head, arms and feet were thrown against the ceiling, which was only twenty inches from the shaft.. When he was at last taken from the machinery all his clothing had been torn from his body and he was covered with cuts and wounds. Physicians were called and everything done for the man, but it is not possible for him to recover after such an experience.

TITUS AMENDMENT DEAD

Supreme Court Affirms Dewey's Decision.

Des Moines, Feb. 2.—The supreme court handed down an opinion in the Titus amendment case yesterday, holding that the amendment is invalid because of the failure to record it in full in the journal of the house of the Twenty-seventh general assembly.

Owing to this slight technical error the people of Iowa cannot have biennial elections for at least four years, in spite of the fact that an amendment to the constitution to secure them passed by an overwhelming majority in November.

The supreme court follows the decision in the case of Koehler vs. Lange, holding that the issue was clearly raised then and that in it, the prohibitory amendment case, it was held that an amendment must be recorded in full in the journals of both houses.

Owing to this conclusion the question of the interpretation of the amendment is not considered.

"The conclusion, therefore, expressed by this court in the Koehler case is not dictum, but is decision," concludes the court, "and we must either follow it or overrule it. We consider that inasmuch as it involves the construction of our own constitution and has been recognized for many years as making definite and certain the method to be pursued in amending the constitution, it should be followed. And in conclusion, with reference to that case, we consider that it is not for us to determine that of the two questions involved, relating to the method of amending the constitution, one only was regarded as decided, while the other was simply discussed. The conclusion of the court as to either one of these two questions would have determined the case, and one conclusion is as binding upon us as the other.

"Therefore, following the decision of the court in the Koehler case, we hold that the proposed amendment not having been entered upon the journal of the house of the Twenty-seventh general assembly was not proposed and adopted as required by our constitution and has not become a part thereof.

"This conclusion makes it unnecessary to discuss the interpretation of the language of the amendment, and leads to the result that relator is entitled to the office which he claims."

The case is entitled State of Iowa ex rel Marsh W. Baily vs. S. W. Brookhart, respondent, appellant. The action was brought in Washington county by Marsh W. Baily, county attorney-elect, to oust his predecessor, S. W. Brookhart, who held that by the terms of the Titus amendment all state offices not expiring before January 1 were extended one year. Baily attacked the validity of the amendment. Judge A. R. Dewey, the trial judge, held the law invalid. On appeal this opinion is sustained.

$420,000 DUE THE STATE.

Senator Lothrop Holds Government Owes This Sum.

Des Moines, Jan. 31.—Senator J. S. Lothrop of Sioux City presented to the executive council yesterday his reasons for believing the state could collect from the federal government the interest on the money paid out by the state in the time of the civil war in the equipment of troops. The sum to which the state is entitled according to Senator Lothrop, is $420,000, and he seeks to be appointed as agent to make the collection on a commission. The members of the executive council are convinced the state has a claim against the government, and steps toward the collection will be taken.

The question that hampered proceedings yesterday was whether the executive council had the power, or the governor, to name an agent to press the claim for the interest. Senator Lothrop was unable to answer this question, but he will communicate with the council later, either directly or in writing, after looking into the law on this subject. Governor Shaw and Attorney General Mullen will take up this phase of the matter and determine what are the rights of the state as to the claim, what the exact amount is and whether an agent can be appointed to undertake the active work of collection.

GRIMM NOW A CRIPPLE.

World's Champion Wing Shot Disabled for Life.

Clear Lake, Feb. 2.—While superintending the mowing away of hay by means of a giant hay fork on his farm near town, Charles M. Grimm, one of the champion wing shots of the world, and winner of second place in the Great American handicap of 1899, suffered an accident which resulted in a broken ankle and which will probably make him a cripple for life. The fork, which has a capacity of one ton, failed to make the automatic catch when it reached the ridge of the barn, a distance of twenty-five feet from the ground, and came down like a shot, catching Mr. Grimm under it.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Council Bluffs, Feb. 1.—James N. Cassady, loan broker, has been arrested, charged with embezzling $824 sent him as agent to release a mortgage on the farm of John Farrel, living near Griswold. The warrant was issued at the instance of J. H. Alexander, a banker of Griswold, who remitted for the release of the mortgage in question on September 3. Cassady was taken before Justice Ferrier and released on $200 bond for appearance on February 12. Cassady negotiated the loan for the bank of Josiah Little, at Amboy, Ill. The day after the $824 was received from Alexander he deposited the money with Officer & Pusey, and wrote the bank at Amboy for a release of the property. The release has not yet arrived, and two weeks after the deposit was made, the Officer and Pusey institution was closed. Cassady now threatens a suit for false arrest, amounting to $10,000. Cassady stated that there was no reason why criminal proceedings should be brought and that he would expect heavy damages for his arrest.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senate—The senate turned from the grind of appropriations today to listen to a speech, which partook of the character of an oration, from Senator Towne of Minnesota. He spoke in advocacy of his resolution for a cessation of hostilities in the Philippines. The floor was crowded with senators and members of the house of representatives. The galleries, public and private, were crowded to overflowing. Mr. Towne's style of delivery was clear and forceful. Although restricted by manuscript, he had the subject well in hand and rolled out the fine periods with a fervor that sent them echoing through the chamber. The speech abounded in apostrophes to liberty and patriotism, and scathing and scornful arraignment of the policy by which the Filipinos were being annihilated. At one time an outburst of applause from the galleries led to a vigorous warning from the presiding officer against demonstrations of approval or dissent. As the orator closed his brilliant peroration there was another outburst of applause, despite the warnings of the chair. Immediately following Mr. Towne's speech, the credentials of his successor, Mr. Clapp of Minnesota, were presented and, after being sworn in, the new senator took his seat and Mr. Towne retired.

House—The major portion of the day in the house was occupied in the transaction of District of Columbia business. The bill to revise and codify the postal laws was passed.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Senate—Senator Frye gave notice in the senate today that he intended to keep the shipping bill to the front, even as against appropriation bills, not yielding to them without a vote of the senate. It indicated a disposition on the part of the senate leaders to force to an early issue the question whether the shipping bill is going to pass at this session. Senator Turner of Washington spoke today in severe arraignment of the bill, declaring it to be a "lawless, piratical raid upon the public treasury" in the interest of a few private beneficiaries and committing the government to expenses aggregating $270,000,000. Before the session closed the committee amendments were informally agreed to. The Indian appropriation bill was passed early in the day.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senate—The shipping bill was kept at the front in the senate througout today. No appreciable progress was made, most of the time being occupied by Mr. Furley of Tennessee, and Mr. Jones of Arkansas, in speeches opposing the bill and severely arraigning its alleged favoritism. Mr. Jones declared it should be entitled "A bill to permit a select coterie of ship owners to loot the United States treasury.'"

House—The anti-polygamy crusade, which resulted in driving Roberts, Utah's representative from his seat at the last session, had an echo in the house today during the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill. When the section making the appropriation for agricultural colleges of states was reached, Landis of Indiana offered an amendment that no money should be paid to the colleges in Utah until the secretary of agriculture was satisfied that no trustee or teacher in the institution practiced polygamy. The amendment was adopted.

Washington, Jan. 31—Senate—After an eventful legislative experience, beginning with the present session of congress and covering about two months, the bill for the reorganization of the United States army today passed its last stage in congress and now goes to the president for his signature. The final step was taken in the senate whereby a vote of 33 to 25 the conference report on the bill was agreed to. The house of representatives already had agreed to the report. The conference report was kept before the senate constantly today, even the shipping bill giving way. Opposition to the bill continued to be vigorously expressed, Teller making an extended speech in criticism of the war department and of the mensure in general. An opposition developed on the republican side to the report, based on the alleged freedom which the conferees had taken in introducing new provisions. On the final vote several republican senators voted with the democrats against the report. The shipping bill was discussed during the latter part of the day, and some progress was made on amendments.

House—The house today passed the fortification appropriation bill and made further progress with the postoffice appropriation bill.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Senate—The shipping bill was kept steadily at the front in the senate today, and in order to further expedite its progress a motion was agreed to for a session beginning at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Senators Rawlins, of Utah, and Berry, of Arkansas, occupied most of the time today in speeches of vigorous opposition.

House—The house today passed an omnibus bill, carrying 191 claims for stores and supplies taken by the Union army during the rebellion. The claims were passed on by the Court of Claims, and aggregated $344,480. Practically all of the beneficiaries reside in the South.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Senate—The senate met at 11 o'clock today and, with the exception of an hour and a half at the beginning of the session, devoted the entire day to the discussion of the ship subsidy bill. Turner and Mallory were the speakers for the opposition. Turner's speech was based largely upon exceptions which he had taken to Frye's criticisms of his former speech. Mr. Mallory opposed the bill on constitutional grounds.

House—The house spent the day until 3 o'clock in the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. At 3 o'clock public business was suspended to permit the members to pay tribute to the late Senator Davis of Minnesota.

MORE SALOONS SMASHED.

Women at Anthony, Kas., Start a Crusade Against Liquor Selling.

Kansas City, Jan. 31.—A special to the Star from Anthony, Kan., says:

Early yesterday morning before most citizens reached their places of business, twelve women of the Anthony W. C. T. U., armed with hammers, hatchets and pickaxes, raided and completely demolished four "joints" in Anthony. Husbands of the women went along, armed to protect their wives. Among the brigade were two or three school girls under age, who did some of the most effective smashing. A greater part of the havoc was finished before the police or mayor were aware of what was going on. The actual damage done to personal property, aside from the liquor destroyed, is placed by the saloonkeepers at $2,000. This, however, is believed to be too conservative.

A Wonderful Cure of Rheumatism

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA.

The greatest known cure for RHEUMATISM.

Mr. T. H. Roleau, of Essex Junction, Vt., says: "For three years I was terribly afflicted with a most severe case of rheumatism. For 23 months I could not walk a step, and I never expected to walk or work again. I was completely helpless and suffered the most horrible agony.

"No man in these parts ever suffered as I did. I took everything that I ever heard of, but never found anything that did me the slightest good until I began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"And now comes the most wonderful part of all. In a short time this splendid medicine made me completely well. It is the best remedy I ever saw or heard of, for it raised me from a condition of utter helplessness and constant agony to perfect health. It saved my ability to work which was entirely gone. I am now entirely well and strong, and I owe my health and my life to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I advise everybody to use it."

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP.

Released by Pe-ru-na---Congressman Howard's Recovery---Congressman Geo. H. White's Case

La Grippe is epidemic catarrh.—It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper. The masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful GRIP had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Pe-ru-na For Grip.

Mrs. Dr. C. D. Powell, President of Epworth League, also President of Loyal Temperance Legion, writes from Chehalis, Wash.:

"I have used several remedies in cases of severe colds and la grippe, but none I consider of more value than Peruna."—Mrs. Dr. C. D. Powell.

After-Effects of La Grippe.

Miss Emma Jouris, President Golden Rod Sewing Circle, writes from 40 Burling street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"This spring I suffered severely from the after-effects of la grippe. As the doctors did not seem to help me I bought a bottle of Peruna."—Miss Emma Jouris.

Congressman Howard's Letter.

Fort Payne, Ala.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."—M. W. Howard, Member of Congress.

La Grippe Leaves the System in a Deplorable Condition.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barbers' Union, writes from 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—L. D. Wallace.

Grippe Causes Deafness.

Mrs. M. A. Sharick, chaplain G. A. R. Woman's Relief Corps, writes from Fremont, Wash.:

"When la grippe was the prevailing illness in this Western country I was laid up the whole winter, I partially lost my hearing, and had a very bad case of catarrh of the head and throat.

I read of Peruna, tried it and had my hearing restored and catarrh cured. I cannot speak too well of Peruna."—Mrs. M. A. Sharick.

La Grippe Cured in Its First Stage.

Lieutenant Clarice Hunt, of the Salt Lake City Barracks of the Salvation Army, writes from Ogden, Utah:

Two months ago I was suffering with so severe a cold that I could hardly speak.

"Our captain advised me to try Peruna, and procured a bottle for me, and truly it worked wonders. Within two weeks I was entirely well."—Clarice Hunt.

Congressman White's Letter.

Tarboro, N. C.

Gentlemen:—"I am more than satisfied with Peruna and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."—Geo. H. White, Member of Congress.

Remained in Feeble Health After Cured of La Grippe.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer Independent Order of Good Templars, of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctor called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned. Peruna cured me."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER I.

A large house in one of the most fashionable London squares; an upper room, furnished something between a study and a boudoir; a small fire burning in the grate—for, in spite of the April sunshine, the wind was in the east—and for sole occupant a young girl, whose age was 18, though she looked a little older, perhaps because she had cried till her eyes were hot and swollen, and her cheeks had lost their delicate coloring—a girl who was the daughter of one of the richest commoners in England, and who yet was as unhappy as the poorest waif in London's streets.

Beryl Lindon had no mother. She could just recall a frail, delicate woman, who loved her very much, but who seemed too sad and sorrowful to show her affection. She had been a tiny child when that mother was taken away, and yet she had been quite conscious that, save for leaving her, the tired woman was glad to go. Her mother's love had been taken from Beryl full early, and no other had replaced it.

Mr. Lindon placed his daughter in a private family at the seaside until she was 10 years old, when she was sent to a boarding school in Brussels. Once a year he had called at the school, and had a brief, formal interview with his daughter in the principal's own sanctum; and 12 months ago he had removed Beryl from the select establishment, and brought her to his stately home in Elchester square.

For one year they had lived together, father and child, yet strangers in heart and feeling; they drew no nearer to each other. Beryl knew perfectly that to the handsome, well-preserved man of the world, still under 50, she was only an encumbrance. He took no trouble to conceal the fact, and his friends took little notice of the shy, frightened-looking girl they thought such a contrast to her fascinating father. She was not "out." It pleased Mr. Lindon to regard her as too young for society, so she had no chance of meeting people more congenial to her than her father's circle. She was terribly lonely, desperately unhappy; but yet, after reading the letter which had come from Mr. Lindon that morning, it seemed to the girl she had never before known what trouble meant, and that if only things could be once more as they were yesterday she would be content.

Her breakfast had gone away untouched—all her meals were served upstairs in her father's absence from home—and she sat over the fire, with a look of such pain on her face as was terrible to see in a girl of 18. Suddenly the door opened, and the housekeeper entered without the ceremony of knocking, unless, indeed, her knock had not penetrated to Beryl's dazed, stunned brain.

Mrs. Markham was a kind, motherly woman, not a lady by birth, but well educated, and with more refinement of feeling than many of her superiors. She had been in Eustace Lindon's employ ever since he took the house in Elchester square 10 years before.

"I came to speak to you, Miss Beryl," she said gently. "I had strange news from Mr. Lindon this morning, and when Nancy came down and told me you'd not touched your breakfast, I thought perhaps he'd written to you, too."

"Yes, Mrs. Markham. I can't quite take it in, it seems too terrible."

The housekeeper sat down opposite Beryl. She was quite as indignant as the girl could be.

"You see, Miss Beryl, your papa's not an old man—47, I believe—and it's natural he should tire of a lonely life. Perhaps his new wife will make things pleasanter for you. You've had but a dull time of it since you left school."

"I shouldn't mind his marrying," said Beryl frankly—"in fact, I think I should be glad; but that he should choose that woman, should put her in my mother's place—it is terrible!"

Mrs. Markham looked bewildered.

"Do you mean that the lady is any one we know, Miss Beryl? Mr. Lindon never mentioned her name to me. He only said the wedding would be at once, and he hoped to bring his wife home on May 1."

"He is going to marry Miss Maunders," said Beryl, almost apathetically.

The housekeeper started.

When Beryl Lindon first left school a very showy-looking woman was engaged as her maid-companion. Miss Maunders was supposed to walk with Beryl, look after her wardrobe, and make herself generally useful. From the first day of their meeting Beryl took antipathy to the woman. She felt that Miss Maunders was unworthy her trust and confidence, that she had none of the qualifications she professed; and the girl yearned to escape from the companionship she hated. At last, only three months ago, things come to a crisis, Miss Maunders, whom the household suspected of a liking for stimulants, went into a more violent rage than usual, and actually forgot herself so far as to strike her employer's daughter. At that time Mr. Lindon was away, spending Christmas in the country. Beryl, half beside herself with indignation, appealed to the housekeeper. Mrs. Markham paid Miss Maunders a month's wages and dismissed her on the spot, and she departed, vowing vengeance against Beryl.

And this was the person Mr. Lindon was to make his wife! The housekeeper could hardly credit it.

"Miss Beryl," said Mrs. Markham slowly, after a long pause, "I simply can't believe it! Are you sure you've made no mistake? Miss Maunders is no more of a lady than I am, or even one of the upper servants, and your papa's a gentleman through and through. It can't be true!"

"You had better read his letter," said Beryl simply. "There seems no reason for doubting it."

CHAPTER II.

It was a very brief letter, written on the thickest and creamiest of note paper, and barely covering the first page. Few men, let us hope, could have written in such terms to their only child, especially to a motherless daughter.

"Dear Beryl: I shall be married tomorrow to Miss Maunders, and I hope to return with my wife on May 1. You had better make up your mind to show proper respect and obedience to your stepmother, whose authority over you will be complete."

"It's a cruel letter, Miss Beryl," said Mrs. Markham, as she put it back in its envelope, "and may God forgive your father for writing it; but, my dear young lady, depend upon it, it's that woman's work."

Beryl shivered.

"Papa never cared for me," she said slowly. "Mrs. Markham, I have never said a word to any one, but I must now or my heart will break. I can never remember his kissing me, or seeming fond of me, even as a little thing."

"Maybe he wanted a son, Miss Beryl; but he'd no right to visit his disappointment on you. There'll be great changes here, for there's not one of my servants will stay here and call Miss Maunders mistress."

"And you will go, too?"

"I wouldn't stay an hour after she came home; but, as it happens, Miss Beryl, I've not my choice. Mr. Lindon has sent me a check for £50 instead of notice, as he says his wife will prefer to be her own housekeeper. I've saved money in the 10 years I've been here, and I don't think I shall take another situation. If I look round, I dare say I can buy the lease and good will of a small lodging house at the seaside reasonably, and that will seem more independent."

Beryl put one thin hand appealingly on the housekeeper's plump arm.

"Mrs. Markham, I can't stay here, I'd rather starve! You know what that woman was before, when she was only a servant. What would she make my life like when she is mistress?"

"My dear, it's a sorry business. Haven't you any relations you could go to for a bit, anybody who would take your part, and just tell Mr. Lindon that before you came back he must guarantee his new wife would treat you properly?"

Beryl shook her head.

"I don't think I have a relation in the world."

"Well," confessed Mrs. Markham, "I've been here 10 years, and I've never heard your father mention a relation; but, you see, Miss Beryl, there's the other side. Your mother must have had relations, and her family would be the best people to help you, because, naturally, they'd resent your papa's marriage as much as you do."

"Mamma had no relations," said Beryl. "I'll tell you how I know. The last thing I can remember of her was one day just before she died she begged papa to be kind to me. She said she had been an orphan, and knew how sad it was."

"But she might have had a brother or sister," persisted Mrs. Markham. "Miss Beryl, think quickly over your past life, and try to see if there isn't any one who'd be able to tell you."

"But my past story is so short," said Beryl, "it doesn't want thinking over. I know we lived abroad for a year or two before my mother died. My little sister went first, and mother never got over her loss. I had a nurse who was very good to me. She could have told me all I want to know; but papa sent her away directly after my mother's funeral. I think she went to America.

"Then he took me to a family at Brighton. Doctor Burgess and his wife were not unkind to me; but they had children of their own, and I always felt like the outsider. I know I was quite glad to leave them and go to school."

"Brighton's not a long journey," said Mrs. Markham. "It might be worth while to go and see them."

"I am sure they could tell me nothing. I stayed there till I was 10, and I know Mrs. Burgess told me one day I ought to be very fond of my father because he was the only relation I had in all the world. I think she had known my mother just a little. They were both orphans, and brought up in the same school—a kind of charitable institution."

Mrs. Markham felt in despair of finding any kindred for her young lady.

There's many would say it was your duty to stay with your father and make the best of things," she went on gravely; "but when I know what that woman is I can't bear to think of you at her mercy."

"If I went away, could my father force me to come back?" asked Beryl.

"No. You are of an age when a girl may choose her own home; but if you leave him he can refuse to provide for you."

For the first time that morning a look of hope came into Beryl's beautiful eyes.

"Then I'll get a situation of some sort, and go to it before he comes home. That will be quite easy."

Quite easy! The housekeeper's kindly heart ached for her. She knew too well how hard it is for a girl with no special talents or qualifications to find a niche, and they had only three weeks. The time was all too short.

"I don't want to encourage you to rebellion, Miss Beryl, and yet I can't bear to think of you at Miss Maunders' mercy. If you've quite made up your mind, my dear young lady, I'll do my best to help you find something."

Hard as posts generally are to find, specially those worth having, it is often comparatively easy to get into a situation at very low remuneration at the beginning of a school term. It happens now and then that principals have failed to settle with any one in the holidays, and have to take the first person who offers rather than begin school shorthanded.

Perhaps this explained Beryl's seeming success, for within a week of first answering advertisements she was engaged by Mrs. Tanner of Easthill-on-Sea, as English teacher in her small but select school in that rising watering-place.

The remuneration was to be £5 a term, at which Mrs. Markham sniffed; but the teacher was to have the option of remaining during the holidays, and so would be at no expense for board and lodging.

"I don't altogether like it," said Mrs. Markham, re-reading Mrs. Tanner's letter critically; "but, Miss Beryl, if only you stay a year, you'll be able to demand better terms in another situation, and I think you'd be happier anywhere than here under Miss Maunders' tyranny."

In truth, that lady was now Mrs. Lindon; but both the housekeeper and Beryl continued to speak of her by her maiden name—Mrs. Markham because she grudged her erstwhile subordinate her rise in life, and Beryl because it was painful to her to give her mother's title to a woman she hated.

Mrs. Markham came to see Beryl off, and had her luggage labelled for Easthill; then, when she had put the girl into an empty third-class carriage, she lingered for a few last words.

"Try and put up with things for the year, Miss Beryl, even if all's not as you would like. And if you're in trouble of any kind, my dear, just write to me. My sister will send on your letters any time, and I'd be proud to help you."

"Thank you." The tears were dimmer her head out of the carriage window and kissed the housekeeper warmly. "I shall be grateful to you as long as I live, Mrs. Markham. Without you I could never have managed to escape from Elchester square, and I think to have stayed there after she came would have killed me!"

The bell sounded, the engine gave a shrill, unearthly sound, meant presumably for a whistle, and the train was off.

Mrs. Markham did not turn away till she could no longer see the white handkerchief Beryl was waving; then there was a suspicious moisture in her eyes.

"God help her, poor little thing, for it seems to me no one else can! It's true enough, as she says, Mr. Lindon never loved her, and now he's married that woman it's as like as not he'd be worse than ever. They say he has 30,000 a year and a beautiful country seat, yet his daughter is content to work hard for £5 a term. It doesn't seem right, somehow."

And it was not right; but Mrs. Markham did not know one fact which would have explained a good deal that puzzled her. Eustace Lindon had an ugly secret in his past, a dark blot upon his character he would fain hide from all the world. He did not admire Julia Maunders, and he had not the least desire to marry her; but men with a secret, who are leading a double life, have often to pay dearly for the guarding of that secret. It happened that Julia Maunders knew a good deal of Lindon's past life, and the price of her silence was a wedding ring.

Pets Are Not Wanted by the Public Times of War.

Animal fanciers are bewailing the fact that pet beasts have not been sought by fashionable women since the war began. "Pet animals are not wanted in time of war," said Jamrach, the famous animal dealer of St. George's East, to an Express representative. "People have far more serious things to think about and spend their money upon. But when we have days of peace and plenty animal fanciers have all their time and energies engaged in finding rare and unique pets for the moneyed classes. I only deal in rare animals, but I never remember a time when I sold fewer than I have during the last twelve months." A pretty little fawn-colored beast gazed pathetically from between the bars of a cage and then licked the fancier's fingers. "Shouldn't have had you so long but for the war, should I, old boy? He is a fennec from Sahara, the only one of his kind in England," explained his master. "He would make an excellent pet for a lady; he is as faithful as a dog and most domesticated. Eighteen months ago I should not have kept him for a week. Now no buyer comes. One of my customers who was most keen to buy any rare pet I might come across has not been near me for weeks. Her son was in the C. I. V. and taken prisoner. The news quite took the heart out of her and she cared no more for pets. And it is exactly the same with dozens of other ladies with husbands and brothers in South Africa; they care no more for a rare animal than for a common tabby cat."—London Express.

INVALUABLE GRASS.

A Chinese Bamboo Which Produces Vegetable Opals.

It is the bamboo which furnishes the Chinaman with practically everything he requires through life, from his cradle to his coffin, and that also produces precious stones for him, only the celestial is not aware of the fact, or else attaches no value to it. In some varieties of this invaluable grass a mineral substance composed of lime or silica and potash is frequently discovered, being formed, it is supposed, owing to some kind of disease in the juices or stem of the plant. In the course of time, says the London Mail, this deposit hardens and forms the famous "tabasheer" of the natives, which exactly resembles the opal in appearance, and is, according to Prof. Brewster, of precisely the same character and composition. The Chinese, however, know nothing of its value as a precious stone, but collect tabasheer simply for its supposed medicinal properties. Unfortunately, some of the most finely marked and colored specimens of these vegetable stones are exceedingly fragile. It may be mentioned that in none of the varieties of the bamboo yet raised and found hardy in this country have any traces of a deposit of tabasheer at present been discovered, so that any one who contemplates the establishment of a bamboo plantation in England for the purpose of opal raising is recommended to invest his capital in some other way.

"TELEPHONE EAR."

Operators Say Answering Calls Does Not Affect the Hearing.

Chicago girls who listen to the click in the telephone receiver for eight hours every day in the week laugh at the idea that their New York sister operators are getting a "telephone ear," or a deafness, from the constant snapping of the call signals, says the Chicago News. "A 'telephone ear,'" remarked one girl who has operated a board in the central office for three years, "is the most acute one in the world, and the more noise there is in the phone the more trained our ears become to detect what is being said." "There are a great number of girls in this office," said the chief operator. "I sat at a board myself for several years, and I never heard a girl complain that the sound of the phone affected her hearing in the least. I know it never did mine." In speaking of the effect of the click on an operator's hearing A. S. Hibbard, the general manager of company said:

"I do not care to say that the New York people are wrong in their contentions that they have had cases of deafness due to the sound made in connecting and disconnecting the telephones, but it sounds improbable to me. We have had the signal system in Chicago for about five years. Almost every phone in Chicago now calls the main board without twisting a crank, and yet I have never heard of a complaint."

Cat That Never Tasted Meat.

A kitten has been brought up on an exclusively vegetable diet by a family of vegetarians. The result is that it will not touch animal food and it pays no attention to rats or mice.

It is mockery to pray that your children may be gathered home in eternity while you do nothing to keep them at home in time.

A man must have a conscience in order to detect the wrongs of his

Last winter, two little children were standing in front of the main entrance to the Senate Chamber, when Senator Chandler and a friend came through the door. One of them, a little girl of eleven, burning with curiosity, stepped to them and asked: "Mister, how much does it cost to go in there?" "You had better ask that gentleman coming up the corridor," said the senator from New Hampshire, pointing to Senator Clark of Montana, who was leisurely approaching the entrance.

APPENDICITIS

that dreadful fiend that threatens the life of rich and poor, can attack and kill only those whose bowels are not kept thoroughly cleaned out, purified and disinfected the year round. There are a number of Klemme citizens interested in the lead business of late. A company is being formed that has found lead at a depth of 3 feet, 15 feet down and 23 feet down, and the showing for a fortune seems apparently evident to turn all minds that way. And its all down in Missouri and Kansas. If someone would strike a lead like this in Iowa or Dakota it would be of somewhat greater import, as those other states are getting all the glory as rich places.

The IRL R HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and easy to take. For Sale by Harr.

A Fireman's Close Call.

Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction graranteed by J. L. Harr. Price 50 cents,

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co. Gardiner, Me. He says; "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medcine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by J. L. Harr.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and even Europe are sold to small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be providing dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

A cup of very hot milk taken at bedtime will effectually prevent sleeplessness.

Typhoid fever is due largely to choked drains both within and without the body.

The most easily digested meats are cold mutton, mutton chops, venison, sirloin, roast beef and chicken.

Green vegetables and good fruit contain certain salts and acids which may be called nature's medicine.

A prominent physician declares that a plentiful diet of onions, served in various ways, will protect children from many ills.

An old physician once said: "If people fully realized what it meant to themselves to laugh, and then laughed as they should, 90 per cent of the doctors would have to go out of the business."

Food for reflection is frequently hard to digest, but if used properly will not produce mental nightmare.

Mr. Corbett's congressional aspirations were doubtless created by the possibilities offered by the Congressional Record.

Chicago's city directory count makes a fine showing for that city, but the census bureau will hardly accept it as final.

Vermont's dishonest bank officials have been sentenced to prison. They filched enough to retain the activity of their lawyers and in due time their pardon will be asked for.

Consider the Boar war a "permanent fixture" in South Africa. All indications point in that direction!

Killroy's kite never soared higher than the people of Iowa are elated over the penurious and finally completely knocked out Titus Amendment, A Dewey did it in Manilla Bay, and a Dewey did it in Iowa. Good for the Deweys anyway.

A general state election will be held this year and the follow-officers are to be elected: Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, One Railway Commissioner, One Judge Supreme Court, Fifty State Senators, One Hundred Representatives, Treasurers, Sheriffs, Members of Board of Supervisors, Cornor and towhship officers.

Now the people seem to be responsible for that big farce, the Titus amendment, as the papers are unamimous in quoting "the people of Iowa will not want to monkey with any amendments for some time to come," or words to that effect. Would it be fittingly sarcastic to say the political chumps have received enough of their own "man healer" to satisfy their forebearing greed?

Ship "robbery" is the latest version for Ship "Subsidy." Just imagine the touch of elevation the Standard Oil Co., gets from such harsh language! While it is very degrading to a person to say that of him, it does not effect a big concern like Rockfeller's one iota. Rather liking the idea of being classed among the ,,systematic stealers" they go on and on cutting deep furrows into everything they come in contact with. Undying fact!

What's the matter with Hancock asking the state to rally to her support for gubernatorial honors. Men can be found in this county with political training adequate to such a position, and highly prominent and efficient to don the glory of such an aspect. Lubricate the political wheels and go after something good. What isn't worth having, isn't worth going after and what is worth having is worth a mighty effort, therefore, one will have to go after the governship of Iowa for dear old Hancock.

SEVERAL states are endeavoring to pass laws requiring that a man and woman must have some qualifications before they are allowed to get married. In many respects such a law would be a good thing. We have in mind a case in this county where a man and woman were recently married without a dollar in the world and after the cermony walked eight miles and secured situations as domestics on a farm. The woman is soon to become a mother with no home to shelter her unless the parties for whom she is working will give it to her. Money is not every thing in this world but unless a man has sufficient to provide a home, it would be better for him and all concerned if he remained single. —Britt News.

What a horrible picture to be painting for the benifit of prospective man and woman, husband and wife to be. Laws passed requiring a certain amount of education, and a paying position of some kind tinctured with a little social intellect would be feasible enough but one must revolt at the idea of a stipulated amount of financial ableness. To have a set sum of money before being able, or elligable, to marry, or marriage, will, we opine, drive more young people away from the sacred shrine of wedding ceremonies than love and money will capture. That is all we care to say in regard to this subject with the exception of one thing. Bring in your job work and advertising and take the paper!

SWEET SIXTEEN.

This subject is a bran new one. Never before or behind has an explanation been written to enlighten the minds of the wondering public in this regard. It has came down through all ages; ancient writters never thought of such a thing. Even Ole Omargerine neglected to mention it, either in all the prose or poetry he has written' that was never read, to this day, and Ole thought of many things. Its a good subject to work on. to wonder at, to think over, it surprises the curious, astonishes the wise and captures the young fellows. The sweet sixteens are alright so far as is generally known, at least the old bachalers and grass widowers like Bert Brawford and Bill Terhufen think so, they not only think so, but act and talk so—those kind of men do. By this sixteen business the idea to be conveyed is that girls of sixteen years of age are meant. Of course some girls never have any birthdays after they pass the 16 year mark. A girl of sixteen has seen 16 summers and 15 winters, visa versa, that dependihg on whether she was born in Irland or S. Wales, or whether she was born at all. Girls have been heard of who have had neither father nor mother; they just came into the world of their own accord, and didn't even choose a decent name. Also that a swell time will be had under the aupices of sixteen sweet sixteen girls, and for the benefit of the church here in Klemme, on the 16th day of this month, the year of the Lord, 1901, United States America, in the Woodman hall, and if you forget the day and place you wont remember it or know when to go or where. The sweet sixteens will abound in great numbers, like black birds in a corn field, in corn time, when the year falls, or during the corn harvest. They will be as thick as field ants in your dinner basket, along sometime in July, probably the fourth. There will be girls there who saw their 16 birthday, 16 years ago but that makes no differance they're going to be young again by taking some kind of a time reducer to cut their ages down, perhaps a McCormick mower, or hay knife will be used. A three cornered, left handed saw could be utilized. The doors to this entertainment will swing open at seven p. m. P. M. doesn't mean Philadelphia Mud-house, as some people think it does, it means Past Meridian after the sun gets across the center line of the daytime. Seven thirty usually comes after supper but this time it will come after seven o'clock and before eight. After you get inside you will hear something. Some people can't see on account of their eyes, others can't hear on account of their ears. Songs will be sung, sings will be sang, tunes will be nice, speeches will be spoken, recitations will be good and funny things will be funny and also to laugh at. If your laughter is out of fix you better get it mended because laughing is part of the arrangement. 16 cents in money will let you into the hall to see the music and hear the speeches. When they get through speaking and music-making something else on the program will come. A supper will be served not on the "soto vose" style but "a la faute," that that don't mean avaunt according to Hoyle either. It means just like any good supper would be served. There will be 16 tables all of which will have round legs, to hold them up. 16 eatables with that many tastes each will make 256 tastes, and 16 sweet sixteen girls, some older and some not so old will wait on you and bring you the spoons, dishes, et cetera. They will wait till all are ready to quit waiting, and then they will wait too, for some one to take them to supper. About as much has been said about this sadject as is usually the case, so that when this passes down in history the boy hereafter or thereafter won't won't need to wonder what it is, like us boys did when we were in school. The next time we write about this it will be something else, just like it. Bran new to all the people.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and easy to take. For Sale by Harr.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, February 10, 1901.

Governor Shaw has formally announced that he is not a candidate for a third nomination for governor at the hands of the republican party of Iowa. While the announcement was not unexpected, it will clear the political situation and precipitate an active campaign for the nomination. Governor Shaw's letter follows:

Hon. R. P. Clarkson, Des Moines.—My Dear Sir: The first mention of my name for a third term having appeared in the Register, it is due that its editor shall be the first to receive a formal statement of my position. This was unnecessary until after the decision of the supreme court on the Titus amendment, and now I avail myself of the first hour in my office after the decision to say: I have been urged by very many friends throughout the state, and not a few beyond, to become at least a receptive candidate. The people of Iowa have been exceedingly kind to me, and I ought not to rudely treat their more recent expressions of regard. But political precedent, the promptings of my heart, the wishes of my family and my deliberative judgment, all lead to the same conclusion. I must, therefore, decline to be a candidate or to allow the use my name, or to accept the nomination under any circumstances, however unanimously tendered. Yours sincerely, Leslie M. Shaw.

The probabilities are that within the next few weeks the Polk County Bar association will inaugurate a campaign in favor of the adoption by the legislature of a bill requiring judges of the supreme court to reside in Des Moines during their terms of office. As the law now stands the judges may reside anywhere in the state, and are required to be in Des Moines only during the terms of court, which are held at stated periods. The idea of those who have interested themselves in the measure is that by requiring a residence in Des Moines much more work can be accomplished by the supreme court. As it is now, the court is generally from six months to a year behind the docket. If the compulsory residence law can be enacted, the idea is to amend the laws relating to the terms of the supreme court, so as to have it in session continually from one end of the year to the other. It is the idea of the champions of the measure that by a regulation of this character the court can hold sessions every third week for the purpose of taking submissions and can devote two weeks to the preparation of opinions and the disposition of other work of the court. By such an arrangement it is claimed that the court would be able to work right up to the docket, and that decisions in the supreme court could be obtained as readily and as quickly as they are now secured from the district courts.

It is estimated by Secretary of War Root that it will take $519,000 to build so much of the Des Moines army post as can be planned by June 30, 1902. It will take twice as much more to furnish it and equip it and the soldiers. On January 31 Secretary Root wrote to Secretary Gage, of the treasury, as follows: "I have the honor to forward herewith, for transmission to Congress, an estimate ($519,000) of appropriation for 'military post, Des Moines, Iowa,' required for the use of the war department for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902." Secretary Gage wrote to Speaker Henderson of Iowa as follows: "I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, copy of a communication from the secretary of war, of the 31st ultimo, submitting an estimate of appropriation for the military post at Des Moines, Iowa, $519,000."

C. F. Wennerstrum, state commissioner of labor, has just returned from a trip through northern Iowa, where he inspected the tow mills of Mitchell, Howard and Chickasaw counties. He finds them in a prosperous condition, but the proprietors are all complaining of the difficulty of securing flax. The farmers of northern Iowa put in flax seed fifteen years ago and made a great deal of money, many paying for their land the first year. It was soon discovered, however, that flax was very hard on land. Since then the amount of flax raised has steadily decreased. At present it is put in occasionally, but no one farmer tries to raise it on the same land every year. The custom at present is to allow two or three other crops to intervene. This has materially decreased the output, which the two factories say is not great enough now to meet their demands. As a result of this they have formed a sort of informal association, the duty of which is to induce farmers to raise flax. The tow factories are located at New Hampton, Buena, McIntire and Cresco.

ENGLAND CALLS FOR TROOPS.

Thirty Thousand Men Wanted to Reinforce Kitchener.

London, Feb. 7.—The following announcement has been issued from the war office:

"In view of the recent Boer activity in various directions, the government has decided, in addition to the large forces recently equipped locally in South Africa, to re-inforce Lord Kitchener by 30,000 mounted troops beyond those already landed in Cape Colony. Recruiting for the imperial yeomanry has proceeded so rapidly that it is anticipated ten thousand will shortly be available.

"The South African mounted consabulary, including those enlisted in the colonies, may be relied upon to exceed 8,000, and the new colonial contingents to replace those withdrawn will probably reach 5,000.

"The remainder of the force will be made up of cavalry and mounted infantry from the home establishment. The enlistment of volunteers to replace those that have already served a year in South Africa is also being proceeded with. Arrangements have been made for the prompt equipment and transportation of the force. The first contingent will leave on the Aurania February 9."

Estate Pays $1,000 Inheritance Tax.

Burlington, Feb. 7.—The R. C. Crawford estate will pay $81,000 as a collateral inheritance tax. Deceased left an estate of $20,000, which goes to his brothers and sisters. There is some question raised in court whether the property must be appraised again.

Ends Agony by Death.

Colfax, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Bentley, wife of Mr. Bentley of the firm of Green & Bentley, wholesale druggists of Caloosa, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid, and then jumping from the veranda of the second story of the hotel.

Two Hundred British Are Taken.

Cape Town, Feb. 6.—The Boers captured 200 British when they rushed Oldersfontein January 30. The prisoners were subsequently released. Forty British were killed or wounded.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Senate—The senate met at 11 o'clock today and, with the exception of an hour and a half at the beginning of the session, devoted the entire day to the discussion of the ship subsidy bill. Turner and Mallory were the speakers for the opposition, Turner's speech was based largely upon exceptions which he had taken to Frye's criticisms of his former speech. Mr. Mallory opposed the bill on constitutional grounds.

House—The house spent the day until 3 o'clock in the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. At 3 o'clock public business was suspended to permit the members to pay tribute to the late Senator Davis of Minnesota.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Senate—The ship subsidy bill was laid aside informally today to permit consideration of appropriation bills. This action was taken on Allison's request that the District of Columbia appropriation bill be taken up. Frye, in charge of the shipping bill, who said he would not give way to appropriation bills without a vote of the senate, was not in the chamber at the time, but Mr. Aldrich, Mr. Hanna and others interested in the measure were present and joined in the general assent given to Mr. Allison's request. The shipping bill holds its place and, as the unfinished business, can be taken up when the appropriation bills are not occupying attention.

House.—The house today passed the senate bill to create a commission to adjudicate the claims of the United States citizens against Spain which the government of the United States assumed by the treaty of Paris after having amended the bill so as to refer the claims to the court of claims instead of a commission. A strong effort was made to vote down the amendment and pass the senate bill, but the advocates of this course were defeated by a vote of 123 to 88. A bill was without debate passed to extend the charters of national banks for another term of twenty years, when the present extension expires.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senate—The senate passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill and partially considered the bill making appropriations for the support of the West Point Military Academy. During the day the ship subsidy bill by a vote of the senate was finally laid aside and superseded as the unfinished business.

Washington, February 6.—Senate—Two important measures were disposed of today, the military academy appropriation bill and the war revenue reduction measure. The former was under consideration less than an hour. The only change made in it was the strengthening of the provision against hazing at West Point. During the remainder of the afternoon session the war revenue reduction bill was before the senate. A determined but unsuccessful effort was made to reduce the tax on bank checks and to provide that telegraph and express companies should bear the burden of the tax on messages and packages sent. The finance committee's amendment levying a tax on transactions in so-called "bucket-shops," modifying the tax on cigars and cigarettes and providing a rebate on unbroken packages of tobacco in addition to several others of a minor character, were adopted. An amendment substituting an income tax for the war revenue measure offered by Morgan of Alabama, was rejected by a party vote, 21 to 38.

House—Debate on the postoffice appropriation bill consumed another day in the house.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senate—The senate had both day and night sessions today. At the day session the pension appropriation bill, appropriating $144,000,000, was passed after a few minutes consideration. The ship subsidy bill was then taken up and McLaurin and Morgan, both democrats, made speeches upon it. McLaurin announced his intention to support the bill, and Morgan opposed it in vigorous language. He asked Mr. Allison for an estimate of the appropriations for the present session and the latter replied that he thought the aggregate would be about $700,000,000.

House—The postoffice appropriation bill, debate on which has consumed almost an entire week in the house, was passed today. The debate hovered about three topics, railway mail, pneumatic tube service and special fast mail facilities, but it bore no fruit.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Senate—An ineffectual effort was made in the senate today to secure an agreement upon a time for a final vote upon the shipping bill. Vigorous protests were made by opponents of the measure against the agreement, even for a date in the indefinite future. Mr. Pritchard, republican, of North Carolina, spoke today in support of the shipping bill, and then the naval appropriation bill was considered the rest of the day, the shipping bill being laid aside informally. The naval bill had not been acted on when the senate adjourned.

House—This was probably the last day to be devoted to private pension legislation by the house of representatives in this congress. High water mark, made in the Fifty-first congress was almost reached today, when 184 bills were passed, against 197 passed at a single session in the former congress.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Senate—During almost the entire session of today the senate had under consideration the naval appropriation bill. Practically the bill was completed when it was laid aside for the day, all the committee amendments being adopted; but as the measure was about to be placed on its passage, Butler, of North Carolina, precipitated a discussion of the armor plate question. In order to enable some others to speak upon the matter the bill was laid aside until Monday.

House—The consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill in the house today developed something of a sensation when Representative Brown, of Ohio, standing in the center of the republican side of the chamber, made a speech strongly condemning a colonial policy, and urging that congress should at once give assurances to the Filipinos that the purposes of the United States was to give them independence. His announcement that he would advocate a resolution to this effect was loudly applauded, particularly on the democratic side, and at the close of his speech many of his republican associates crowded about him and congratulated him. Representatives Miers, of Indiana, and Dinsmore, of Arkansas, also spoke on the Philippines.

Wants Cuban Constitution Adopted.

Washington, Feb. 7.—It was admitted yesterday by a high official of the government that the administration earnestly desired the adoption of the Cuban constitution before the adjournment of the present session of congress. The official who made this statement said that no official representations had been made to the Cuban convention, but that the delegates had been informally advised as to the views of the president on the subject.

A woman always loves those who admire her, but she doesn't always love those she admires.

LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER III.

Poverty presses harder on a man's pride generally than on a woman's, perhaps because most women care more for persons than for things; and while those near and dear to them are well and happy, the pin pricks of having to go without many things their neighbors have are not so keenly felt, while to a man each is a mortification.

Harold Dynevor was a good son, and a brave man; but poverty tried him sorely, and there was a constant chafing at the injustice of circumstances which made his life harder than it might have been, but which those who knew his story thought only natural.

Harold was a gentleman farmer. He worked quite as hard as many farmers who did not own the prefix; but he was the last male representative of a good old county family, who had been known in Sussex for many generations. He was popular wherever he went, his mother was devoted to him, his pretty sister, Kitty, looked up to him with fervent admiration; but Harold Dynevor could not be called a happy man. He had inherited a grievance, and the recollection of it marred his content.

"You're tired out, Harold," said Kitty gently. "I'm sure you work as hard as any of your own men. Sit down in your armchair, and I'll go and hurry tea."

"All right, dear," he said gratefully. "It may do me good, for I've a splitting headache."

Mrs. Dynevor waited till her daughter was out of hearing, then she asked anxiously:

"Is there anything wrong, Harold? You were going in to Marton; did you see Mr. Proctor?"

"I saw him, mother, and got a receipt in full. There's bad news. I meant to keep it from you, but I can see I've betrayed there's something wrong, so I'd better tell you the truth, for fear you think it worse than it is."

"You don't mean that the mortgagee wants to foreclose, Harold?"

Poor lady! that was the bugbear of her life. Uplands, the land which her son farmed, was her very own. It had been her wedding portion, and the home of her married life. When bad seasons came, and expenses multiplied, with her full consent her husband raised a mortgage on the farm. They had thought lightly of it then—a few good harvests would soon enable them to pay off the debt; but it had never been paid off in all those years. It hung like an incubus about them, and Mrs. Dynevor's one dread was that some day the mortgagee would foreclose, and, if they could not find the £5,000 due to him, they would have to leave their beloved home.

"No, mother," said Harold quietly, "it's not so bad as that; but you will like the news as little as I do. It seems Mr. King has been settling his affairs, and he has transferred the mortgage on the Uplands to some one else. Proctor told me the interest was still to be paid to him, so we shall have no personal dealings with our new creditor."

"Then I don't see that it matters," said Mrs. Dynevor. "Your dear father always said Mr. King was a very honest man. Do you mean that you have heard a bad account of the new mortgagee?"

"He is a man we both have cause to fear and dislike, mother—Eustace Lindon!"

Mrs. Dynevor had grown white even to her lips—nothing could have terrified her more; but she was a brave woman, and she knew, besides, where help and strength were to be found. One silent prayer to heaven, and she answered calmly:

"There is only one thing for it, Harold—we must raise the £5,000 and pay off the mortgage. To be at that man's mercy is more than I can bear!"

"I don't see how we're to do it," said Harold, gloomily. "There's no money in the bank, and we must spend a good sum on the farm this year, for everything wants renewing. The blow couldn't have come at a worse time."

"I wonder what his object is?" said Mrs. Dynevor, quickly. "He has never once been near this place, but he left it with your poor Aunt Nina just after their wedding. Not a year after her death he let the Manor to General Craven for fourteen years, and, except pocketing the money from the estate, he has taken not the least interest in the property since."

"Proctor says he has married again, and thinks he means to settle at the Manor. The general's lease expires year, and he has refused to renew it."

"If he means to live here, of course he would want to get rid of us first," said Mrs. Dynevor quietly, "for men never like the near presence of those they have wronged."

Now, according to the strict letter of the law, Eustace Lindon could not have been said to have wronged the Dynevors, yet every one for miles around Dynevor Manor regarded him as their despoiler.

It was a sad little story, so well known that every villager could have repeated it. When Mrs. Dynevor married and settled at the Uplands, her husband had an elder brother, Frank, who was 'squire of Dene, and the largest land owner for miles round. Frank Dynevor was devoted to the young couple at the Uplands. A good deal older than his brother, Charles, and a very studious, reserved man, he had reached the age of 40 without marrying. People were beginning to look on him as a confirmed bachelor, and to regard the little boy at the farm as the heir of the Manor, when, before Harold was 5 years old, his uncle suddenly returned from a summer holiday with a wife of 18.

There was not the least mystery about his young wife's antecedents. She was an officer's daughter, and had been brought up in an orphan asylum, which found her a situation as soon as she was old enough. She had been in it just six months when Mr. Dynevor came on a visit to her employer, and converted their little nursery governess into the mistress of the Manor.

If the family at the Uplands were disappointed, they made no sign, and welcomed the bride warmly. Frank Dynevor told his brother he meant to settle a small fortune on little Harold, "in case farming failed;" but he was not a businesslike man, and, being in sound health, no doubt he thought there was no hurry, and he might well wait till his nephew was out of the nursery.

The baby who arrived at the Manor within a year of the wedding was a girl. She was 2 years old when her father took it into his head to go out to Australia to hunt up some information for a book he was writing. Nina dreaded the sea, so he left her and her little girl at home. From that voyage he never returned. He died at sea. And Mr. Eustace Lindon, a fellow passenger, who had been with him a great deal at the last, brought the news to the poor little widow at Easthill.

CHAPTER IV.

There was consternation at the Manor and the Uplands; but when Frank Dynevor's will was read, his brother was amazed to find there was no mention whatever of his promise to secure Harold's future. It had been made immediately after the birth of little Lillian, and it left everything in trust to his wife for her daughter, and if the child died before reaching the age of 21 her mother inherited everything, with power to bequeath it to whom she pleased.

No wonder the Charles Dynevors were aggrieved. They would not have grudged the estate to Lillian; but that it should revert to her mother, that a girl who had never seen the old house three years before should have power, if her child died, to leave it away from the family who had owned it for centuries—it was terrible!

Perhaps their sense of injustice made the Charles Dynevors keep aloof from the young widow, and so they did not realize how quickly her acquaintance with Eustace Lindon ripened into intimacy; and it came on them like a thunderbolt when, a year and a day after her husband's death, Nina married the specious adventurer and went abroad with him.

Very little news of her reached Easthill. That she had a second child—another daughter—and that her health failed so rapidly she was obliged to live always in the south of France, was all the Dynevors heard in the first few years. Then there came a formal letter from Eustace Lindon, acquainting them with his stepdaughter's death; and, barely six months later, another to announce that his wife had passed away.

"She will have left him all the ready money; but she can't be so base as to bequeath him the Manor," Charles Dynevor said to his wife.

"I don't know. She was perfectly infatuated with him, and I suppose she would think of her child," replied Mrs. Dynevor.

But there was no mention of her child in the will. Mr. Dynevor paid half a guinea for a copy of it. It had been made immediately after the death of her firstborn, and it simply bequeathed "all property of which I may die possessed, real or personal, of every description whatever, to my dear husband, Eustace Lindon."

It had been drawn up by an English lawyer, and witnessed by the doctor and nurse who attended little Lillian in her last illness. Everything was perfectly in form. Mr. Proctor, the leading solicitor of Marton, who had been at school with Harold Dynevor, and remained his close friend, said that to upset it would be quite impossible.

So Eustace Lindon enjoyed his thousands and the Dynevors grew poorer every year. The father lived till his only son was old enough to take up the burden he had borne so bravely. His dying words charged Harold to be good to his mother and Kitty, and never, if he could help it, accept any favor at the hands of Eustace Lindon.

"I can't explain it to you, my boy," said the dying man, solemnly, "but I have thought a great deal about the past since my illness began. I would not say a word to your mother, lest she should brood over it; but I can't help feeling Lindon did not play straight. Your Aunt Nina was little more than a child when he married her; but she was singularly frank and true. Knowing as she did that Dynevor Manor had been in our family for centuries, I can't believe she would have left it away from the old name willingly."

"Do you mean you think the will was a forgery?" asked Harold.

"No; I believe it was obtained from her by undue influence. When she was very ill he must have worked on her fears in some way or other. I can't explain what I think, Harold; but I seem to know Nina Lindon never did us such a wrong willingly."

"I could understand it better if she had left anything to her child," said Harold. "The injustice to us would have been the same, but it would have been more natural."

Mr. Dynevor shook his head.

"It's a mystery we shan't fathom here, my boy. Only, with the instinct God sends sometimes to the dying, I seem to feel that Lindon is to blame. If he comes to live at the Manor, avoid him by every means in your power."

And that was the story of the past. It was not strange that, remembering his father's last words, it was torture to Harold Dynevor to think that the mortgage on his mother's home was held by Eustace Lindon.

Kitty and the tea tray came in together. There was a capable woman servant at the Uplands, but she had her hands pretty full; and both Mrs. Dynevor and her daughter were thoroughly domesticated, sweet, home-keeping women both of them, not learned in 'ologies and science, perhaps, but well gifted to make those about them happy.

Harold felt quite refreshed after his tea, and asked his sister cheerfully if any one had been there that afternoon.

"Only Helen Craven. She wants us to go to dinner there next week. I said Tuesday would suit you best."

When the Cravens settled at Dynevor Manor they made it perfectly clear to the family at the Uplands that they regarded them as friends and equals. The young Dynevors had spent some of their happiest days at the Manor, and Helen Craven was Kitty's closest friend.

"Tuesday will do nicely," said Harold. "I shall be glad of a little talk with the general. He may be able to tell me something about his landlord."

"Helen was quite radiant," went on Kitty. "It seems Alick is coming home next week on leave, and is going to bring his friend Captain Tempest with him."

She spoke with studied carelessness, and yet the speech had cost her an effort. Kitty and her mother were both dreadfully afraid Harold cared for Helen Craven. Loving him as they did, they were of course persuaded he could have won the general's daughter had he only made up his mind to woo. Both believed only his poverty and pride had kept him silent, and it had come on them as a blow when they discovered the great interest Helen took in the visits of her brother's chum, and they were forced to see that Captain Tempest was already more to her than Harold had ever been. So Kitty made this remark tentatively, as a sort of breaking the news to Harold that if he entered the lists he would be too late.

Dynevor never guessed Kitty's suspicions. He smiled quite cheerfully as he said:

"Sets the wind in that direction? Well, you will miss Helen dreadfully, Kitty, if she marries; but she is 22, so I suppose it's time she began to think of such a thing, and Jack Temple is a right down good fellow. I took a great fancy to him when he was here at Christmas. I only hope you'll have as good fortune, Miss Kitty, when your time comes."

Kitty and her mother exchanged congratulatory glances, which seemed to say: "He does not mind! he could not have cared for her really after all."

PASSING OF THE BELL.

No Longer Used to Record the Joys and Sorrows of Humanity.

The solemn and impressive custom of announcing death by the tolling of the church bell will soon be but a vague and distant memory. "The passing bell" has itself passed away and its slow, measured accents no longer tell the story of the departure of one more soul. The brief notice in the daily paper, while it conveys explicit information, fails to give something that the bell's tolling carried with it. The solemn rhythmic tones awakened a momentary vibration in the breast of every listener and bade each pause for sympathy and mediation. The bell admonished the sinner to repent and warned the thoughtless to take heed and mend his ways. It spoke clearly and comprehensively, and bade all scattered and preoccupied inhabitants attend its story. The bell's voice is identified with all the deepest and most sacred human emotions, says the Atlantic Monthly. It has bespoken the joys and sorrows of all mankind for centuries. Is its voice to die away and have no part in the life of the future? The wedding bells ring out no more save in some song or story. The Christmas chimes are seldom wafted to our ears. The church bells ring but faintly now and under constant protest. "The curfew tolls the knell of parting day" only in verse; a sunset gun today gives greater satisfaction. The Angelus sounds merely in pictoral form; the fire bells give place to still alarms; the dinner bell is silenced in polite society and sleigh bells are discarded. What is the future of the bell? That happy silver tongue that has sung out the joys of all the world; that solemn tone, that has mourned for the nation's dead and voiced the nation's woes, and summoned to their knees the nations' worshipers!

NOBLE RED MAN.

Difficult for the Indian to Become Self-Supporting.

How to make the Indian self-supporting is a problem which William L. Brown tackles in the Southern Workman. He would solve the problem by making the red men a race of goat herders. He says: "The question of self-support for Indians is a difficult one. The limitations imposed upon them by the nature of the country in which they live and the lack of an inherited habit of work, together with the pauperizing tendency of the ration system, make it difficult for them to progress very rapidly toward self-support. And since a training having this end in view should be one of the factors in their education the question is one in which the schools should be particularly interested. It has been suggested that goat culture might offer a solution of the difficulty in some localities. The Indians' familiarity with and love for animals makes herding a natural calling for them, and they can therefore be easily trained in the care of stock. Then, too, goats can sustain life where cattle cannot. That goat culture may be made profitable there is little doubt, since there appears to be a ready market for the various products. Statistics show that the importation of the skins, from which the chief value is derived, increased 28 per cent in the fiscal year of 1898 as compared with 1897. Most of the goat skins used in this country are imported. It has been estimated that the market value of the importation of these skins amounts to twenty million dollars."

PURE-FOOD LAW.

Kentucky Tests Show Fruit Jelly Made Wholly of Glue.

The General Assembly of Kentucky recently enacted a law providing for the inspection of food products sold in that state, and intrusted the work to the agricultural experiment station. The station submitted a report showing that fully 40 per cent of all samples of food taken were adulterated. Some of the adulterants used are injurious to health; others have been put in to cheapen articles of food. As examples of the former, the inspectors found so-called "fruit jellies" made wholly or in part of glue and artificial coloring and flavoring matters. They found salicylic acid, sometimes in large quantities, in tomato catsups, preserves and other food products which were sold as pure, and formaldehyde and other preservatives in milk, which perhaps in some cases was fed to infants. The most striking example of all is in the case of essence of peppermint and essence of cinnamon. These extracts contained wood alcohol, a poisonous substance, as one of the ingredients. In the preparation of these essences a mixture of wood alcohol and common alcohol was used in place of common alcohol, presumably to avoid the government tax on alcohol. This condition of affairs is by no means confined to Kentucky. Equally flagrant instances of adulteration are reported in the publications of other stations engaged in the inspection of foods and from many other sources.

Goat Frightened the Negroes.

Some boys in Macon, Mo., recently fed the contents of a box of seidlitz powders to a goat belong to a family which had recently moved into the neighborhood. Then taking it for granted that he was thirsty, they led Billy to a near-by trough and permitted him to drink heartily. Soon the fizzing began and the goat tore down the street toward the woods at a reckless pace. Some negroes living several miles out of town claim to have seen Old Nick himself, as they verily believed, rushing along the road in broad daylight. His majesty resembled an enormous goat, they said, but they recognized him as the devil, because he was spitting fire and brimstone.

Sore Hands

Red, Rough Hands, Itching, Burning Palms, and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air-holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Cured by Cuticura

I WAS troubled with hands so sore that when I put them in water the pain would near set me crazy, the skin would peel off, and the flesh would get hard and break, then the blood would flow from at least fifty places on each hand. Words never can tell the suffering I endured for three years.

I tried at least eight doctors, but my hands were worse than when I commenced doctoring. I tried every old Granny remedy that was ever thought of without one cent's worth of good and could not even get relief.

I would feel so badly mornings when I got up, to think that I had to go to work and stand pain for eight or nine hours, that I often felt like giving up my job, which was in the bottling works of Mr. E. L. Kerns, the leading bottler of Trenton, N. J., who will vouch for the truth of my sufferings.

Before I could start to work, I would have to wrap each finger on both hands, and then wear gloves, which I hated to do, for when I came to take them off, it would take two hours and the flesh would break and bleed. Some of my friends who had seen my hands would say, "If they had such hands they would have them amputated"; others would say "they would never work," and more would turn away in disgust. But thanks to Cuticura, the greatest of skin cures, it ended all my sufferings.

Just to think, after doctoring three years, and spending dollar after dollar during that time, Cuticura cured me. It has now been two years since I used it and I do not know what sore hands are. I never lost a day's work while I was using it or since, and I have been working at the same business, and in acids, etc.

He is despondent and peevish, and weak, and he does not know that there are merely signals—some from the stomach crying for aid—others from the nerves beseeching strength—still others from the great life-current—the blood—moaning that it is so impeded and clogged with impurities that it cannot move.

He, and all others like him, will find immediate relief in Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This is just what it was intended for. It never fails to make weak men strong and vigorous, puts new life, vim, strength, power and energy into them.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, electrician for the Thompson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:—"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not (at regularity) and got only a few hour sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed. I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

CONGRESSMAN HOWARD

Of National Reputation Are the Men Who Recommend Peruna to Fellow Sufferers

A Remarkable Case Reported from the State of New York

CONGRESSMAN HOWARD OF ALABAMA

House of Representatives,
Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio—

Gentlemen—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."—M. W. Howard.

Congressman Howard's home address is Fort Payne, Ala.

MOST people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head and nose. Nothing is farther from the truth. It may be that the nose and throat is the oftenest affected by catarrh, but if this is so it is so only because these parts are more exposed to the vicissitudes of the climate than the other parts of the body.

Every organ, every duct, every cavity of the human body is liable to catarrh. A multitude of ailments depend on catarrh. This is true winter and summer. Catarrh causes many cases of chronic disease, where the victim has not the slightest suspicion that catarrh has anything to do with it.

The following letter which gives the experience of Mr. ... C. Lockhart is a case in point:

Mr. A. C. Lockhart, West Henrietta, N. Y., Box 58, in a letter written to Dr. Hartman says the following of Peruna:

"About fifteen years ago I commenced to be ailing, and consulted a physician. He pronounced my trouble a species of dyspepsia, and advised me, after he had treated me about six months, to get a leave of absence from my business and go into the country. I did so and got temporary relief. I went back to work again, but was taken with very distressing pains in my stomach.

"I seldom had a passage of the bowels naturally. I consulted another physician with no better results. The disease kept growing on me, until I had exhausted the ability of sixteen of Rochester's best physicians. The last physician advised me to give up my work and go south, after he had treated me for one year.

"I was given a thorough examination with the X-ray. They could not even determine what my trouble was. Some of your testimonials in the Rochester papers seemed to me worthy of consideration, and I made up my mind to try a bottle of Peruna. Before the bottle was half gone I noticed a change for the better. I am now on the fifth bottle, and have not an ache or pain anywhere. My bowels move regularly every day, and I have taken on eighteen pounds of flesh. I have recommended Peruna to a great many and they recommend it very highly. I have told several people that if they would take a bottle of Peruna, and could then candidly say that it had not benefited them, I would pay for the medicine."—A. C. Lockhart.

Mr. W. P. Peterson, of Morris, Ill., says:

"I was nearly dead with catarrhal dyspepsia and am now a well man, better, in fact, than I have been for twenty years or more.

"Since I got cured by your Peruna I have been consulted by a great many people."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

PACKING HOUSE TO REOPEN.

Des Moines Plant to Begin Operations April 1.

Des Moines, Feb. 11.—That Des Moines is to have a packing plant the equal in capacity and up-to-date equipment of any in the state is now assured beyond question. For reasons that will be explained in a few days, but which at this time cannot be made public, the names of the capitalists who have leased the Liverpool & Des Moines plant from F. C. and F. M. Hubbell, who recently acquired the property by purchase from Harry West, are for the present withheld. However, a company having at its command financial resources of $500,000 with which to conduct the business has taken a lease of the packing house, and will begin next week to remodel the buildings and give orders for a large quantity of modern machinery. It is expected to have the plant in readiness to begin operations April 1. It will have a capacity of 1,000 or 1,500 hogs and 200 or 300 beef cattle per day, for the plant is intended to slaughter cattle as well as hogs. It will be operated the year round, shutting down at long intervals only to make needed repairs.

The plant will give employment to 300 or 400 men at good wages and will distribute hundreds of thousands of dollars among the farmers and stock growers of the state. It will be, in fact, conducted on a scale equal to Sinclair's plant at Cedar Rapids or the Morrell house at Ottumwa.

CUMMINS IS A CANDIDATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 11.—A. B. Cummins has announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for governor. He authorizes the publication of the following statement:

"My friends have urged me so strongly to become a candidate for governor that I feel compelled to accept their views rather than my own, I have, therefore, consented to allow my name to be used. I desire it to be definitely understood, however, that I am not, and will not be a candidate for United States senator to succeed either Senator Dolliver or Senator Allison."

Mr. Cummins' announcement followed close upon the heels of a protracted conference of his friends at which it was the unanimous wish of those present that he be a candidate. Mr. Cummins attended the conference and stated at the outset that he would not be a candidate unless it was impossible to induce someone else to make the race. A thorough canvass of the situation, in which the other possible candidates or some one authorized to speak for them participated, was made, with the result that no one would allow his name to be used, and the solution of the difficulty was again brought back to Mr. Cummins. After each speaker had urged Mr. Cummins to become a candidate he consented.

SURVEY OF ROUTE BEGUN

Electric Line Between Des Moines and Newton Seems Assured.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—James Carss of this city, assisted by a corps of engineers, has begun the survey of a route from Des Moines for the proposed interurban electric railway line with which it is the expectation to place Newton, Colfax, Mitchellville and Altoona within hourly reach of the capital city. Mr. Carss and Mr. A. P. Chamberlin, the latter of whom is an active promoter of the enterprise, made a cursory inspection of the route recently. Mr. Carss showed Mr. Chamberlin that a feasible route with easy grades and a reasonably direct course for the line could be had, and being satisfied with the inspection, Mr. Carss was given orders to employ assistance and proceed to make the survey at once. He started out yesterday morning prepared to do the work. He will continue in the field until the route is completed and an estimate of the cost of the line submitted to Mr. Chamberlin and the Cleveland, Ohio, parties reported to be interested with him in the construction of the road.

POLK COUNTY COURT HOUSE.

Supreme Court Issues Injunction Restraining Supervisors.

Des Moines, Feb. 8.—The supreme court granted a restraining order in the case of J. H. Windsor vs. Polk county, restraining the board of supervisors from taking any steps looking to the expenditure of the $300,000 now on hand as a result of the sale of the court house bonds until the case is finally disposed of by the supreme court in May. This is the case brought to mandamus the board and compel it to use the money to refund the bonds or to resubmit the bond proposition on the ground that the rescission petition was not properly disposed of. In the district court the plaintiff was defeated and an appeal was taken. Attorneys for both sides of the controversy say that the order granted by the supreme court merely restrains the board from expending any portion of the $300,000 until the court has passed on the case. It does not prevent the board from removing to the temporary quarters provided in the Harbach building or from tearing down the old court house.

ROBBERS SECURE $10,000.

Stolen From Express Company While Being Transferred.

Manila, Feb. 11.—An American express package said to contain $10,000 was stolen here Saturday night shortly after the arrival of the Sioux City & Dakota train from the north at 10 o'clock. When the Sioux City & Dakota train pulled in the packages from the express car destined for the east were piled up on two trucks to await the coming of No. 4, east bound. Among the packages to be transferred was one said to contain $10,000. When No. 4 pulled into Manila the work of loading the express matter from the Sioux City train was begun. When the second truck was reached the absence of the safe in question was discovered. Immediate search was made, but no trace of it could be found. No. 4 was held for an hour and a half while the search was prosecuted, but finally proceeded without the safe. No clue of the robbers or their method of operation can be found.

Saloons for Grundy County.

Iowa Falls, Feb. 9.—The canvass for the opening of saloons in Grundy county is reported as successful, the recent petition having resulted in securing the necessary sixty-five per cent. Notwithstanding a strong opposition to the movement on the part of the temperance element of the county, the petition is said to have passed the review of the board of supervisors and the desired result secured by the saloon men.

A Creston Sensation.

Popejoy, Feb. 6.—Henry Carr of this place was badly burned by the explosion of gasoline. He was lighting the fire and had poured some on the kindling and still held the five-gallon can in his hand as he lighted a match. The gas from the can caught and the whole thing went up. Carr was badly burned from head to foot, and is in a dangerous condition, with but very small chance for recovery. The house caught fire, but by the prompt aid of the neighbors it was extinguished before any great damage was done. Mr. Carr is married and has two small children.

FLOYD TABLETS ARRIVE.

Bronze Plates for Monument of the Iowa Explorer.

Sioux City, Feb. 9.—The two large bronze tablets to be placed on opposite sides of the Floyd monument have arrived here. The tablets were ordered by a committee of the Floyd Memorial association. They weigh about 1,000 pounds each and the dimensions are 4 feet and 7⅛ inches by 6 feet 5¼ inches. At the top of one of the tablets is the word "Floyd," with a wreath surrounding it. This inscription follows:

"This shaft marks the burial place of Sergeant Charles Floyd, a member of the Lewis and Clark expedition. He died in his country's service and was buried near this spot August 20, 1804. 'Graves of such men are Pilgrim shrines, shrines to no class or creed confined.' Erected A. D. 1900, by the Floyd Memorial association, aided by the United States and the state of Iowa."

The inscription on the other tablet is as follows:

"In commemoration of the Louisiana purchase, made during the administration of Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, April 30, 1803. Of its successful exploration by the heroic members of the Lewis and Clark expedition. Of the valor of the American soldier and of the enterprise, courage and fortitude of the American pioneer, to whom these great states west of the Mississippi river owe their secure foundation."

PERKINS TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

Sioux City, Feb. 9.—George D. Perkins, editor of the Sioux City Journal, is a candidate for the nomination for governor of Iowa.

Yesterday afternoon a committee, headed by Mayor A. H. Burton, called upon him to notify him that they had determined, by means of petitions which had been numerously signed, that it is the unanimous desire of the republicans of this vicinity that he stand as a candidate.

Mr. Burton paid a high tribute to Mr. Perkins' statesmanship and integrity in public offices, as demonstrated during his four terms in the national house of representatives. In his response to the mayor's remarks Mr. Perkins agreed to stand as a candidate.

Mr. Perkins is well known throughout the state, and during his political life has made a record he has good right to feel proud of. At one time he was a state senator and his name has often been mentioned for a seat in the United States senate.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY.

Hotel Register Will Figure in a Case in Wapello County.

Ottumwa, Feb. 9.—John R. Kane of Eldon has been indicted by the Wapello county grand jury, charged with perjury, in that he swore in a recent case which was tried at this term of court, and in which he was plaintiff, that he was not in Ottumwa on a certain day in December, 1898, when it was shown by a hotel register that he was at a hotel on that date. It is the result of alleged swindling operations of one John W. Barton, who muleted Kane to the extent of $800 on a bogus mortgage. Barton was introduced to Kane by C. E. Norton, a real estate dealer of this city, who, it was claimed by Kane, knew that the instrument was forged, but, on a recent trial, in which Kane claimed damages from Norton, the decision was in Norton's favor.

CHILD BURNED TO A CRISP.

Infant Son of John Smith of Valley Junction Meets Horrible Death.

Des Moines, Feb. 8.—The 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Valley Junction was left with two other Smith children in the house while the mother went to the bedside of a sick neighbor. The children ignited some paper in her absence and by some means set fire to the clothing of the child. Its screams attracted Mrs. Tigh, a near neighbor, but when she reached the house the little one was burned to a crisp. The clothing was burned from its body and the skin sloughed off in large chunks. It lived but ten minutes after Mrs. Tigh succeeded in stifling the flames. The other children are 5 and 6 years of age.

Butter and Egg Men Meet.

Des Moines, Feb. 9.—The Iowa Butter and Egg Dealers' association, at its annual meeting here, learned from W. K. Boardman, the committee appointed to make the effort, that the railway companies would not grant the association's request for a car load rate on eggs from the Mississippi river to the seaboard. The seaboard rate applies now only to Chicago, necessitating storage charges in Chicago and local rates this side. Mr. Boardman was urged to continue his efforts with the traffic associations and report at the next meeting of the association, March 21. The following officers were elected: President, T. L. Emry, Brighton; secretary, W. M. Verhey, Des Moines; treasurer, George W. Nicholson, Grand Junction.

Big Land Deal.

Iowa Falls, Feb. 9.—The biggest land deal ever closed in this county has just been consummated in this city, the transaction involving over 75,000 acres of land in northern Minnesota. The purchase of this big tract of land is made by Ellsworth & Jones, the well known real estate firm in this city, who will at once open up that section and place it on the market to meet the demand now made for good, cheap farm lands. The land is located in the counties of Aiken and Wadena and comprises several townships in each.

Important Tax Ferret Decision.

Mt. Pleasant, Feb. 8.—Judge Withrow, of the district court, handed down a decision in the case of Saunders & Tate, sustaining the tax collecting law of 1897, generally known as the tax ferret law, giving to Henry county taxes amounting to $2,143 on property not returned to the assessors. The decision is important to all parts of the state.

Search Is Abandoned.

Sioux City, Feb. 9.—The search for the murderer of John E. Robson will probably be abandoned because of the failure of the board of supervisors to appropriate money to carry on the search. Frank Peyton has just been discharged from the responsibility of the crime, after confessing to it and then swearing that he did not commit it.

New Button Factory.

Burlington, Feb. 9.—Burlington is to have a new industrial concern that will employ 300 people, and active operations will begin on April 1. Articles of incorporation of the Black Hawk Pearl Button company have been filed with the county recorder. The capital stock is $25,000.

Horrible Crossing Accident.

Council Bluffs, Feb. 7.—Isaac Smith, aged 65 years, of Missouri Valley, was killed outright; Jos. Coffman, aged 19, of this city, was so badly injured that he died two hours later, and James Smith, aged 7, also of this city, was fatally injured by Northwestern passenger train No. 3. They were coming into the city to visit the parents of the Smith boy. They were in sight of the Smith residence when struck by the train. The parents of the child saw the accident, but did not know for half an hour later that one of the victims was their son.

Marcus Clark, the author of "His Natural Life," the greatest book ever written south of the equator, related to a friend that he had once discovered a French novel that he considered a work of genius. He translated it into English, and when a Melbourne firm brought it out, publisher and translator were astounded at discovering that he had merely Englished a French translation of one of George Eliot's works.

Not long ago an American professor attended a reception in the royal palace, given by the kaiser to an association of scientists, at which William appeared in the gorgeous robes of royalty, preceded by liveried chamberlains bearing the crown and insignia. It was a most impressive display, and when the professor came away he said to a friend; "I am a republican to the backbone, but I believe that if monarchs are necessary they should be monarchs to the last bit of gold lace, just as William is kaiser." The next day this friend had an audience with the kaiser, and in the course of the conversation told him what the American professor had said. The kaiser laughed heartily. "That is exactly what I believe," he said; "Dom Pedro of Brazil illustrated the folly of trying to be a republican on a throne."

ONE DOLLAR PER PILL.

Miss Nettie Hixon Says the Remedy That Cured Her Would Be Cheap at This Price.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 11, 1901.—(Special.)—Miss Netta Hixon is Sergeant-at-Arms of Camp No. 1, Patriotic Order of America. Her home is at No. 1717 Hughes street, this city. She is a very popular and influential lady. For three years she has been ill. Now she is well. She says: "I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly for what they have done for me. I was troubled for three years with weakness, and often had dizzy spells, so that I dared not go out alone. My head would ache continually for four or five days at a time, until life became simply a burden.

"All the medicine I took did me no good, until my physician advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I secured a box, and soon found that my headache was leaving me. I felt encouraged and kept on taking them and getting stronger. The pains gradually diminished, until I had used four boxes, and all trace of pain had gone. I am today a strong and well woman, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills. If the price was one dollar per pill, instead of 50c a box, they would be cheap, compared with other so-called medicines placed before a suffering public." This is but a sample of the letters received every day by the hundred. They all tell the same story of sickness and soreness, changed into health and vigor by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They never fail. 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he can't supply you, send to the Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Still More Counterfeiting.

The Secret Service has unearthed another band of counterfeiters, and secured a large quantity of bogus bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected for imitation, notably Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but few equals for disorders like indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. Always go to reliable druggists who have the reputation of giving what you ask for.

WHAT IS OVARITIS?

A dull, throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with an occasional shooting pain, indicates inflammation.

On examination it will be found that the region of pain shows some swelling. This is the first stage of ovaritis, inflammation of the ovary. If the roof of your house leaks, my sister, you have it fixed at once; why not pay the same respect to your own body?

You need not, you ought not to let yourself go, when one of your own sex holds out the helping hand to you, and will advise you without money, and without price. Following is a letter from a woman who is thankful for avoiding a terrible operation.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound having been recommended to me, I decided to try it. After using several bottles I found that I was cured. My entire system was toned up, and I suffered no more with my ovaries."—MRS. ANNA ASTON, Troy, Mo.

Died:—Robert Scott Henderson, on last Wednesday He was born on Mar. 11th. 1898 and was sick about two days Funeral services were held in the Eng. M. E. church on Friday, Feb. 8 Rev. E. A. Phelps officiating.

How does this strike you for a big check? W. R. Bloom Saturday issued a check for $3,680,53 to Mr. Fred Pringletts for grain and stock raised on his farm west of town. Mr. Bloom says this is the largest check he ever issued to a farmer.

Mrs. Wm. Watson, of near Meservey, was a Klemme visitor Saturday. She informs us that herself and husband and family were to leave this part of the country Tuesday, going to the state of Washington to make their future home.

Ferd Mundt, who formerly did business in the hall now owned by the town, but now of Humbolt, South Dakota, and his Bro. Wm. who run the Northern Lumber Co's yard at this place, and now lives at Garner. were pleasant callers in Klemme Thursday last.

The Ellsworth College, at Iowa Falls, of which our boys, Wm. Barz, Otto Frei, Frank Kluckhohn and Steve Hamilton are students, was last week quarrentined on account of two cases of small pox breaking out. The Morningside College at Sioux City we understand has also been quarrantined, eighteen cases having taken the disease. A number of Klemme boys are at this school. The report does not say whether any of them are afflicted.

There are a great number of subscribers on our list, both at home and abroad, who are in arrears for the KLEMME TIMES from one to five years. Now these need your prompt attention. Too much for nothing is more ordinary mortals care to give. and as we are human the same as our friends we must have some money to conduct ourselves and business with. This is the last call we shall make either by statement or through our columns. "Where there is a will there is a way" and it will work both ways, thank goodness, see if it don't.

A number of our exchanges have been shouting the praises of their wonderful creameries sky high within the last few weeks, and it is now time to do a little shouting for glory ourselves. consequently, the following figures will prove that the Klemme creamery is far in the lead:

No. Inches cream.....107,104.
Amount money rec'd..$18,504,43.
Amount paid patrons..14,955,85.
Total Expense.....3,297,82.
Surplus .....250,76.

This covers the year of 1900, and takes in all business transacted during the period of Jan. 1st 1900 to Jan. 1st 1901.

A Budget of Roosevelt Stories.

Twenty excellent stories and anecdotes of Theodore Roosevelt never before printed, and told anonymously by the "intimates" and closest friends of the Vice-President-elect, will be published in the next issue or The Ladies' Home Journal.

School Notes.

Mable Smith has now returned to school, being absent on account of sickness.

Mrs. Hawley is now teaching the primary room after her long seige of sickness.

Most of the scholars are now supplied with books so school is now in running order after the loss of our fine school house.

We are looking forward to a basket social for the benefit of the school. The date has not been decided upon but will be in the near future.

Supt. Shell was in Klemme a few days last week, he called at the school. He gave the scholars great hopes as to the building of a new school house. He also said that the scholars of Hancock County were considered some of the most intelligent scholars in the state of Iowa, also that the number of scholars in the Hancock County schools were 3,500. not including Garner or Britt.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable. and will prove a good investment.

What would you do if taken with colic or cholera morbus when your physician is away from home and the drug stores are closed? After one such emergency you will always keep Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in your home; but why wait until the horse is stolen before you lock the stable? For Sale by Harr.

The IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof, Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

Proposals For The Erection Of School House.

Notice is hereby given that the proposals for the erection of a school house in the Independent District of Klemme, on Block two (2) in Klemme's first addition to Klemme in the county of Hancock, State of Iowa, will be received by the undersigned, at his office in Klemme, (where plans and specifications may be seen), until one o'clock p. m. Thursday Mar. 14th 1901 at which time the contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. A certified check of two hundred ($200.00) dollars must accompany all bids. The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Dated this 14th day of February 1901.

J. L. Harr, Secretary.

Rumor says that Kanawha is to have a large brick block this spring.

Are you represented in our columns as one of the hustling business men?

Mrs C. Nation has been converted from "smashing" to lecturing. It happened a little over a week ago.

Garner is figuring on having some light in the future. Electric light franchisements are being discussed.

Sale bills made at this office. any time you want them, any way you want them and at reasonable prices.

51 new subscribers since the first day of October is not so bad for the Times, considerihg that a large and steady list was had to begin with.

Rumor now says that the members of the German Reform church are contemplating the erection of a handsome parsonage in Klemme.

One of our citizens says, "it is a mighty good thing that mankind differs in opinion, if they didn't there wouldn't be any chance for argument."

Aug Lau shipped a car of hogs and Aug. Burts chipped a car of cattle Tuesday morning. Mr. Burts went in with them —Hancock Democrat.

Who is Mr. Aug. Burts.

A debate "Resolved that the United States has deteriorated within the last decade" will be discussed to night in the German township center school house, Klemme vs Germantown.

At a sale recently held on the S. Schumacher farm east of town the auctioneer, John Duff of Mason City, sold $3500 worth of stuff in less than four hours. He must be a modern hipnotist.

An exchange says "there are still some lands in Northern Iowa, Southwestern Minnesota, and South Dakota." That's surprising one wouldn't imagine South Dakota more than "barren waste."

The proposals for the erection of Klemme's new school house will be received by secretary J L. Harr, until the 28th day of March, when the lowest responsible bidder gets the contract. Read the notice in this issue.

At the sweet Sixteen entertainment on Saturday night $28.25 was taken in as the gross receipts. The program was well endered to a large and intelligent audience, and all seemed satisfied to have gotten their money,s worth.

The feeling of enmity on the part of some of our citizens to the extent that they will not take the paper under any circumstances but borrowing is not the proper caper at all. If the paper is worth borrowing to read, it is worth paying for!

The Garner Herald does not hesitate one minute in clipping articles bodily from the KLEMME TIMES and not giving proper credit. This kind of business has been going on for some time but it would look a whole lot nicer if Bro Sage would give us credit.

Sidney A. Foster, of Des Moines Harriman, of Hampton, Perkins of Sioux City, and Cummins, of political fame, are all on the docut as nominees, for Governor of Iowa on the republican ticket.

Bro. Greeley of the Thornton Enterprise says we don't know how to spell male pig. We do, too, but as there is two ways of spelling it the task is harder. Boer spells the one in South Africa and Boar spells the one our farmers are raising and getting rich on, and Webster will serve as proof.

PUBLIC SALE.

I will sell at Public Auction on Tuesday, Feb. 28th, 1901, at 10 o'clock sharp on the old Chas. Lunn farm, 6 miles west of Klemme, 7 miles north-east of Kanawha and one mile north-east of Bailey's Grove, 8 head of horses, 26 head of cattle, a large amount of farm machinery, some hay, 500 bushels of corn, some house hold goods, and other articles too numerous to mention.

MRS. A. E. KEMPKES.
Herm. Brummond, Auc.
F. M. Hanson, Clerk.

A little previousness on the part of the editor, tinctured with foolishness, brought us into the contempt of one of our citizens last week. In one of our articles we alluded to that man in an improper manner and wish to beg leave to set things aright. No injury was meant to anyone in particular and no one in general and if we have done anything to wound the feelings of anyone by using their name as an example we are sorry for it. Had we not neglected the old proverb "to whom you speak, of whom you speak, and how and when and where" it would not have happened.

Officials at the postoffice in a neighboring town the other day kept tab on the number of times a certain family's mail was called for. Four children went three times each—that made twelve; the mother dropped in about 5 o'clock. After supper the head of the household walked in and inquired for his mail. When informed that there was nothing for him, he bluntly inquired: "Aint there no papers?" And when asked what paper he took, replied. "Oh, I don't take none regular, but I sometimes get a sample copy." The official closed the window for the night gasping, "Oh Lord, Deliver us." —Ex.

Teachers' Review Term, Humboldt College, Humboldt, Ia., opens Feb. 26. Come.

EDITOR TIMES please insert this in this week's paper.

That our Institute may do the most good to the most people, I will ask the farmers that may have anything extra good in grains or seeds, also the best corn that will make the most and best fodder to sell, to bring samples of same with amount to sell and price of same, this will do the seller and buyer some good.

This is what our Institute is for. I will see that there is a suitable place to display the same.

Yours for the interest of the farmer.

JAMES L. MANUEL.

GIVE the old soldier a chance. The old fellow wont be with us long. Don,t kick and thump him around so hard. He'll not stand in your way long. Once he stood between yous homes and enemies. He drove them back and preserved the nation; now give him a fair chance with the stay at home. You owe it to him. He deserves it. He generally stands aside for the machine politician and hardly ever complains. Let him into an office where he can earn his bread an bread for those depending upon him without bending his back beneath a load of toil all the time. Show a little gratitude, We know the old soldier vote is not as potential as it used to be, and is becoming less every day, but this ought rather to be in his favor than against him.—Sheldon Sun.

WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES

HARD PERUNA AS THEIR SHIELD AGAINST CATARRH, COUGHS, COLDS, GRIP AND CATARRHAL DISEASES.

MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, LATE CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent barrister, of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. She is the best known woman in America. As the pioneer of her sex in the legal profession, she has gathered fame and fortune. In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, she says:

"I have used Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Benson, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down, and with nerves unstrung."—Belva A. Lockwood.

Mrs. T. Pelton.

Mrs. T. Pelton, 562 St. Anthony ave., St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"Peruna has done wonders for me. It has cured my headache and palpitation of the heart; has built up my whole system. I cheerfully recommend Peruna to all sufferers afflicted with catarrh. My mother is never without Peruna. When one is tired out generally out of sorts, if Peruna is taken it immediately removes that tired feeling."

Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, once said, in a lecture to women: "A great number of women consult me every year. I often have occasion to say to these patients, 'I fear you have catarrh, madam.' They will generally reply, 'Oh, no, I never had catarrh. My nose is perfectly clear, and my breath is not bad, I am not troubled with coughing or spitting, or any other disagreeable symptoms of catarrh.' But, my dear madam, you may have catarrh all the same. Catarrh is not always located in the head. You may have catarrh of the lungs, or stomach, or liver, or kidneys, and especially you may have catarrh of the pelvic organs."

The doctor went on to say: "I have been preaching this doctrine for the last forty years, but there are a vast multitude of women who have never heard it yet. Catarrh may attack any organ of the body. Women are especially liable to catarrh of the pelvic organs. There are one hundred cases of catarrh of the pelvic organs to one of catarrh of the head. Most people think, because they have not catarrh of the head, they have not catarrh at all. This is a great mistake, and is the cause of many cases of sickness and death."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Julia C. Brown, of Pecatonica, Ills., says: "I have used Peruna in my home for the past four years and am thoroughly convinced that it is a reliable family remedy."—Julia C. Brown.

Nervous Prostration.

Mrs. Lettie Fisher says: I had serious trouble for years, which at times is completely prostrated me and made life not worth living. I tried many physicians and no end of nerve and other remedies without relief. Finally M. J. Crews, merchant, Maloy, Ia., persuaded me to try Morley's Sarsaparilla and Iron. The very first bottle went to the right spot, for I found a complete change, and now, after using six bottles in all, I am perfectly well. Sold by agent in Maloy town.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, February 18, 1901.

Justice F. E. Duncan has rendered an important decision in the case of the state of Iowa vs. J. C. Hansen, charged with infringement of civil rights, declaring the defendant to be not guilty on the novel grounds the sale of liquor even under the provisions of the Martin mulct law is illegal. He holds, therefore, that Hansen cannot be held liable for an act that, had he performed it, would have been the means of causing him to break the law. William Graves, a colored man, went into Hansen's saloon in East Des Moines some time ago and, it is alleged, was refused liquor after having tendered Mr. Hansen the price for it and requesting the latter to sell it to him. He swore out a warrant for the arrest of the saloonkeeper on the grounds of discrimination. The defendant was brought before Justice Duncan, who held to the above theory. Justice Duncan bases his assertion that the sale of liquor under the provision of the Martin law is illegal on sections 2447 and 2448 of the code, which says: "Nothing contained in this chapter, so far as it relates to the mulct law, shall be in any way construed to mean that the business of the sale of intoxicating liquors is in any way legalized." From this section the justice holds that it is clear the law does not contemplate that the sale of liquor is not a crime, but that those who comply with the provisions of the mulct law are simply protected from prosecutions.

Sidney A. Foster, of Des Moines, has announced that he is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor of Iowa. He states his position in the following open letter:

"Through the Press to the People of Iowa: I desire to be the republican nominee for governor of Iowa at the coming state convention. I ask for the nomination because I want it, and submit the candidacy upon its merits.

"If nominated I shall be faithful; if the nomination goes elsewhere I shall support with loyalty the nominee.

"This announcement is made without advice, suggestion or promise from anyone, is backed by no bureau, organization or combination. The method is unusual, but after a residence of more than a quarter of a century in Iowa, my belief has been strengthened that the people are always worthy the fullest confidence of a citizen.

(Signed) "Sidney A. Foster."

Having elected officers, the convention of the Iowa County Treasurers' association adjourned Thursday afternoon. The next meeting will be held in Des Moines as early in 1902 as possible, so as to give time to introduce bills that may be agreed upon at that time.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, George W. Eakle, Linn; vice president, J. W. Magoun, Woodbury; secretary, C. H. Smith, Marshall; treasurer, A. R. Cherry, Johnson; executive committee, Wm. Arnd, Pottawattamie; J. A. Magoun, Woodbury; secretary, C. H. Smith. A legislative committee was also appointed, consisting of the following: C. C. Cunningham, Marion; A. R. Cherry, Johnson; B. M. Huntley, Boone; N. H. Cahall, Guthrie; G. J. Shoemaker, Sioux.

The executive council has settled the much-discussed question of the publication of the year book of agriculture by ordering an edition of 2,000 copies. The last general assembly provided for a year book of agriculture to be printed in such numbers as ordered by the executive council, the work to be done by the lowest bidder. But no appropriation was made for the purpose, and as the department of agriculture was unwilling to use its funds for the purpose, it seemed for a time as if there would be no year book. Attorney General Mullan held recently that the work should be done by the state printer in the absence of an appropriation, and the council took action accordingly. It will be several months before the work can be published, but it is expected to be replete with valuable information on agriculture topics.

The department of public instruction has just issued a manual for special day exercises for the use of the public schools. In the introduction Superintendent Barrett says it is a legitimate part of school work to celebrate the birthdays of the nation's great men, and by so doing to inspire the children to high ideals of life and instill into their minds the spirit of true patriotism. Many exercises, songs and poems are given in the manual, all having a trend in the direction of patriotic teachings. "Every child in the public schools," says Mr. Barrett, "should know something of the life, history and noble deeds of the nation's great heroes, Washington and Lincoln."

The rivers of Iowa will be stocked with fish this year to a greater extent than ever before, announces George E. Delavan, fish and game warden. For the past two or three years Mr. Delavan has been seining the Mississippi river bayous and saving the fish that have been cast in these false streams in time of high water. Thousands upon thousands of game fish have been put in Iowa rivers by the game warden since the state furnished him with his fish car.

DEWET MEETS HEAVY LOSS.

British Drive Him Out of the Town of Phillipstown.

London, Feb. 15.—The Evening News prints a dispatch from Cape Town dated Thursday, February 14, which says:

"The government here is advised that General Christian De Wet and former President Steyn entered Cape Colony and occupied Phillipstown. The British attacked them yesterday and drove them out of the town with loss."

A Boer commando crossed the Orange river in the Phillipstown district. It is reported that DeWet was in command.

A Boer convoy of sixty-five wagons and forty-five prisoners has been captured north of Amsterdam.

The Strathcona horse, which sailed from Cape Town on the British steamer Lake Erie January 20, and was prevented from landing yesterday owing to the steamer having missed a tide and being obliged to anchor off Gravesend, landed on the Albert docks this morning in the midst of much enthusiasm and cheering and the shrieking of steamers' sirens. A considerable crowd awaited the landing of the men. The troops at once took trains for the city.

Spanish Bullfights Are Popular.

The brutal Spanish bull fights are as popular as ever in that land. The average number of horses killed in Spain every year exceeds 5,000, while from 1,000 to 1,200 bulls are sacrificed.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Senate—During the entire session of the senate today the agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration. After six hours of consideration the bill was little more than half completed. The debate upon the measure dealt almost entirely with administrative details of the department of agriculture, many commendations of the work of the department being made by senators on both sides of the chamber.

House—The house today passed the army appropriation bill and entered upon the consideration of the sundry civil bill, the last but one of the big money bills. The debate on the army bill was confined largely to passing bills to remove the charge of desertion against soldiers and was made notable by the statement of Mr. McClellan (New York) comparing the cost of the soldier in European armies with the cost in the United States. According to his figures, including the cost of pensions, etc., each United States soldier involved an expense of $2,888, while a German soldier costs $227 and a French soldier $232.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Senate—The senate held two executive sessions today, with the result that all the presidential nominations to the office of brigadier general were confirmed, although there was considerable opposition to some of the appointments. Considerable time was spent in the counting of the electoral vote for president and vice president. Late in the afternoon consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was resumed, but little progress was made. At a night session beginning at 8 o'clock, the District of Columbia code bill was read.

House.—The house devoted today, excepting an hour and a half consumed in counting the electoral vote and promulgating the result of the presidential election to the sundry civil appropriation bill. General debate upon this measure was completed but little actual progress was made with the bill. During the debate the opposition opened a general assault upon the extravagance of the present congress.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Senate—The senate devoted practically the entire day to the agricultural appropriation bill. The measure was not completed. Hale of Maine and Lodge of Massachusetts sounded notes of warning against the enormous appropriations being made by the present congress. Mr. Hale declared the people of the country would soon become alarmed and then those who were responsible for the immense expenditures would seek the rocks and mountains to hide from the wrath of the people.

House—The events in connection with the sale of the old New York custom house to the National City bank, which heretofore had been the subject of much comment, occupied the center of the stage during the debate on the sundry appropriation bill in the house today. The bill was not completed.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senate—That the opposition to the shipping bill in the senate will not permit a vote to be taken on the measure at the present session was made clear during the closing hours of today's session. For several days it has been evident that it would be difficult to gain unanimous consent to take a vote upon the measure, but not until late today was the frank assertion made that a vote could not be had. At the conclusion of several hours' debate, Teller of Colorado announced his purpose to prevent a vote at this session. In an impassioned speech he declared that he would not consent to any agreement to vote and that it must be evident to the advocates of the bill that no vote could be had. The statement by the Colorado senator elicited a sharp response from Aldrich of Rhode Island, who insisted that despite the declaration of Teller business of the senate would proceed in accordance with the wishes of the majority. Teller's statement also drew the fire of Chandler of New Hampshire, who asserted that the position of the opposition was preposterous. Hanna of Ohio replied to Teller in a forceful speech.

House—Under the leadership of Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, a long filibuster consumed the time of the house today. Cannon desired the house to proceed with the sundry civil appropriation bill, but was caught napping by the democrats, who desired to devote the day to the consideration of private claims. The result was that the whole day was wasted.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Senate.—At the conclusion of the morning hour in the senate today, when the unfinished business—the shipping bill—was laid before the body, Mr. Spooner (rep.) of Wisconsin moved to proceed to a consideration of the oleomargarine bill. By a practically unanimous vote—only two senators voting in the negative—the motion prevailed. Thus the subsidy bill was displaced as the unfinished business and the oleomargarine bill was placed in that order. After little over an hour's consideration of the measure it was laid aside in order that unobjected bills on the calender might be considered. Nearly 300 bills, including 197 private pension bills, were passed during the day.

House—The house today made little progress with the sundry civil appropriation bill. The major portion of the time was spent in debating a proposition offered by Hill (Conn.) to strike out the appropriation of $100,000 for the transportation of silver coin. It was defeated 61 to 66.

EXTRA SESSION ASSURED.

President Tells Senators That He Will Call One.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The president told the senators who called upon him Saturday that congress would be called in extra session as soon as the Cuban constitution was received.

The only apparent object of the president is to have the Cuban question considered, and it is his desire to have congress share the responsibility of deciding what steps shall be taken with reference to Cuba, regardless of the details of the constitution. He has not as yet indicated a time when he should expect congress to meet, and this he is not expected to do until the Cuban constitutional convention shall complete its work.

The prediction is general that in case an extra session is called it will extend well into the summer. It is not believed that its deliberations could be confined to Cuba, but that the Philippine question, the anti-trust bill and the subsidy bill (if that measure should fail to be disposed of at the present session) would all come in for a share of attention. Many of the leading republican senators are using their utmost endeavors to avert the call.

Capital Punishment Bill Defeated.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 13.—The capital punishment bill which was introduced by Senator Smith of Edwards county was defeated in the senate by a vote of 18 to 11. A sentiment in favor of restoring capital punishment in Kansas was aroused by the recent burning of the negro, Alexander, at Leavenworth, and that the bill should be defeated by such a decisive vote occasioned some surprise.

"Edith, this last china dish you painted is awful—awful." "Now, never mind about that, Edgar; I'll give a whist party one of these days."

A LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER IV—(Continued.)

And then Harold amazed them by the question:

"Is there a school at Easthill-On-Sea? I never heard of one."

Easthill-on-Sea was about two miles from Easthill proper, in the opposite direction from Dynevor Manor and the Uplands. Within the last few years some speculators had got possession of land there, and were trying hard to convert what had been a fishing hamlet into a watering-place. They had not succeeded well, and the present result was a kind of straggling, unfinished settlement, which was neither town nor village. The old inhabitants of Easthill rather made game of the new watering-place, which will account for Kitty's laugh.

"I really don't know, Harold; I hardly ever go to Easthill-on-Sea. There may be half a dozen schools; but I hope not, for their proprietors' sakes, for I can't imagine that any one would send children there."

"I think you're hard on the place," said Harold. "There's a very good beach and a splendid air. I suppose people are to be found who can do without niggers at the seaside."

"Ah, but they'd want decent roads and tolerable comfort," objected Kitty; "and you know when it rains Easthill-on-Sea is almost a swamp, because no one has made up the roads. Then they only bake every other day, and the butcher's shop opens twice a week. It would take a good deal to make up for such drawbacks."

"It is all so unfinished," said Mrs. Dynevor. "The roads are staked out, and imposing names painted on signboards, like 'Elm avenue,' and 'Sea View gardens,' but neither avenue nor gardens boast a single house, and the roads are not even divided from each other, except by a few posts."

"Why are you so suddenly interested in Easthill-on-Sea?" demanded Kitty. "You can't possibly have been asked to recommend any one a school there?"

"Oh, dear, no; but I came home from Marton by train, and a girl got out at our station who wanted to go to Easthill-on-Sea. She asked the porter the way to Mrs. Tanner's school. He questioned the ticket collector, and even the station master himself, but neither of them had ever heard of it. I couldn't help feeling sorry for her, she looked so tired and sad. It must be hard lines to come off a long journey and not find any one who can direct you to your destination."

"Poor thing!" said Kitty, and then the subject dropped. None of the three guessed the influence the lonely little traveler was to have on their lives. It never dawned on Kity that the unknown girl who was bound for a school no one had ever heard of was to be her dearest friend.

CHAPTER V.

Nothing will describe the desolation which filled Beryl Lindon's heart when she stepped on to the platform at Easthill. She had left London filled with the one desire of escaping from her father and stepmother. Ever since she heard of the former's marriage her one end and object had been to get safely away from Elchester square. It was only when she had actually started, when Mrs. Markham's kindly face was lost to sight, that she realized she was going among strangers, that a new, untried life lay before her, with not one friendly voice to brighten it.

It was a long, tedious journey, and involved two changes. Easthill was on a branch line, at which only the slowest of trains condescended to stop.

She was very plainly dressed in black; but all her things had come from a West End shop, and there was an air of distinction about her not often seen in a lonely little third-class traveler.

She was eighteen, though she looked older—a very small, fairy-like creature, with soft, wavy brown hair, and big, lustrous blue-grey eyes. Her complexion was very fair, and had the daintiest carmine tint.

She knew absolutely nothing of the country. Brighton, Brussels, where she had been at school, and the tall house in Elchester square had made up her world. To find herself at a little rustic station, with only a few cottages in sight, was almost alarming. And no one at the station had heard of Mrs. Tanner's school. That of itself was enough to discourage her.

"Don't you be afraid, missie," the station master said kindly. "If you wrote to the lady, and she had your letter, she must live here somewhere, and the postoffice are the best people to help you find her. You go straight along this lane till you come to a sign post, take the road marked 'Easthill-on-Sea,' and presently you'll see four or five shops. The postoffice is the first of the lot, and they'll put you right."

Beryl left her luggage to the porter's mercy and started. The lane seemed interminable. Perhaps in summer time it was pretty; but it was a late season, and the trees were hardly in bud. Their bare branches almost met in the middle of the lane, looking very like black, threatening hands uplifted against her—or Beryl thought so. She reached the sign post without meeting a single creature; but another half-mile brought her to the shops, and her heart gave a thrill of relief as she recognized the postoffice.

It was quite unlike any postoffice Beryl had ever seen, being a cottage with all business transacted in the front parlor; while the room on the opposite side appeared to be a baker's, one stale loaf and half a dozen stodgy-looking buns being arranged in the window.

"Can you tell me the way to Mrs. Tanner's school—Woodlands, the house is called?" asked Beryl anxiously.

The young woman behind the counter was better informed than the railway people, for she answered without any hesitation:

"It's the last house on the front. The name's not up; but you can't be mistaken because there are no more houses."

This was conclusive; but Beryl felt positively sinking from weakness and fatigue. She looked at the loaf of bread and buns, and finally asked the damsel in charge if she could have some refreshment—"a cup of tea or something."

"The fire's out, I expect. You can have a glass of milk and a plate of bread and butter, if you like."

The fare was plain, but it revived the traveler. The attendant gave her plenty of local information while she ate and drank. Mrs. Tanner had not been at Easthill-on-Sea long. There wasn't much opening for a school; there were very few residents, and naturally vistors didn't want to send their children to school when they came down in the summer.

"You do look tired!" she concluded. "But it's not much further now. The end of this street leads to the front, and Mrs. Tanner's is the last house on the right."

Beryl found the house easily; but her heart sank as she looked at it. It was so new that at the back the piece of waste ground called a garden was not yet fenced off, and the front railings had not yet been fenced off. Woodlands looked as though it had been built elsewhere, brought to Easthill on a trolley, and just popped down on the first vacant space. The wind howled round it, the waves which dashed over the shingle seemed to laugh derisively at it, and even to poor Beryl the huge board over the front windows—"Ladies' School"—seemed grotesque in such a place.

She rang the bell. It was so stiff her fingers could hardly move it, and when at last it rang it made such a noise she decided Mrs. Tanner would think her new teacher very impatient. There was not the least sound of movement in the house, and Beryl was actually contemplating a second ring when the door was flung suddenly open, and a very small servant in a very big white apron stood regarding her curiously.

"Is Mrs. Tanner at home? I think she is expecting me. I am the new governess."

"You're to come this way," said the child—she really was very little more. And Beryl followed her across a good-sized hall to a small sitting-room at the back, the door of which her guide opened encouragingly.

"You go straight in," she commanded.

It was a very small room, and rather sparsely furnished; but what Beryl saw first was a tall, slight woman in widow's weeds, who came forward to meet her with such a frightened face that the girl felt compelled to take the initative.

"I am afraid I am later than you expected, Mrs. Tanner; but it is a long walk from the station, and I came slowly so as not to lose my way."

"You look cold and tired," said Mrs. Tanner gently. "Sit down and warm yourself. Rhoda will bring tea soon; I waited for you."

"It was very kind of you," Beryl began, and then she broke down helplessly and cried as though her heart would break. Of course it was behaving disgracefully, it was most unschoolastic and childish; but those few kindly words had been the last touch.

Mrs. Tanner did not seem in the least angry. She took Beryl's hand and held it for a minute or two, then she said gently:

"I don't wonder at your being upset, my dear. When I first came here in January I loathed the place quite as much as you can do. I came from a pretty country rectory, with a dear old garden and trees that had stood the test of centuries, and this bleak, desolate place seemed terrible to me; but, Miss Lindon, work is the best cure for sadness, and even Easthill-on-Sea seems brighter when one is busy."

"Please forgive me!" said Beryl, pleadingly. "Indeed, I am not discontented; it was only that you were so kind to me."

"Did you expect me to be an ogress?" asked Mrs. Tanner. "When you have had some tea and feel rested I will tell you all about things. I am afraid you will find plenty of rough places at Woodlands, but they won't be of my making."

Tea was delightful. With curtains drawn and the lamps lighted, the room seemed quite a snuggery; and Mrs. Tanner saw that Beryl had plenty of the fare provided.

"I would rather tell you everything before you see my sister," she said, when Rhoda had taken away the things. My husband died last November. He was the best and kindest man who ever lived, but he wasn't businesslike, and when all the expenses were paid I had only £20 and the furniture to keep myself and the children. Of course I knew I should have to work; but I had never had to earn my living, and I did not know how to set about it. My sister is the only near relation I have. She is very rich, and she likes to manage. She decided I had better keep a school, then the twins could be educated for nothing. Her husband has a good deal of property round here, and they offered me this house rent free for three years.

"Of course"—she flushed painfully—"the Wilmots are in a very good position here, and it would not do for it to be known any one connected with them had to keep a school, so I promised Mary I would never mention the relationship. She has really been very good. She speaks of me to people as 'a young widow in whom she is interested,' and altogether I have twelve pupils. If the new ones promised this term come tomorrow I shall have fifteen. They pay £2 a term, so that I have £90 a year; but I found out if I had any one who could teach French and really good music I should get more scholars and keep them till they were older. That is why I thought of getting help. Besides, with only Rhoda, there is a great deal to do domestically, and the twins' clothes have to be made and mended."

"How old are the twins?" asked Beryl.

"Four. Rather young to be in school all day; but I can't send them out alone, and I don't like them to be in the kitchen with Rhoda. Miss Lindon, I know I am offering you a very small salary; but I think if you and I 'fit in' you may really be happier here than in a grander situation."

"I am sure of it," said Beryl. "Mrs. Tanner, I don't think any one in the whole world can be lonelier than I am, and if only you will keep me, I shall be glad to stay."

Mrs. Tanner gave a little sigh.

"Mary—Mrs. Wilmot—will be round in the morning. You must not mind if she seems a little overbearing. Oh, and there is the thing she wanted me to say—she does not like your name at all."

Beryl professed her regret, but hardly saw the objection was her fault.

"It's in this way," explained Mrs. Tanner. "The show place near here, Dynevor Manor, belongs to a Mr. Lindon, though General Craven lives there. Mary thinks it a slight to Mr. Lindon that my teacher should have the same name. Her husband is his agent, and goes to see him sometimes at his grand house in Elchester square, Belgravia. Of course I told Mary Mr. Lindon would never hear of my school, much less my teacher's name; but she was very disagreeable, and said it could not matter to you, and that by changing one letter the name sounded quite differently. Do you mind being Miss Lendon? You see, it won't make any difference to your letters, because most people loop their l's now, so that they look like e's."

Beryl felt inclined to bless Mrs. Wilmot. If, as she now felt positive, her father were the owner of Dynevor Manor, why, then, her one desire was that he might never hear his fugitive daughter was living beneath its shadow. She had never heard him speak of Sussex, or of possessing property in the country. Surely it was strange that, with all England before her, she should have drifted to the one place where he had interest.

School began the next day. The fifteen girls were nice things. Mrs. Wilmot's interest had procured some. The clerk of the works employed by her husband to watch his interests in the building operations, sent three small daughters; the tax collector contributed two; but there was a sprinkling of a higher grade—the curate's only child, and the doctor's two little girls. Mrs. Wilmot struck Beryl as far less refined than her sister. She and her husband were rich, and gloried in their money, though as yet it had not been able to force an entrance into the society of Easthill proper, which was of the select and exclusive kind known as "county."

CHURCH MONEY.

Some Odd Ways in Which Women Earned It.

The women folk of the Methodist church at Oxford recently set out to earn money for certain church purposes, and a meeting was held at which each woman or girl recited the method by which she had earned her contribution, says the Boston Journal. Some of the recitals were funny enough to convulse the audience, and a few are epitomized as follows: Miss Mary Dobbs started out to do some janitor work, but got tired and subcontracted the job, though saving for herself a margin of profit. Mrs. M. Collins said that one day her husband was tearing around the house hunting for his overshoes and said he would give a half a dollar to know what had become of them. She told him she had sold them to the ragman, and demanded the half. Mrs. Bay kalsomined her own house and saved the dollar which an old colored man demanded for the job. Miss Zulu Cole engaged in a great variety of employments. She got 5 cents for washing Mrs. Middleton's dishes, 10 cents for doing some sewing for her sister, 5 cents from her uncle for keeping her mouth shut five minutes, 5 cents for killing three cats, 15 cents for sweeping the sidewalk in front of two stores, and 5 cents for popping some corn. Miss Lyda Mills made 50 cents by mending the harness and making a new halter for the cow. Miss Lettie Morrill got 50 cents for doctoring a sick calf.

MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE.

The Only Man in the British Cabinet Who Could Speak French.

When the Marquis of Lansdowne was governor-general of Canada he had to make a speech to the French-Canadians, says M. A. P. With all its loyalty to the English connection, this little bit of transported France adheres very rigidly to many things French, and especially to the purity of the French tongue—at least as it was spoken in the eighteenth century. Few viceroys have ever ventured accordingly to leave the safe security of the English tongue, and it was with some trepidation that the French-Canadians heard that Lord Lansdowne was going to deliver a speech to them in their own language. But he had scarcely uttered the word "messieurs" when the whole audience burst into cheers; they recognized at once the accent of the true French tongue, the accent only possible to a man of French blood, and one who had spoken French as his mother tongue. It is perhaps this accomplishment which had something to do with Lord Lansdowne's latest appointment. When some one remonstrated with Lord Salisbury for retaining the two offices of prime minister and foreign secretary, his reply was that he could not help himself, there was but one member of his cabinet who could speak French, and that was Lord Lansdowne. And now Lord Lansdowne will receive the foreign ambassadors every Wednesday afternoon, and whatever else may be found fault with, his French will be faultless. Lord Lansdowne's mother was a daughter of Gen. Flahalt, one of Bonaparte's officers.—Toronto Star.

DOUBLE BRAIN.

A New Mathematical Marvel Appears in London.

Has Jacques Inaudi two brains? Charcot thinks he has, and London folks who witness the marvelous mathematical feats of Inaudi would not be surprised to learn that he has half a dozen brains. A huge blackbord is placed upon the stage. Inaudi stands with his back to it a fair distance away, and does not once see the figures. His assistant, De Thorcey, then writes rown a subtraction sum of twelve or fifteen figures as given by the audience, calling them out to Inaudi, who repeats them and is ready with the answer before his assistant can work it out on the board. Another surprising feat is the solving mentally of four problems at once (addition, multiplication, division and finding the square root—each sum being of several figures) while he is answering a fire of questions from the audience as to the day of the week of any day of any year. After this, it is not surprising to find that he can mention by heart the whole of the figures used on the blackboard. He is able to give his performance in English, French, German, Dutch, Spanish, Italian and Russian.

Where Little Things Come From.

More small articles of household and office use are manufactured in Newark, N. J., than in any other American city. The output of cheap patented goods is almost incalculable, and in addition there are manufactories of all sizes turning out leathers, jewelry, brass goods, india rubber, celluloid, cartridges, enameled cloth, machinery varnish, chemicals, hats, sewing silk, thread, trunks, harness, cotton goods, clothing, boots and shoes, sewing machines, agricultural implements, cutlery, ales, beers and a thousand and one other things. The capital invested in manufactures exceeds $100,000,000.

"DEALING WITH CRIMES IN CANADA."

(From the Chicago Times-Herald, on Jan. 12th, 1901.)

The citizens of the Dominion of Canada have just cause to be proud of their record as law-abiding people. The annual report of the criminal statistics of the Dominion, which has a population of over 6,000,000, shows that there were only twenty-five indictments for murder in 1899, of which only two were left without final action. Eleven of those indicted were hanged, nine acquitted and three confined as insane.

Canada is a country of vast proportions. Its people are scattered over a wide stretch of territory, making police surveillance particularly difficult and in many districts impossible. Yet a city like New York or Chicago alone furnishes a far greater criminal list every year than the whole vast stretch of territory from Quebec to Vancouver.

The Canadians ascribe their immunity from crime to the promptness with which punishment is meted out to offenders. When a man is caught red-handed in the act of robbing another he is not released on straw bail by some justice of the peace from the slums, to go out and repeat the offense. Sharp and sure justice is meted out to criminals of all kinds, the result being that when the guardians of the public peace succeed in bringing a thug to the bar they are seldom called upon to hunt him a second time.

Furthermore, there are few court delays in Canada when a criminal is brought to book. They have no Dreyer cases over there. There are no methods whereby Canadian criminals can have the proceedings stayed from month to month and from year to year or after being convicted, appeal from one court to another until witnesses die of old age or opportunities for corruption can be found.

Nor does this swift method of treating with wrong-doers in Canada leave the innocent unable to properly defend themselves. They have all the opportunities and privileges that our own laws extend to them. The extent to shield the guilty is lacking—that is all.

The above, taken from the editorial column of the Times-Herald, gives some idea of the immunity from crime that exists in Canada, and this is one of the many inducements held out for Americans to settle in the district known as Western Canada. The season of 1901 will see a few new sections of the country opened up for settlement. They are attractive in every respect. It is understood that one of the best Indian Reserves in the famous Valley of the Saskatchewan will be opened up this year, and an invitation is extended to those desiring homes to make inquiries. The price of the land is said to be nominal. Besides these lands, the several railway companies have lands to sell; also the government. Confederate Reunion.

The reunion of Confederate veterans which meets in Memphis in the closing days of May promises to be the most successful gathering in the history of the Confederate organization. The railroads entering Memphis are alive to the situation and have promised to do everything possible looking toward the comfort and pleasure of the old soldiers and their friends. Every courtesy will be extended the local committees in meeting incoming trains so that the thousands of strangers may be taken in hand and assigned to their quarters. A special rate of one cent a mile has been recommended by the general passenger agents of all lines interested and it is certain that the joint passenger association will authorize the rate.

Fifty thousand dollars will be raised by the citizens of Memphis so that all visitors may be assured of a good time. All of the subscriptions so far have been voluntary and one of the most notable was that of Robert R. Church, a representative negro citizen, who contributed a check for $1,000. Church was born a slave in Mississippi, and after the war removed to Memphis, where he has since lived. He is a good business man and citizen and numbers among his friends many of the representative business men and financiers of the city.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

ROCK ISLAND MAKES ITS REPORT.

First of Big Roads to Furnish Statement to the Executive Council.

Des Moines, Feb. 18.—The Rock Island Railroad company has made its report to the executive council and the report is now on file in the office of the secretary, A. H. Davison. The Rock Island is the first of the larger roads to make its report, there being seven reports in at this time, though all should have been furnished by February 15. The delay is supposed to be caused in part by the fact the executive council has sent out blanks this year that provide, not for estimates, but for accurate returns, verified by oath. The Rock Island's report shows an increase in its mileage and earnings over those reported a year ago. The company has 1,172.25 miles of track owned, leased or operated in the state. Its gross earnings in the state for the year 1900 were $7,284,311.24, and the gross earnings outside the state were $24,279,386.78. The net earnings in the state were $2,760,650.88, and on the entire system $8,858,865.09.

Jail Breakers at Mason City.

Mason City, Feb. 18.—Frank Bly and James Crolan, two men held in jail for Kossuth county, made their escape. They were kept in the upper row of steel cells of the jail. The door to the alley in front of the cells is held shut by a bar of steel. This is kept in place by a pin, the pin being inside a steel box. By means of a wire put through a crack in the box the pin was forced out. Then the bar could be removed. When the deputy sheriff put some coal in the stove the men stood ready to jump in behind him, close and lock the door and escape.

These men were caught stealing butter from a creamery at Whittemore. The marshal captured one, but the other knocked him down. They then carried the officer two blocks, bound him in the calaboose and gagged him, making their escape. They were caught near Emmetsburg, and January 4 were brought here for keeping.

Defect in Interest Law.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—A defect has been discovered in the law enacted by the last general assembly whereby the rate of interest on permanent school fund loans was reduced from 6 per cent to 5 per cent, and the rate charged by the state to the counties was lowered from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent. The interest rate on money that part of permanent school lands escheating to the state was not lowered. By an oversight, doubtless, the law makes no change in the provision regarding this. The question now is, whether the auditor of state is required to exact 4½ per cent on that part of the perment school lands or whether he must charge 5 per cent to the counties, as he would have done prior to the new law. Attorney General Mullan has been asked for an opinion.

Alleged Express Robbers.

Sioux City, Feb. 14.—Jacky Jackson and John Stovall, at Manilla, were held to the grand jury on the were of robbing the United States Express Company's iron safe Saturday night. The officials are confident they have the right men and declare they have stronger evidence than that which they presented at the preliminary hearing. It was shown at the hearing that the men had been tracked to Jackson's home from the place where the safe had been broken open. At Jackson's home a part of the contents of the safe was found. Witnesses also testified that the sledge and crow bar said to have been used to break open the safe belonged to Jackson. The defense which was put up was not at all convincing.

Well-to-do Farmer Suicides.

Winterset, Feb. 16.—Wesley Ford, a well-to-do farmer living eight miles west of Winterset, was found hanging dead in his barn. The family missed him at breakfast time and sent to the barn for him, when he was found hanging to one of the beams. He had fastened the rope to a beam and then stepped off a small box, so that his feet almost touched the ground when found. He was an industrious farmer, in good circumstances, and a son of I. S. Ford, one of the oldest settlers in Madison county. A few weeks ago he had a severe attack of the grip, and since recovering his mind has been affected. He was jovial and good natured and did not have an enemy in the world.

Frankel Loss Adjusted.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—With the exception of $2,900 the Frankels will receive every dollar of the insurance they had placed. The adjusters who have been here representing the Western Adjusting Bureau of Chicago, have come to an understanding with the Frankels whereby the latter will receive a total of $275,200 out of the $278,100 they had written on stock and building. Of the above amount the adjusters allowed $203,100 on stock, agreeing that the loss was total. On the building there was $75,000 written. The adjusters deducted $2,900 from the building claim, there being that amount of salvage in building material.

Dissipating His Fortune.

Primghar, Feb. 18.—H. C. Heminway, for years legal adviser to the family of E. Y. Royce, has been appointed guardian for Royce, on application to the courts by his son, F. B. Royce. The latter claimed that his father was a confirmed drunkard, and was dissipating his fortune. The elder Royce will contest the case and secure a jury trial, and if then beaten, will appeal to the supreme court. Much of his fortune is being spent in litigation over claims, which he won't pay until execution is issued.

Will Not Enforce the Law.

Dubuque, Feb. 16.—A committee representing the W. C. T. U. and temperance people generally of Dubuque called on Mayor Berg for his final answer as to whether he would enforce Sunday closing of saloons, in compliance with the mulct law. The mayor, who has had the matter under consideration some time, told the committee that he would not, it being as much the duty of any other citizen as his to enforce the law.

Fifteenth Plea for Divorce.

Indianapolis, Feb. 16.—Herman Cordes, a wealthy German farmer and brickmaker, and his wife are in the courts again for the fifteenth time seeking a divorce. The couple were married in 1870 and in the past ten years there have been fourteen applications for the court to untie the knot, twelve coming from the wife and two from the husband.

Held on Murder Charge.

Ottumwa, Feb. 18.—An indictment, charging murder in the first degree, has been returned in the Clark county, Indiana, circuit court against Frank Montague, for the alleged killing of William Gilmore, both of this city, at Otisco last December.

No Back Taxes From Cigarette Men.

Des Moines, Feb. 13.—The board of supervisors decided not to attempt to collect back taxes from cigarette dealers prior to November 19, 1900, when the United States supreme court sustained the Tennessee law similar to the Iowa law. Four dealers in this city have paid the state tax of $300 a year.

Literally Torn to Pieces.

Fairfield, Feb. 13.—Israel Trout, postmaster at Libertyville, was killed by being drawn into a feed mill. It was a gasoline power mill and his clothes were caught by a fly wheel. He was literally torn to pieces.

PAT CROWE CONFESSES

Story Told by an Editor at Waterloo, Iowa.

Waterloo, Feb. 18.—Pat Crowe confessed the Cudahy kidnaping to Isaiah Van Metre, the editor of the Waterloo Weekly Tribune, with whom the fugitive found food and shelter Tuesday night of last week, and Mr. Van Metre publishes the details of the visit in the current number of his paper.

Back of this perhaps, the most dramatic episode of the long series that has grown out of the celebrated child-stealing case, is a story of how Crowe saved the life of the editor a dozen years ago, so establishing the credit of gratitude upon which he felt safe in drawing, now that he is an outcast with a price of $50,000 set upon his head.

"First—A frank confession of the kidnaping.

"Second—An explanation that he had no intention of narming young Cudahy, and would not have done so even had the money not have been delivered.

"Third—A statement that he had $2,000 'planted' which he wished to get in order to be able to leave the country."

According to the Iowa editor's story, the man said to be Pat Crowe came to his home after 11 o'clock at night, was admitted, was given food and was permitted to sleep there until just before daylight. The man, according to the Iowa editor, was in a state of abject fear, and seemed all but hopeless of avoiding the officers who are searching for him. In his alleged confession the fugitive is reported to have stated that he could no longer trust those who had been his friends owing to the big reward offered for his apprehension, and that he knew not which way to turn. The fugitive told the editor, the story says, that the few hours' sleep in the latter's house was the first unbroken rest he had had for weeks. The fugitive is reported as having explained that his only object in remaining in this vicinity was to secure the buried treasure, and that so great was his fear of detection that he could not come to the point of going after it.

FAILURE OF THE RILEYS.

Big Stockmen of Southern Iowa Owe Five Thousand Dollars.

Davis City, Feb. 18.—J. F. and L. P. Riley, stockmen residing seven miles south of here, have failed for $35,000, distributed among twenty creditors, nine being bankers. Assets valued at $28,000 were turned over to Bankers E. D. Dorn of Leon, W. A. Hopkins of Lamoni and E. H. Frisby of Bethany, Mo., trustees for creditors, who met at Bethany. The Riley brothers are old residents of this vicinity and the best known stockmen within a radius of one hundred miles. They were generally credited with being enormously wealthy and had almost unlimited credit.

Prominent Farmer Injured.

Mt. Pleasant, Feb. 16.—Frank B. Montgomery, a prominent farmer and stockman of Trenton township, was struck by a fast freight train at a crossing west of the city, near La Hoyt, and received serious injuries. One arm was badly broken and a leg sprained, and he was otherwise badly injured. His wife, who was with him, was also bruised some and her limb sprained severely. The train was going at an awful pace down a grade, and the snow was probably all that saved the Montgomerys from instant death.

Fort Madison Swindle.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—A $10,000 cattle swindle was brought to light here through the filing of a replevin suit by the Lee County Savings bank of Fort Madison, Iowa, against E. W. Brown of New Berlin. The writ is to recover steers mortgaged to the Iowa bank for $10,000 and afterwards shipped to LaCrosse, Ill. A few days ago the animals were shipped to the Chicago market and sold in a bunch to the Alexander Ward Commission Co., and have since been disposed of in small bunches at points throughout the country.

Rural Mail Delivery Inaugurated.

Creston, Feb. 16.—An unusual scene was witnessed at the postoffice yesterday morning. Five wagons were lined up at the side door, and five rural route delivery clerks were waiting for their mail. It was the initial trip. About 125 miles will be covered and 3,000 people served. Six hundred families will derive direct benefit from the service. It will cost the government $2,500 per year, and the probabilities are will cost more in a few years, as the carriers are expecting an increase.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 15.—The state senate passed by a unanimous vote the kidnaping bill. It provides for three degrees of punishment for the crime of kidnaping—death penalty or life imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, when ransom is demanded and the victim is threatened with death or injury; a maximum sentence of twenty years when ransom alone is demanded, and from three to seven years for plain kidnaping. House members are in favor of the bill and it will be pushed to an early passage

"Frances," said the little girl's mamma, who was entertaining callers in the parlor, "you came down stairs so noisily that you could be heard all over the house. You know how to do it better than that. Now go back and come down the stairs like a lady."

Frances retired, says Tit-Bits, and after the lapse of a few minutes, reentered the parlor.

"Did you hear me come down stairs this time, mamma?"

"No, dear. I am glad you came down quietly. Now, don't let me ever have to tell you again not to come down noisily, for I see that you can come down quietly if you will. Now, tell these ladies how you managed to come down like a lady the second time, while the first time you made so much noise."

"The last time I slid down the banisters," explained Frances.

HALF DEAD SOLDIER.

Returns All Broken Up to His Home in South Dakota.

Bristol, So. Dak., Feb. 18th, 1901.—(Special.)—Peter Behres says: "When I returned from the war I found that I was in a very critical condition. My system was all run down, and I gradually became worse, until I was half dead with Kidney and Bladder Trouble. My family wanted me to consult a physician, but as I had learned through several of my comrades of the wonderful cures of Dodd's Kidney Pills I determined to give them a trial first."

Mr. Behres, or Capt. Behres as he should be called, because he was captain of the 1st Minnesota Cavalry, and in 1862 was for fourteen months in continual service in warfare with the Indians, is now an honored member of the G. A. R., who has reached the ripe old age of three score years and ten. He continues: "I am now an old soldier, seventy years of age, and enjoying almost perfect health, and all thanks for this is due to Dodd's Kidney Pills. I found after having used the first few boxes that my faith was not misplaced in them, and in a very short while my kidneys were doing the work required of them and the bladder trouble was soon eliminated. It was almost a year before I was myself, but during that time I used Dodd's Kidney Pills faithfully and with the very best results that anyone could wish for. I would not have been without them for a king's ransom. I am now well as any man of my age.

Chronic Sore Leg.

Mr. J. Richardson had a running sore on his leg for twenty years. Tried doctors and medicines without end or any permanent good. Mr. L. B. Nunnally, druggist, Hartford, Iowa, recommended Morley's Sarsaparilla and Iron to cure the cause of the sore and make it heal from the inside. A few bottles cured his leg, and put him in better health than he has been in for twenty years. Ask your druggist.

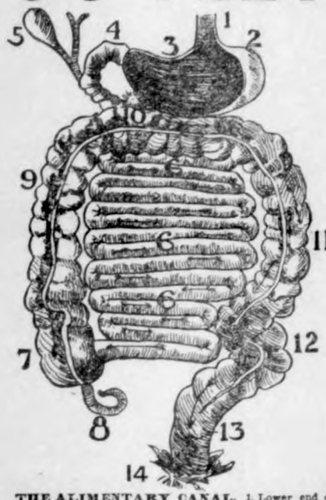
30 FEET OF BOWELS



THE ALIMENTARY CANAL. 1. Lower end of esophagus (meat-pipe) which conveys the food from the throat to the stomach; 2. Cardiac end of stomach; 3. Pyloric end of stomach; 4. Duodenum; 5. Gall bladder; 6, 6, 6. Small intestines; 7. Cæcum; 8. Vermiform appendix; 9. Ascending colon; 10. Transverse colon; 11. Descending colon; 12. Sigmoid flexure; 13. Rectum; 14. Anus. The duodenum is continuous with the small intestines. The small intestine empties into the large intestine or colon at the cæcum. The arrows indicate the direction which the contents of the bowels must take in passing through the alimentary canal.

are packed away in your insides and must be kept clean, in order and doing business.

It's a long way, with many turns and pitfalls to catch the refuse and clog the channel if not most carefully cleaned out every day.

When this long canal is blockaded, look out for trouble—furred tongue, bad breath, belching of gases, yellow spots, pimples and boils, headaches, spitting up of food after eating—an all-around disgusting nuisance.

Violent calomel purges or griping salts are dangerous to use for cleaning out the bowels. They force out the obstruction by causing violent spasms of the bowels, but they leave the intestines weak and even less able to keep up regular movements than before, and make a larger dose necessary next time.

Then you have the pill habit, which kills more people than the morphine and whiskey habits combined.

The only safe, gentle but certain bowel cleansers are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, because they don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action. Buy and try them! (Look out for imitations and substitutes or you can't get results. Cascarets are never sold in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the long-tailed "C" on the box.) You will find that in an entirely natural way your bowels will be promptly and permanently

CURE all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow complexion and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are getting sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It is a starter for the chronic ailments and long years of suffering that come afterwards. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS to-day, for you will never get well and be well all the time until you put your bowels right. Take our advice; start with CASCARETS to-day, under an absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded.

This is absolute proof of great merit, and our best testimonial. We have faith and will sell CASCARETS absolutely guaranteed to cure or money refunded. Go buy today, two 50c boxes, give them a fair, honest trial, as per simple directions, and if you are not satisfied, after using one 50c box, return the unused 50c box and the empty box to us by mail, or the druggist from whom you purchased it, and get your money back for both boxes. Take our advice—no matter what ails you—start today. Health will quickly follow and you will bless the day you first started the use of CASCARETS. Book free by mail. THANKFUL TO MRS. PINKHAM

Letters Proving Positively that there is No Medicine for Woman's Ills Equal to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

(ALL LETTERS ARE PUBLISHED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION.)

"I cannot say enough in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has done me more good than all the doctors. I have been troubled with female weakness in its worst form for about ten years. I had leucorrhoea and was so weak that I could not do my housework.

I also had falling of the womb and inflammation of the womb and ovaries, and at menstrual periods I suffered terribly. At times my back would ache very hard. I could not lift anything or do any heavy work; was not able to stand on my feet long at a time. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for doctors but they did me no good. My husband's sister wrote what the Vegetable Compound had done for her, and wanted me to try it, but I did not then think it would do me any good. After a time, I concluded to try it, and I can truly say it does all that is claimed for it. Ten bottles of the Vegetable Compound and seven packages of Sanative Wash have made a new woman of me, I have had no womb trouble since taking the fifth bottle. I weigh more than I have in years; can do all my own housework, sleep well, have a good appetite, and now feel that life is worth living. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I feel that it has saved my life and would not be without it for anything. I am always glad to recommend it to all my sex, for I know if they will follow Mrs. Pinkham's directions, they will be cured."

CHANGE OF LIFE.

"I was taken sick five years ago with 'The Grippe,' and had a relapse and was given up by the doctor and my friends. Change of Life began to work on me. I bowed very badly until a year ago, when my stomach and lungs got so bad, I suffered terribly; the blood went up in my lungs and stomach, and I vomited it up. I could not eat scarcely anything. I cannot tell what I suffered with my head. My husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken half of it I began to improve, and to-day I am another woman. Mrs. Pinkham's medicine has saved my life. I cannot praise it enough."
M. A. DENSON, Millport, N.Y.

PROFUSE PERIODS.

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound about 3 months ago, and cannot express the wonderful good it has done me. Menstruations were so profuse as to leave me very weak for some time after. Was also troubled with leucorrhoea, tired feeling bearing down sensation, pain across the back and thighs. I felt as though there was a heavy weight in my stomach all the time. I have taken two bottles of the medicine, and now have better health than I have had for four years."
MRS. LIZZIE DICKSON HODGE, Avalon, Ohio.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

WHEN WRINKLES COME.

Departing HEALTH and BEAUTY Called Back by

Dr. Greene's Nervura

Y OUR mirror will tell you the bitter truth.

Healthy women look younger than their age, but you look far too old for your years.

Time deals lightly with the woman in good health, but the wasting hand of sickness and disease spares neither your youthful looks, beauty, nor complexion.

The Creator has endowed every woman with beauty, and every woman in good health is beautiful and comely to look upon. A clear, fresh, wholesome look is the result of the possession of good health, and no woman can be beautiful and attractive without good health. The dull, dead, gnawing pain, the sense of nervousness, weakness, oppression, and discouragement, the tired, listless, languid feeling, the shooting pains, the aching head, the pain in the back, all these are symptoms of a disordered system, and all these are beauty-killers, producers of dull leaden complexions, unnatural flushings, dark circles under the eyes, humors, eruptions, blackheads, lustreless eyes, and other disfigurements which divest women of their natural gift of beauty.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA Makes Health and Happiness

Why be homely when you can be beautiful and attractive?

Get good health and with it those looks and attributes which attract, please, and fascinate. It is within your power to do so, for it is within every woman's power to be well and strong, and hence look her best, if she will use Dr. Greene's Nervura to give her strong, vigorous nerves, pure, rich blood, a clear complexion, and thus restore the energies and vitality of sound and perfect health.

Good health means youthful good looks to every woman, and it behooves women to restore and maintain their health by taking that greatest and best of all health restoratives, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will build up the health, cleanse and purify the complexion, restore brilliancy to the eye, make rich, red blood and strong, steady, and vigorous nerves. Dr. Greene's Nervura will make you look and feel young and restore your energies, vivacity, and enjoyment of life.

MRS. KATE AUSTIN, 40 Jenny Lind Ave., Somerville, Mass., says:

"I had a pain in my side for seventeen years. I also suffered with terrible backache and headache; such an awful headache, and I had not a bit of appetite. I cried with pain from womb trouble, and was as pale as a ghost. I was terribly nervous. I could not sleep for a long time, and had rheumatism in my shoulder and arm. I suffered everything; nobody but God knows how I suffered. I weighed 128 pounds. A friend recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I commenced to take it. I was so weak and run down that the first bottle did not do me much good, but I kept on, and the second bottle did me good and I began to gain. After taking the Nervura I never had a pain in my side, nor any headache, and I sleep well and have a good appetite. I don't believe there is any medicine in the world so good as Dr. Greene's Nervura. It did me good right off and I have had no return of my womb trouble. I had leucorrhoea, but since taking Nervura that has disappeared. I feel strong, and last summer was able to do the work for fourteen in a family, and I weigh 163 pounds. I was so weak before, nobody knows how I worked, but I had to work for my children. I sent two bottles of Nervura to my brother in Nova Scotia, and it did him lots of good. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to every one."

Ill Health Destroys Beauty and Happiness. DR. GREENE'S NERVURA Makes You Well and Restores Your Good Looks.

Women have absolute confidence in Dr. Greene's Nervura, more so than in any other remedy, because it is purely vegetable and a famous regular physician prepares it, which is a guarantee that it is perfectly adapted to cure. As an additional assurance of cure, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City, gives you the privilege of consulting him without charge or cost, either by calling or writing about your case.

A Most Liberal offer.

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes with this paper The Iowa Home tead, It's special Farmer's Institute Editions, and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.50. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throghout the West and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Iowa Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the West, The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer while the special Farmer's Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous malady. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and easy to take. For Sale by Harr.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co. Gardiner, Me. He says; "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by J. L. Harr.

COPPER, LEAD AND ZINC STOCKS AS AN INVESTMENT.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and also Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be declaring dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stocks now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 4, 1900.

Gentlemen:—The sample of copper ore handed me for assay, by you secretary, Mr. S. H. Morton contains 18.66 per cent metallic copper. It is very desirable ore for smelting, the product being blister copper on first smelting.

THE IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' Journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

The polls will be open from eight o'clock A. M. to six o'clock P. M., at which election the following officers will be elected, to wit:

Mayor,

Two Councilmen,

H. TERHUFEN, Mayor.

To make a thirteen inch gun the Chinaman says Americans "bole a hole in the ail and lap steel alound it."

In the secretary's report of the Independent school district of Klemme, the figures which last week read $20,43 should have been $29,43. Thus a mistake of $9,00 has occured and been rectified again.

Mrs. C. Nation and the great Coxey are "birds of a feather" when it comes to getting popularity. She now like Coxey then is on everybody's tongue. Saloon keepers don't like her a little bit!

One of our subscribers came in the other day and said that if we did not leave Mrs. Carrie Nation alone he would stop his paper. Well he as well as anyone knows that we never touched Mrs. Nation. Not even the hem of her garment, She is doing mighty good work though for the cause of morality.

In the debate last Thursday evening "Resolved that the United States has deteriorated within the last decade," in the Germantown center school house Germantown vs Klemme, victory was gained for Klemme, the judges casting a vote of 3 to 2 in favor of the negative. Some very good arguments were brought out on both sides and taken all to-gether it was very interesting.

An opponent arises to state plainly "That a chain is not stronger than it's weakest link." That's fine. But it wont work in a thousand cases and for example you have this: A nation is not stronger than it's weakest gun. To tell the truth about it Uncle Sam does not need the weakest gun, or the weakest link for that matter to just knock the blue, blazing pudding out of the biggest swell headed nation that can stick it's head above the blackest soil.

Some classes of humanity and perhaps the majority at that, think a man, an editor, very unwise and imprudent for wanting what is his own. They think a man irate and angry at them if he asks for what he has justly earned. Not so, after a man has labored to earn from anyone a reasonable compensation, and gets it not he does not swear, kick out the office cat, curse and abuse the clerks, and fail to kiss his wife when leaving home to begin his days duties because he is riled and has his "dutch up." He simply wants his money That's all. That's all.

While assembled in conversation and argument recently in the barber shop, as a citizen went by one of the fellows remarked. There that fellow reminds me of a monkey, just look at his phiz. Another remarked that a fellow he had seen reminded him of the penitentary, on account of the pants he wore. Still another remarked that some people called to memory the barn-yard fowl, because they make so much noise, and just then our devil arose to proclaim the fact that he had seen just lots of people that diden't remind him of anything, unless it might be a collector

We hear that there will be a basket social at the Merten school house, on Friday evening March 8th.

The debate between Klemme and Germantown, at the literary society last Thursday evening was very well attended. The speakers on both sides seemed deeply interested in their subject. Our decision hardly agrees with that of the judges though. We call the decision a SLIGHT DETERIORATION on the part of the judges. What say the rest of you?

The reception given by the Epworth League in honor of the 21st birthday of their President, Arthur Wellemeyer, is an event that will long be remembered by those who were present. As it was the anniversary of Washington's birthday as well, the house was decorated with our national colors. The evening was spent in playing various games, after which refreshments were served. The League presented Mr. Wellemeyer with a beautiful shaving set as a token of remembrance.

It is rumored that Swift & Company of Chicago have written to parties in Des Moines in regard to securing land on which to locate a packing plant. A letter has been written to a real estate firm here with reference to securing a location, and land has been offered lying southeast of the city, as well as a tract near Valley Junction.

Plans are being made for the enlargement of the Des Moines plant of the National Starch Works, to make this the biggest plant owned by the company and the chief producing center in the country. Paul L. Grimm, chief engineer for the trust company, has just paid a visit to Des Moines. While here he exhibited to Manager T. W. Jones, of the Des Moines plant, plans for the proposed additions, which will make Des Moines the greatest starch producing center in the world. It is planned to double the plant, spending $200,000 here. The starch works is already one of the greatest industries in Des Moines. It employs 250 men, boys and girls. Within a year the company may be employing twice that number of people. The company buys practically all the corn that comes to Des Moines and is ready to take all that may come. The waste matter from the starch works furnishes food for hundreds of cattle. Probably 700 people are dependent upon the starch works for their livelihood.

During the past few days the Agars, who recently leased the Des Moines and Liverpool plant from the owners, F. M. Hubbell, Sons & Company, have ascertained that they will be unable to secure a further ground lease of the property upon which their Chicago house is located, and therefore have determined to concentrate their entire business in Des Moines. The company had planned to operate the Chicago plant as in the past and to operate the plant located in this city as a branch. In that event the Chicago house would have supplied the Chicago trade and the eastern market, the Des Moines concern handling the local business here and the western country. Now that the Agars have determined to operate but one plant the indications are that the local house will be almost doubled in size and be of twice the benefit to the city that the house would have been if the original plans of the company had been carried out.

It has been discovered that Attorney General Milton Remley failed to begin suit against Supreme Clerk Chris Jones, as reported in December, for $6,000 or $7,000 in fees claimed by Mr. Remley as owing to the state from Mr. Jones. Mr. Remley neglected to have notice of the suit served on Mr. Jones. This is a fatal defect. It left the matter in the shape of no suit at all having been brought against Mr. Jones. Attorney General Mullan, upon learning the fact, had the requisite notice served on Mr Jones, and the new suit will come up in the March term of the district court.

Attorney General Mullan and Auditor of State Merriam have agreed upon an interpretation of the revenue law of the state with reference to assessment and taxation of national bank stock, which will relieve the owners of the stock from taxation upon so much of it as can be offset by evidences of debt owed by the owner. Assessors and county auditors have been listing national bank stock as corporation stock. Deductions for debt cannot be made as against personal property assessments. Auditor Merriam and Attorney General Mullan have decided that national bank stock should be listed as moneys and credits and not as corporation stock. When this is done debts may be offset against it. Auditor Merriam is making a circular letter covering this point to be sent to all assessors.

William G. Agar, the member of the Agar Brothers company, Chicago packers, who will have charge of the Des Moines packing house, visited Des Moines a few days ago. He will come to Des Moines again between the 5th and 10th of March and remain permanently. He will bring with him then William P. Perrin, a Chicago machinery contractor, and $20,000 worth of the newest packing house machinery. The plant will open April 1, or as soon thereafter as possible. It will have a capacity of 1,000 to 2,000 hogs per day, and 1,500 to 2,000 cattle per week. It will employ at least 150 men at the start, and practically all of these will be Des Moines men.

"Peking, Feb. 22, 1901.—Cummins, Des Moines, Iowa: Am not a candidate. Conger."

Minister Conger's cablegram was sent in response to a cablegram sent him by Mr. Cummins. In his message, Mr. Cummins set forth clearly but briefly the situation. He said there were four candidates for the governorship in the field, and that he was one of them. He further stated it was claimed here Conger was a candidate, and added a request to enable his position.

WHERE IS SMITH-DORIEN?

Grave Anxiety Felt for Him and His 2,500 Men.

New York, Feb. 21.—A dispatch to the Journal and Advertiser from London says:

Grave anxiety is felt for the fate of Smith-Dorien's column, which has not been heard of since February 6th, when it lost twenty-four killed and forty-six wounded in a heavy engagement with Commandant Botha at Bothwell.

The officer in command at Wonderfontein, the nearest post on the railway to the scene of the engagement, reports that he has no news of Smith-Dorien, who has about 2,500 men under him.

Lord Kitchener has returned to Pretoria, leaving the chase after De Wet in the hands of Knox. De Wet has completely fooled Kitchener. He thought he had the Boer general surrounded near De Aar, Cape Colony, but found he was mistaken, and is wondering now where De Wet will be heard from next.

A raid upon Cape Town, while appearing impossible at this distance, is said to be actually feared.

More Men for South Africa.

London, Feb. 20.—The Daily Chronicle says it understands that several officers of high rank in India are going to South Africa, and that Lord Dundonald, General Kelly-Kenny and General Leach are also going out again. According to the same authority, it has been practically decided, in connection with the scheme of army reform, to increase the forces by 150,000 men, to secure whom it is proposed to increase the pay of the soldiers.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Senate—By the emphatic vote of 18 to 32 the senate late this afternoon rejected the conference report on the military academy appropriation bill. This action came at the conclusion of a spirited debate upon its provisions against hazing inserted in the report by the conference committee of the two branches of congress.

House—The house spent the day upon the sundry civil appropriation bill and reached the 99th page. There are 135 pages in the bill. The feature of the day was the debate upon the question of national irrigation of arid lands in the west which came up incidentally.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Senate—The senate spent the day on the postoffice appropriation bill, making some progress, but not completing it. The amendment of Butler of North Carolina, proposing a reduction of about 9 per cent in the pay of railway postal service was defeated, 18 to 61, after a debate in which Depew answered Butler's criticisms on the large profits made by American roads.

House—The house finally passed the sundry civil appropriation bill today, and entered upon consideration of the general deficiency—the last of the general appropriation bills.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Senate.—For nearly two hours today the senate had under discussion a resolution by Jones, of Arkansas, to discharge the judiciary committee from further consideration of the anti-trust bill passed by the house at the last session, and to bring it before the senate for consideration. The resolution went to the calendar.

House—This was another field day in the house. Two distinct sensation occurred. Early in the day, during the consideration of an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill to prevent hazing at the naval academy, Hepburn, of Iowa, used exceedingly strong language while inveighing against the practice of hazing, charging by indirection that the habits of tyranny and oppression formed by the officers of the army and navy at their academies were responsible for the refusal of sailors to enlist in the navy and for the large number of desertions from the army. Moreover, he alleged that the officers stood by each other when in trouble, saying that the commanders of twenty-five vessels of the navy lost since the civil war had, with one exception, escaped with slight punishment. Cannon, of Illinois, and Dayton, of West Virginia, warmly defended the navy. Another sensation was sprung when Dinsmore, of Arkansas, exposed the fact that numerous house employes were holding positions while performing no service. Bailey declared it a scandal upon the integrity of the house. A resolution for an investigating committee was adopted.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Senate.—Two of the great supply bills of the government, the postoffice and the diplomatic and consular appropriation bills, were passed by the senate today. During the greater part of the session a proposition to discontinue the appropriations for fast mail facilities from New York to New Orleans via Atlanta, and from Kansas City, Mo., to Newton, Kan., was under discussion. While the debate was protracted, it was not particularly lively. By a decisive vote the senate continued the appropriations.

House.—An hour was devoted to unanimous consent legislation, and two hours and a half each to the passing of private claim bills and private pension bills. Nine bills were passed by unanimous consent, and 29 claim bills and 139 pension bills were passed. Among the latter was the senate bill to pension the widow of the late General Henry W. Lawton, who was killed in the Philippines. As the bill passed the senate it carried $100 a month. The house cut the amount down to $50.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Senate.—The senate today passed the bill which releases the appropriation of $5,000,000 for the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis in 1903. It was amended by providing an appropriation of $250,000 for a government exhibit at the Charleston exposition, to be held next December. Before the bill was passed, amendments were adopted closing both expositions on Sunday. The day was given to the fortification and the army appropriation bills, the former being passed.

House.—The house today adopted a resolution to investigate the pay of its employes as a result of the conditions of affairs unearthed last Thursday during the debate on the deficiency bill and the speaker appointed a committee consisting of Moody of Massachusetts, Overstreet of Indiana, Long of Kansas, Bailey of Texas and Newlands of Nevada, to make the investigation. The bill to increase the efficiency of the revenue cutter service was debated for two hours but no action was taken.

DUKE OF WESTMINSTER NAMED.

Corespondent in Divorce Suit of Atherton vs. Atherton.

London, Feb. 22.—Major T. L. Atherton, second in command of the Twelfth (Prince of Wales) Lancers, now in South Africa, has filed a suit for divorce against his wife, Mabel Louisa Atherton, naming the Duke of Westminster as co-respondent.

With the announcement of the filing of the suit of "Atherton vs. Atherton and Westminster," the long anticipated divorce proceedings of Major Atherton against his wife, with the Duke of Westminster figuring in the role of co-respondent, have at length materialized. Within the past thirty-six hours a lawyer who is looked upon as the leader of the divorce court bar, has been retained in behalf of the petitioner. The case cannot be aired in court, at any rate for some months, and possibly not before autumn, and the friends of the just married duke may yet succeed in compromising the matter and preventing a trial. But as Major Atherton is reported to have already refused a check of £40,000 as compensation for the injury he is said to have sustained, the task ahead of those who are trying to arrange a settlement, among whom is said to be King Edward himself, would seem to be insuperative.

Conger Coming.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Minister Conger will leave Peking immediately for this country on sixty days leave of absence. Commissioner will have full power to conduct the negotiations now in progress.

Mr. Conger returns of his own initiative. For some time past he has been anxious to get back to Iowa, but the opportunity has not presented itself until this moment. Now that the foreign ministers have satisfactorily settled the question of punishments of the offending Chinese officials and a new subject is to be taken up, it will be easy to pass the negotiations into Mr. Rockhill's hands without sacrifice of any points. It was Mr. Conger's own suggestion that Mr. Rockhill be placed in charge.

Chinese Court Yields.

London, Feb. 21.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Peking yesterday, says: "The court has yielded and consented to the infliction of the punishment demanded, petitioning, however, that the sentences of Chao Su Chino and Ying Nien may be strangulation instead of decapitation. To this the foreign envoys have agreed. The question, therefore, is virtually settled, and a raison d'etre for the Tai-Yuen-Fu expedition ceases to exist."

We will never profit by our mistakes as long as we blame others for them.

LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER VI.

A HUNDRED POUNDS REWARD—Left her home on April 30, a young lady, aged 18, brown hair, grey-blue eyes, fair complexion, a very diminutive figure. When last seen was wearing a black tailor-made costume and a small lace toque trimmed with violets. The above reward will be paid to any one giving such information as may lead to her recovery. Apply to A. B. C., Porter's library, Wilton Place."

Two people at Easthill read that notice and knew whom it concerned—Beryl Lindon, who rejoiced with all her heart that the gathering coldness of the April evening had made her put on her cloak before she left Easthill Station; and Harold Dynevor, who felt convinced that the young lady inquired for was no other than the lonely little traveler who had asked the way to Mrs. Tanner's school.

No doubt other people in the neighborhood read the advertisement, but none of them guessed it was in their power to earn the reward. Mrs. Wilmot had never seen her sister's teacher in walking attire, Mrs. Tanner never looked at the agony column. Helen Craven, who was of a romantic turn of mind, read the paragraph aloud to her family, and declared the poor girl it concerned had evidently escaped from a lunatic asylum; but Captain Tempest was at the Manor and engrossed most of her attention, so that she soon forgot the matter.

Beryl felt terribly nervous. She had expected her father to be rather relieved at her departure, and the advertisement seemed to imply he was set on finding her. She longed to confide in Mrs. Tanner; but, though she could have trusted the widow perfectly, the possession of such a secret would, if discovered, have embroiled her very much with her sister. So beyond a visit to the one draper's at Easthill-on-Sea, where she purchased a bunch of forget-me-nots to replace the violets in her toque, the advertisement made no immediate difference to Beryl.

As for Harold, he thought of it again and again. He could not get the girl's sweet, sad face out of his head. And after a few days' doubt and perplexity, during which the announcement was repeated in the paper every morning, he decided to call on Mrs. Grey, the wife of the curate-in-charge of the Easthill-on-Sea, and ask her openly for Mrs. Tanner's address.

He was prepared to face her wonder at the question, but it was spared him. The first greetings were barely over when little Olive Grey came in through the French window, with two or three school books strapped together, and a very important little face.

"You don't mean to say you send that mite to schol?" Harold asked, when Miss Olive had installed herself on his knee. "Why, she can't be six!"

"Turned eight, Mr. Dynevor. I should have sent her before, only there was no school here. A young widow, Mrs. Tanner, opened one in January, and Olive was one of her first pupils."

"I shouldn't have thought there were enough children for a school to pay."

"I think Mrs. Tanner must be getting on, for she has just started an assistant. Such a pretty girl! I saw her at church on Sunday and lost my heart to her. Lendon her name is—isn't it, Olive?"

"Yes; only one letter different from Mr. Lindon's," said Miss Olive; "and she comes from London, too."

The child ran off to her tea, and Mrs. Grey, who did not possess as much tact as kindness, suddenly asked:

"Is it true that the Lindons are coming to live at the Manor when General Craven leaves?"

"I have no idea. I know it is rumored."

"Mr. Grey thinks the rumor only got about because Mr. Lindon refused to renew the general's lease."

"General Craven thinks he will renew it in the end, but is standing out for increased rent. The agent, Wilmot, has hinted as much."

"Then it is probably true. Mr. Wilmot is very much in the big man's confidence. I do hope the Lindons won't come here."

Harold shrugged his shoulders. But he was unusually grave and thoughtful that evening. Before he went to bed he had written a very brief note to Beryl, enclosing the advertisement from the Telegraph.

"One who witnessed Miss Lendon's arrival at Easthill-on-Sea sends this to warn her she is being sought for. She may rely on his absolute silence now and always."

There was no signature. Beryl could not in the least imagine who sent the note, but she felt it was meant to be reassuring. And as May faded into June she tried hard to forget the dark shadows which hung threateningly over her pathway, and to be as happy as she could.

It was a quiet and monotonous life she led at Woodlands. After the luxury at Elchester square, the hard work, and plain fare would have been distasteful to many girls; but Beryl was only too thankful to have escaped from her gilded cage. Mrs. Tanner was kindness itself, and if the Wilmots rather grated on Beryl with the condescending patronage, she knew perfectly it was not her employer's fault, and resented their cold reproofs to the gentle widow far more than any slights to herself.

And then a wonderful thing happened. Mrs. Grey, who was the nearest approach to a friend the widowed school mistress had at Easthill, descended on Woodlands one day, and begged Mrs. Tanner to lend her young assistant to help at a kind of open air fete she was getting up for the church building fund.

The curate's wife never forgot that the widow was unfortunate, that her husband's death had brought her from a pleasant, easeful rectory to fight for her bread. Mrs. Grey had helped the enterprise at Woodlands in many ways, not least by her kindness and friendly sympathy with Woodland's tenant. She told her difficulties as frankly as if Mrs. Tanner had been her sister.

"You know we are not rich, but just because Frank is the curate I have to take a stall and do my utmost to make things go. I'm not clever at bazaars, and I had depended on my sister coming to help me. I've just had a letter to say she has sprained her ankle—nothing serious; but she won't be able to put her foot to the ground for a fortnight, and the fete is next week. Do lend me Miss Lendon! It's a Wednesday, and so, being a half holiday, the school can't suffer. Besides, I'm pretty sure all your pupils will be there. I don't ask you to come"—she looked kindly at the crape-trimmed dress, "it would be hard on you to appear at a gay scene so soon, but you might lend me your assistant."

"I will spare Miss Lendon to you with pleasure," said Mrs. Tanner; "but are you sure she will be of any use? She is a dear little thing, but almost painfully shy. She has been with me over two months, and I know no more of her than I did the day she came."

"Well, may I ask her and see what she says?"

Mrs. Tanner fetched Beryl and explained what was required of her. The girl blushed crimson.

"I never was at a bazaar in my life," she told Mrs. Grey, "but if you think I can be of any use I shall be glad to do my best."

Mrs. Grey was delighted and Beryl left the room, pledged to be her chief lieutenant on the eventful Wednesday.

"You know," said the curate's wife, when Beryl had gone, "she is so pretty she is sure to charm money out of people's pockets, and there was really no one else I could ask. Mrs. Craven has taken a stall, and her daughter and Miss Dynevor will help at it. There wasn't a girl in Easthill I could think of who would have been of any use."

Mrs. Tanner hesitated.

"Ought it to be a very grand toilet? I am not sure what Miss Lendon has in the way of finery."

"Every one is to dress just as they please. The sellers are to wear a favor of black and gold to distinguish them. I'll send over the one I made for Cicely."

Mrs. Tanner and Beryl talked over the bazaar after supper that night.

"It will be a little glimpse of gaiety for you," said the elder woman kindly. "This is a very dull life for you, Miss Lendon."

"I am not at all dull," said Beryl, simply.

She had altered since she came to Easthill. The scared, anxious look had gone from her face, and, in spite of hard work, she looked younger and brighter. She really quite looked forward to the garden fete, as its promoters called it, as a festival; for, after all, she was young enough to enjoy the sight of prety things and bright faces.

CHAPTER VII.

Mrs. Tanner almost started when Beryl came to show herself when she was dressed for the fete, and yet the girl only wore the white cashmere which had been her best attire last summer. It was very soft and clinging, falling from waist to hem in long, straight folds, the bodice trimmed with a little white silk, and a broad sash of the softest surah knotted loosely round her waist. Her hat was white, too, and trimmed with a long white feather and a quantity of chiffon. She looked far more like some rich wandering princess than a humble school assistant.

"Shall I do?" asked Beryl, a little anxiously.

"You had better put a cloak over your dress for the drive, the lanes are so dusty," said Mrs. Tanner. "You look charming, and I am sure Mrs. Grey will think so."

That lady drove up then in her rather shabby pony carriage. The fete was to be held in the grounds of Dynevorse are the last people to think three miles from Woodlands, so she had arranged to call for Miss Lendon.

"I'll bring her back safely," she promised Mrs. Tanner, "but I can't promise when. The fete opens at 3, and we are supposed to go on till we've sold everything."

She talked very pleasantly to Beryl as they drove along, saying she would introduce her to Miss Dynevor, who was about her own age.

"Please don't," said Beryl shyly—"I mean, she might not like it. Miss Dynevor of Dynevor must be a great lady, and I am only a teacher."

"My dear," said Mrs. Grey, "the Dynevors are the last people to think less of you for that. And so far from being great, they have fallen on very evil times. Harold farms his own land; but it's all he can do to struggle on these bad times, and if Kitty does not have to earn money, she works very hard at home."

"But the Manor is called after them."

"And it ought to be theirs, only it isn't." She went on to give Beryl the full and particular story of Nina Dynevor's infatuation for Eustace Lindon, and the wrong it had led to. Beryl only kept silent by an effort. It was terrible to listen to the reproach of her own parents and say nothing; but deep down in her own heart the girl felt her gentle mother had never done the wrong ascribed to her. No, the will which left the Manor away from the Dynevors had been extorted from her weakness, not made of her own free will.

"I hope I have not tired you out," concluded Mrs. Grey, "you are looking very pale."

"I am generally pale, thanks."

The general stood on the steps of the Manor to welcome them. He looked a little astonished as Mrs. Grey introduced her companion—the girl was so unlike what he had expected; but he soon led the way to the huge marquee which had been erected in the grounds for the five stalls held by the elite of Easthill.

A smaller tent was devoted to flowers, yet another held refreshments, a ladies' orchestra—from Brighton, be it whispered—discoursed sweet music in a third. Mrs. Grey and Beryl hastened to their places, while the general went back to await the advent of the great lady who was to formally declare the fete open.

It looked to Beryl like fairyland; and when a few minutes later things were in full swing, and the people began to flock in, she proved herself quite an expert saleswoman. Many of the visitors thought Mrs. Grey's assistant the prettiest girl present.

"Harold," whispered Kitty Dynevor to her brother, when he made his appearance, "your fair traveler is here."

"What do you mean?" He asked, bewildered.

"Don't you remember asking if there were a school at Easthill-on-Sea, because a girl was making her way to it at the station one day? Well, the girl is just here at Mrs. Grey's stall; but she doesn't look like a school teacher, does she?"

She did not. It flashed on Harold that he had never seen a sweeter face. He thought the shadow on the grey eyes was lighter, and he wondered if she had ceased to worry over the hundred pounds reward offered for her recovery. She did not look in the least like a fugitive or a runaway.

Mrs. Grey's voice broke on his meditations.

"Mr. Dynevor, do take Miss Lendon to the house to have some tea. Mrs. Craven has some in the dining room specially for our benefit; the tent is only for outsiders, you know, who pay as they go. I have been there long ago; but I couldn't find any one to send with Miss Lendon, and, as she has never been inside the Manor, she does not like to go alone."

"I shall be only too pleased," said Harold; and the two left the marquee together.

It was not far, only a few hundred yards as distance went; but it seemed miles to Beryl because all the way she was trying to decide a question. One glance had told her that Mr. Dynevor had been at Easthill station when she arrived, therefore it must be he who sent her the advertisement and words of kindly warning. Should she allude to it or not?

It was only when she was in sight of the old Manor house that she made up her mind.

A LARGE FAMILY.

Christmas Migration of the Skaggses Through St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. George Skaggs passed through the station last night with her family, en route from her home, near Huntsdale, Mo., to the home of her father, at Pollard, Ky., says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The family consisted of Mrs. Skaggs and ten children, the eldest of whom was 18 and the youngest 3 years old. She stated that she had three other children besides the string which accompanied her, but that they were married and "settled down" out west. Mrs. Skaggs said that she was married twenty-two years ago, and that a year ago her husband died. She continued to work the farm with the aid of her offspring and they managed to keep the place in a prosperous condition. She said that she had not heard from her father directly for several years, and as "Christmas was coming on," she thought she would go over and spend the holidays with the old folks. The children, when placed in a row, look like stair steps. The big bustling crowd at the station and the clanging of the train bells and screeching of the whistles greatly excited the children, and whenever a new sound greeted their ears the youngsters would begin to cry. If Mrs. Skaggs moved from one part of the station to the other the entire tribe of Skaggs moved after her. Between their moving around and their crying the attention of everybody in the main waiting room was attracted and the Skaggs family was the cynosure of all eyes. Mrs. Skaggs said she was going to surprise the old folks, as they did not know how many children she had, and there would be a great Christmas gathering at her old homestead. The last heard of the family was when the engine pulling the Louisville & Nashville train whistled for the cross-over switch and as the screech died away a sound which was easily recognized as the Skaggs chorus floated back through the train shed and died away amid the arches of the waiting room.

ODD OCCUPATION.

Professor of Being Buried Alive Testifies in a Courtroom.

One of the witnesses in a recent lawsuit in Cleveland was Edward Kaehn. The Cleveland Leader says: "The examination of Kaehn proved to be very amusing. On the cross-examination Prosecutor Keeler demanded to know the business of the witness. The witness said that he lived at 325 Lake street, and was known as Prof. James Smith, and that his specialty was being buried alive for exhibition purposes. He declared that he never had really died, but claimed that he could lie in a grave six days and nights. He averred that he was ready at any time to be buried for $500 per week, providing that there was a proper and an unmistakably trustworthy committee to play the role of resurrection angels should they be needed to save his life. He was rather reluctant about 'tipping off his act,' as he expressed it, but Judge Neff became interested and wanted to hear all about it. Kaehn declared that he has been placed in a coffin which had been properly upholstered, and that it has been lowered into a grave 6 feet 4 inches deep. An air shaft is constructed and the grave closed.

"'What is the air shaft for?' asked the prosecutor.

"'For air,' replied Kaehn, 'and for sending down the beer, water and grub.'

"'Then you always had to have air, did you?' continued the prosecutor.

"'Oh, no. Sometimes I was completely buried for twenty-four hours. In a case of that kind a bucket of water was placed in the coffin and several sponges saturated with water. The water evaporated, and that furnished all the oxygen I needed to live on.'"

Tests for Diamonds.

Recent arrivals from South Africa have brought, says a correspondent, the most wondrous specimens of "diamonds" with them, beautiful to behold, but alas! they would not scratch glass, while some of the most beautiful of all can be cut with a pocketknife, says the London News. It is tolerably simple to say whether a stone is a diamond or not. If you can scratch a sapphire with it, you want no further test; it is a diamond. If you rub it with wool or on wool in the dark and it phosphoresces, it is a diamond. If you look through it at a light and see only one light, it is most probably a diamond. The X rays have discovered that a diamond is nearly, if not quite, translucent to those rays, whereas the brightest "paste" contains most lead and throws the blackest shadow. And a diamond tastes cold, whereas a paste gem tastes warm. Maj. Battersby, O. S. D., writing on this subject, said that Solomon's words were very true as applied to persons giving information to those in possession of "precious stones." Very often "he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow."

Turntable for Trolley Cars.

A turntable for trolley cars has been patented by an Ohio inventor. It is so arranged that when the car is driven on it the front wheels rest upon two rollers coming up through the track and, by gently starting the motors, these revolve under the car and communicate their motion through proper gearing to the turntable itself, and thus the car is turned around by its own power, the trolley swivelling on its base and staying on the wire. The crew of the car do not have to descend from it, and it is asserted that the apparatus works very quickly and successfully in practice.

STORIETTES.

The late Ignatius Donnelly was once rudely interrupted in the course of a political speech by a head of cabbage thrown from the audience. "Gentlemen," he said, mildly, "I only asked your ears; I don't care for your heads."

Years ago, when Bret Harte, fresh from the Pacific slope, heard the list of famous men living at Cambridge, he said to Mr. Howells: "Why, you couldn't fire a revolver from your front porch anywhere without bringing down a two-volumer!"

William Travers was at a garden party one afternoon, when a young lady said to him: "What time is it, please, Mr. Travers?" Travers took out his watch, wabbled his mouth awhile, blinked, and finally said: "It'll be s-s-s-s-six o'c-c-c-clock by the time I can say it!" It really lacked five minutes of six when he began.

An Irish electrician recently trotted down town to a jeweler's to buy a ring for his wife-to-be. After waiting until he could obtain the ear of the clerk without letting others know his business, Pat whispered hoarsely to him: "Give me the best wedding ring you have in the shop." "Eighteen carats?" queried the clerk. "No," snapped Pat, drawing back in an offended manner; "atin' onions, if it's any of your business."

A rash clergyman once, without further equipment in natural history than some desultory reading, attacked the Darwinian theory in some sundry magazine articles in which he made himself uncommonly merry at Huxley's expense. This was intended to draw the great man's fire, and as the batteries remained silent, the author proceeded to write to Huxley, calling his attention to the articles, and at the same time, with mock modesty, asking advice as to the further study of these deep questions. Huxley's answer was brief and to the point: "Take a cockroach and dissect it!"

In the course of a debate at which Blomfield, bishop of London, was asked to preside, one of the students, with strong indignation evident in his voice, addressing the chair, inquired, oratorically: "What, sir, would the Apostle Paul have said, could he have seen the life of luxury led by our present race of prelates and church dignitaries, riding about in the carriages and living in their palaces? What, sir, I repeat, would he have said?" "I think," said the bishop, interrupting the speaker, in a meek and milk voice, "that he would have said, 'Things in the church must be looking up.'"

Congressman Jones of Virginia tells this story of his father in the Springfield Republican: Directly after the war, Jones senior was sent to the state senate. An old slave who had belonged to him was also elected to the senate. The two drew adjoining seats. Senator Jones was very courteous, and in addressing his former slave always called him senator. The old negro stood it for some time, and finally said: "Massa William, I don't like dis senator business. Kain't I come down to yo' house and visit that cook of yourn? I suhtinly would like permission to visit yo kitchen." The request was granted, and while Senator Jones was in his library the other senator was down in the kitchen visiting the cook.

From the Miami golf links in the southern part of Florida comes an interesting story about a crow, only in this instance the crow was not killed by a swiftly driven golf ball, as has occurred in golf traditions once or twice in the past. The story relates that a crow was watching a game with considerable interest, when, as the ball of the player who was getting the worst of the game fell directly under the tree in which the bird was perched, the crow swooped down, seized the ball in his beak, and flew away with it, beyond two holes, depositing it at the third hole from the one at which the player had driven. The man whose ball had been thus generously treated claimed the distance and two holes as a rub of the green, remarking, to quote from a Florida paper: "Me and the crow are mighty hard to beat."

The Trust Problem.

To a thoughtful mind, the trust problem is one of serious import. It must be firmly grappled with, for it creeps upon society before you are aware of its existence, in this respect much resembling the various disorders which attack the stomach, such as constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure all such ailments, and prevent la grippe, malarial fever and ague. Be sure to give it a trial.

Physicians recommend KEMP'S BALSAM for patients afflicted with the grippe, as it is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms, but get a bottle today and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected, the grippe brings on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists, 25c and 50c.

A WISE DRUGGIST.

For $5.00 He Guarantees to Do That for Which a Lady Offers Him $100.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 25, 1901.—(Special.)—Some two years ago a local druggist engaged in a transaction which was in its details somewhat remarkable. He was visited by Miss Anna P. Nichols, who had a doctor's prescription for rheumatism, which the druggist was filling. In the course of conversation the good lady said: "I would give one hundred dollars to get well."

He immediately replied: "Give me five dollars and I will guarantee to cure you."

She agreed, and he at once handed her a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, saying: "They are 50c a box. Two boxes may cure you, but I am quite sure that ten will."

Miss Nichols tells the story as follows: "Dodd's Kidney Pills are veritable life preservers. I was troubled for five years with Rheumatism, so that at times my right arm seemed paralyzed and I could only walk with difficulty, and could not go out of doors if the air was damp or cold. I took so much medicine that I think my system was poisoned rather than helped. One day when my druggist was putting up a prescription for me I remarked to him that I would give one hundred dollars for a remedy that would make me better."

"'Give me five dollars and I will guarantee to cure you,' he said. I readily agreed and he handed me a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, saying, 'They are 50c a box. Two boxes may cure you, but I am sure that ten will.' I left my prescription intact and, instead, took these Pills, and I found them, as I said before, to be veritable life preservers. Before I had finished the second box I had my first part of night's rest in years. I gradually improved. I had determined to use the ten boxes before I would give up, but imagine my surprise to find that before half that quantity was used I was completely cured. This was two years ago, and I have not had a twinge since."

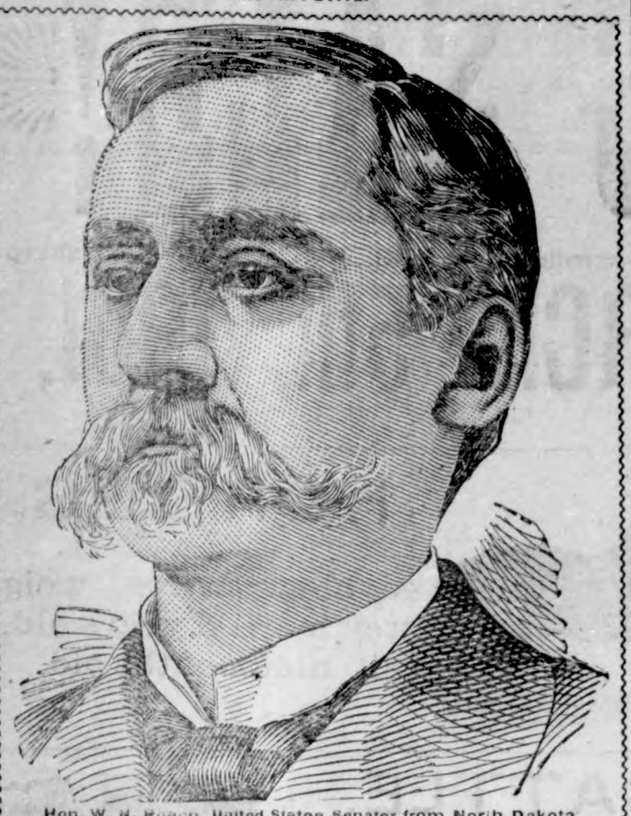
A UNITED STATES SENATOR

SAYS THAT PE-RU-NA, THE CATARRH CURE, GIVES STRENGTH AND APPETITE.



Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota.

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota, personally endorses Peruna, the great catarrh cure and tonic. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, at Columbus, Ohio, written from Washington, D. C., Senator Roach says:

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Peruna as a tonic, and I am g'ad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficatious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."—W. N. Roach, Larimore, North Dakota.

No other remedy can take the place of Peruna.

Mr. E. J. Makinson, Contractor and Builder.

Mr. Ed J. Makinson, contractor and builder, 610 Grand Block, Wabash street, St. Paul, Minn., says:

"Many doctor bills can be saved by the use of Peruna. I have all my friends taking Peruna, and I have heard nothing but praise from them. Last fall I had a bad cough. I took four bottles of Peruna and it cured me. I am inclined to warn people of consumption, as all my family have died with it. I weight 185 pounds, and I believe it is Peruna that has given me such good health."—J. Makinson.

As a result of the changeable climate, catarrh has become one of the most prevalent and universal diseases known to man. Nearly one-third of the people of the United States are afflicted with catarrh in some of its many phases and stages. Add to this the fact that catarrh rapidly tends to become fixed or chronic, also the further fact that it is capable of producing a great many other diseases, and we begin to realize the true nature of this dread disease.

So formidable has catarrh become that in every city or town of any size numerous doctors are to be found who make the treatment of catarrh a specialty. Of course a great deal of good is accomplished in this way, but as yet a comparatively small number of the people can avail themselves of this treatment because of the great expense necessarily attached to it.

To all such people Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, comes as a great boon. Not only is it more successful in curing catarrh than the treatment of the catarrh specialists, but it is within the reach of every person in this land. Peruna can be bought at any drug store, and is a remedy without equal for catarrh in all forms, coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter.

Peruna is not a guess, nor an experiment; it is an absolute, scientific certainty. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna. Let no one persuade you that some other remedy will do nearly as well. There is no other systemic remedy for catarrh but Peruna.

Byron J. Kirkhuff, Attorney and Counsellor at Law.

Mr. Byron J. Kirkhuff, attorney, counsellor-at-law writes from 691 Gates ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., the following:

"I have used your Peruna for catarrh and find its curative powers all you recommend. It cured me of a very bad attack and though I suffered for years I feel entirely relieved, and if it will benefit others, I gladly give it my endorsement."—B. J. Kirkhuff.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

GALLOWS ARE CHEATED.

Geo. Anderson Commits Suicide in Jail at Burlington.

Burlington, Feb. 24.—George Anderson, the supposed murderer of Harry Linter of Cedar Rapids, and who has been on trial here for the past three days on a charge of attempting to murder Mrs. Linter, who was with her husband at the time he was killed, committed suicide in the county jail here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and just in time to avoid being taken to the court room to hear the jury's verdict of guilty as charged read. Anderson cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor.

The jury went out at 12:30 o'clock and at 2 announced that a verdict had been reached. Sheriff Muenzenmier was ordered to bring the prisoner into court. The sheriff went after the prisoner. The jailor stepped to the cell ahead of him and unlocking it, told Anderson, who was in the corridor. Anderson stepped to the rear part of his cell, seized a razor, and slashing his neck, severed the jugular vein. He died five minutes later. The jury had brought in a verdict of guilty.

Although Anderson made no confession his suicide is taken as an admission of guilt. The evidence against him was overwhelming and his conviction was anticipated not only on the charge of attempting murder, but on the greater charge of murdering Mr. Linter. Anderson had been despondent for some time. After his death a nail sharpened to a razor edge and a piece of rope were found concealed in his cell.

Anderson is an enigma. Since his arrest he has never referred to home, relatives or friends. He strongly asserted that he was a victim of circumstances and not guilty of the crime charged. He had often stated that he was not afraid of the gallows and that if furnished a shotgun he would end his life.

INDICTMENTS ARE WORTHLESS.

Startling Flaw Discovered in Drawing of Wapello County Grand Jurors.

Ottumwa, Feb. 25.—A sensation was sprung in the district court here when it was discovered that the last grand jury, which returned over twenty-five indictments, and upon which two men have pleaded guilty and have been sentenced to terms in the penitentiary, was illegally drawn, and that the indictments are worthless. The flaw was discovered by ex-Senator J. J. Smith, attorney for an alleged saloonkeeper who had been indicted for violations of the mulct law. As soon as this was discovered attorneys for about twenty other alleged gamblers who had been indicted at the same time filed motions to quash the indictments, and when the matter was brought before Judge Roberts he sustained the motions and ordered all defendants dismissed. The error was caused by a petit juror being drawn and his name placed by mistake in the box for grand jurors, and he served as such. The statement of the county attorney is that he claims that the two men already in prison will not necessarily be affected by the discovery of the error, as they both pleaded guilty, and, therefore, have no legal right to ask for another trial.

ALGONA STIRRED UP.

Mrs. Foster Confesses She Assisted in Trying to Kill Her Husband.

Algona, Feb. 23.—The motive for the shooting of Fred Foster by Clarence Robinson, two weeks ago, has at last come to the surface. Mrs. Foster, wife of the man who was shot, has made a full confession in writing, implicating herself in the crime. She has been placed under arrest and is now in the custody of the sheriff.

Mrs. Foster's confesison goes on to say that she has been intimate with Robinson since last April; that they had frequently talked over the matter of getting Foster out of the way in order that they might then live together; that she knew of Robinson's purchase of the revolver, and that on the very night of the tragedy Robinson was with her until 11 o'clock, and that she knew he was to shoot Foster that night. She now says that on that night she had gone to bed but was not asleep when the shot was fired; that she heard her husband scream and then knew that Robinson had shot him. On the whole it is such a confession as will send her to the penitentiary for a period of years.

SMALL POX IN COUNTY JAIL.

Polk County Has Five Cases Quarantined in a Cage.

Des Moines, Feb. 23.—Smallpox has broken loose in the Polk county jail. Wm. Tatrow, indicted on the charge of breaking and entering a railroad car, was discovered in the "St. Louis" cage with a well developed case of the disease, and the cage occupied by Tatrow, Dick Brindley, Albert Latham, "Doc" Smith and one other was placed under quarantine by the county physician, Dr. Conklin. Tatrow has been ill for three or four days but it was supposed he was suffering with a disease of trivial nature and little consequence was taken of it until it was discovered that he had broken out with smallpox. The "St. Louis" cell, in which the five men are quarantined, is the cell in which the convicts are confined before they are taken to Fort Madison. "Doc" Smith was to have been taken to the penitentiary tomorrow, but will have to remain here now until the quarantine is raised. Brindley, Tatrow and Latham were confined in the "St. Louis" cage for want of room in the other apartments.

Found Anderson's Double.

Burlington, Feb. 23.—The defense sprung a decided sensation in the Linter murder trial by producing an exact duplicate of the defendant. He will be used to show the jury how easily Mrs. Linter might have been mistaken in the identification of the man who shot her husband. The double of the defendant Anderson is Ed Sabin of this city, and the resemblance between the two men is startling. Sabin was at home on the night of the murder.

Led Drugged to the Altar.

Dubuque, Feb. 23.—A decidedly sensational suit, that is, a suit with very startling charges, has just been filed here. Emily Kries charges that she was drugged and while under the influence of drugs and unconscious of what was transpiring, the marriage of herself to Edward Kries was performed.

Linseed Oil Fire.

Sioux City, Feb. 23.—The linseed oil mills, owned by the American Linseed Oil company, were damaged by fire to the extent of $12,500. The flames broke out in the cake room, and after a general alarm was turned in the firemen fought for several hours before the flames were brought under control.

Helpless at the Throttle.

Mason City, Feb. 23.—When freight No. 31 pulled into Fox Lake over the Northwestern a senseless engineer was sitting bolt upright on his seat and an inexperienced fireman was managing, to the best of his ability, the engine. Frank Kelly was the engineer, and while midway between Marna and Fox Lake he was suddenly stricken with a sort of paralysis and fell senseless. Another engineer was telegraphed for here and went to finish the run. It is thought that this will permanently unfit Kelly for an engineer.

SWORD FOR CAPT. EVANS

Gift of Iowa People to the Captain of the Iowa.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Captain Robley D. Evans, U. S. N., was last night presented with a handsome sword, the gift of the citizens of Iowa in recognition of the services rendered his country while in command of the battleship Iowa at Santiago on July 3, 1898. The members of the Iowa delegation with their families attended the presentation at the Evans home at 324 Indiana avenue. The sword, which is valued at $1,500, was purchased through the agency of the Commercial Exchange of Des Moines, with money contributed by the citizens of Iowa. Speaker Henderson made the presentation speech.

When the guests arived they were greeted by Representative Hull, who introduced each to Captain and Mrs. Evans. During the presentation Captain Evans stood beneath the ensign which flew from the mast head of the Iowa at the battle of Santiago.

Representative Hull gave a brief sketch of the gift and handed it to Speaker Henderson, who turned to Captain Evans and said, in part:

"To me has been assigned the pleasant duty of presenting to you this sword. It comes from warm, appreciative, noble hearts in Iowa, to be presented to you as a token of their appreciation of your valor and also to testify their love for and devotion to American heroes of the sea, of which class you are a beloved and conspicuous example. I find upon examination that your record is as follows——"

Speaker Henderson then read Captain Evans' record, which showed that he was the commander of the Iowa from March, 1898, until September of the same year. Continuing, Speaker Henderson said:

"Your high courage and character can be well inferred from this glorious record. The name of 'Bob' Evans is a household word in the United States. The opinion of your fellow officers places you foremost among our heroes of the deep. Iowa is proud of you and symbolizes her affection by presenting you this sword, knowing that you will never use it for any other purpose than to maintain the honor of the United States."

Captain Evans accepted the sword and then replied in characteristic straightforward manner:

"Gentlemen of the Iowa delegation: Making speeches, as you all possibly know, is not my trade. I wish it were, for this occasion at least, that I might tell you in fitting words how grateful I am for the honor you have done me and how entirely I appreciate the sentiment of those who have sent this sword.

"The beautiful battleship named after your great commonwealth, and which, through the courtesy of the secretary of the navy, I had the honor to command during the Spanish war, was manned by six hundred officers and men. They were as brave a band as ever fought for the dear old flag, and it was what they did that brings me this token of the good will of your people.

"As the commander of the gallant crew of the Iowa, I accept this beautiful sword. You could not give a token to each of them, therefore this one to me. They are scattered over the waters of the east, but the heart of each will warm with pride and gratitude when he learns that one of their number has been honored. I hope that some day the national congress will suitably recognize the gallant conduct of each one of my comrades, and that the day may not be far distant.

"I beg you to convey to your people the expression of my heartfelt thanks and gratitude."

NATURALIZATION PAPERS VOID.

Votes of People Who Held Them Canceled Because of Fraud.

Knoxville, Feb. 21.—Judge Gamble of the district court here has issued an order canceling the naturalization papers of thirteen supposedly legal voters of Marion county, all recent emigrants from Holland and residents in the vicinity of Pella. The canceling of the papers is the result of proceedings begun by William Mentzer, who is engaged in an election contest in the district court to determine whether he or William Stone is entitled to the office of county attorney. Mentzer, the republican, received nearly an equal number of votes to those received by Stone, his democratic competitor. As the case now stands a difference of twelve votes will be sufficient to give Mentzer the office. The latter claims a sufficient number of illegal votes were cast for Stone to give him the office. As a step toward the determination of the contest in his favor, he began an action to have the naturalization papers in question canceled, and with success, as the order of Judge Gamble indicates. The thirteen defendants appeared and made statements under oaths, admitting that they received their first papers in July, 1900, and their second ones in October, and that the papers were not given them by the judge or clerk of the district court. The law requires that a person must come before the court or clerk and renounce allegiance to his former sovereign. This they never did. It further states that two years must elapse before second papers must be taken out. This time did not elapse. Fraud was evident in the verbal and written evidence from beginning to end. All of the persons whose papers were canceled swore they had voted the democratic ticket. It is asserted other papers might, with propriety, be canceled, but inasmuch as the list already disposed of will be enough to determine the contest case, there is no prospect of further steps in this direction. It is now believed Mentzer will win in the contest case and will be permitted to qualify as county attorney.

CAN'T GET BOX CARS.

Grain Men of Iowa Making Kicks to the Railroad Companies.

Des Moines, Feb. 25.—Grain dealers all over Iowa are in a plight that they have not experienced in a dozen years. Affairs are getting to such an extreme that they almost have to beg for cars in which to load their grain. The railroads being under obligations to the grain elevator men have issued on one line positive orders to the effect that all available cars must go to the elevators, no one being allowed to load cars on the track from wagons with scoops. Only in rare instances is this order excepted and in these cases the grain men must show that with sufficient help they can make speedy progress in loading the cars and getting them off to the markets.

"Man is as old as he feels, and Woman as old as she looks."

Dr. Greene's Nervura

Makes Health and Beauty for Women.

Remember! Not Age, but Disease, Weakness and Ill Health Make Women Look Old!

You cannot look your best unless you feel your best—that is, unless you feel well, strong, vigorous, with pure blood, strong and steady nerves.

If you have no appetite, poor digestion, are bilious and constipated, your skin will be dark, sallow, pimply, with unhealthy pallor.

If you are sleepless, nervous, irritable, despondent, with nerves all on edge, feel as if you could fly, and are startled at every sound,—these nervous troubles will certainly line your face with wrinkles like age, make you look haggard, hollow-eyed, take the lustre from your eyes and the elastic spring from your step

If you suffer from female troubles, the dragging pain, the aching head, the tired limbs, the utter weakness, prostration and misery will turn youth to old age unless cured at once.

Beauty Means Good Health, and Good Health Always Means Beauty for Women.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA BLOOD AND NERVE REMEDY

Always Makes Good Looks Because It Always Makes Good Health.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will make you look and feel young. It will restore your energies, vivacity and enjoyment of life. It will make rosy cheeks, bright eyes, and fine complexion. It will give a rounded form, the grace and elasticity of perfect womanhood, and the kind of youth that is not measured by years, and which ought to last till past fifty. It is a veritable fountain of youth for weak, fading and despondent women.

"Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured That Dark and Sallow Look."

Mrs. William Bartels, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says: "Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained in flesh, and am like a different person."

"My Face Broke Out with Pimples, but Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Me."

Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, of 286 Hartwell's Ave., Providence, R. I., says: "My face broke out with pimples, and I was almost giving up in despair when I got Dr. Greene's Nervura. Now I am well and strong, thanks to this wonderful remedy."

Take Dr. Greene's Nervura

For Your Health, Your Strength, Your Beauty.

Beauty of face, of form and ... belong ... good health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently ... use the wonderful restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura, and get advice from Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your health and beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

Sour Stomach?

Back up a sewer, and you poison the whole neighborhood. Clog up liver and bowels, and your stomach is full of undigested food, which sours and ferments, like garbage in a swill-barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, headache, furred tongue, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. CASCARETS quietly, positively stop fermentation in the stomach, make the liver lively, tone up the bowels, set the whole machinery going and keep it in order.

Don't hesitate! Take CASCARETS to-day and be saved from suffering!

"After I was induced to try CASCARETS, I will never be without them in the house. My liver was in a very bad shape, and my head ached and I had stomach trouble. Now, since taking Cascarets, I feel fine. My wife has also used them with beneficial results for sour stomach."

KLEMME - IOWA.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and also Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

The IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri to a stranger to feel the loss the old place very keenly; but was as nothing compared to the terness he felt at the bare though Uplands, his mother's home, g from them to the man who was t direst foe.

"Please God, it shall not be," said reverently, as he folded the le and put it in his pocket. "Mother s never lose the house she was born if I can help it. I'll work as man ne did before, I'll toil early and late, that money shall be found. Eustace Lindon must content him with Dynevor Manor; Uplands sh not be his!"

But, brave as was the resolve, H old did not make light of the diffic ties in his path. To raise such a s would have been a hard task even prosperous times; and now, when succession of bad harvests had spel something like ruin to many a lan owner, the difficulties of the atten were quadrupled.

CHAPTER VIII.

Helen Craven's engagement follow very quickly on the fete, and she d parted on a long visit to her fiance family. Perhaps it was her friend absence which made Kitty Dynevor r member the pretty girl at Mrs. Ta ner's and her desire to see more her. She missed Helen very muc There was a cloud on the Upland Kitty, who was still treated as "th little one," from whom all sorrow an anxiety must be kept as long as po sible, was not allowed to know th Eustace Lindon now held the mor gage on their home; but she could n help seeing that her mother was gra er than usual, and Harold seemed e tra troubled. She knew them bot too well to ask questions, and, decid ing a little company would be goo for them all, she strolled over to Eas hill-on-Sea about a fortnight after th fete, called at Woodlands, and aske to see Mrs. Tanner.

Kitty was impulsive in all things She detested the Wilmots, but she wa ready to believe Beryl that Mrs. Tan ner was not like her sister, and sh felt she could hardly hope to see muc of Miss Lendon if she persisted i ignoring her employer.

She took a great fancy to the slen der, sad-eyed widow, and made he request as frankly as possible.

"I lost my heart to your assistant a the fete, Mrs. Tanner. I asked he to come and see us; but perhaps sh is standing a little on ceremony, fo I have not seen her, so I came over to day to ask if you would let her wall back and have tea with us."

"I shall be very pleased," was th prompt reply. "Miss Lendon is dear little thing, and this is a dul home for her."

"Do you know," said Kitty, "when she came into the tent in her white frock, I thought Mrs. Grey had dis covered some wandering princess, and pressed her into the service."

"She is very pretty," said Agnes Tan ner, with a smile, "and, what is more she is very patient and sweet-tem pered. All my pupils like her, and my own little girls almost worship her I hope I shall be able to keep her i only the school gets on."

Kitty said a few kind words, hoping Woodlands would prosper, and then Mrs. Tanner sent for Beryl.

"Miss Dynevor wants you to go back with her to tea at Uplands," she said kindly. "I can spare you perfectly, and the change will do you good."

Left alone, the two girls looked at each other; and then Kitty Dynevor broke the silence impetuously.

Why wouldn't you come without my having to fetch you?"

A "beefsteak" was made in the town election notice of last week, in that the notice says, there is to be elected an assessor, who does not come up for re-election until next pring. Mr. Zook's term as assessor does not expire before the spring election of 1902.

The Times subscription list is growing steadily. Although we are making no great fuss over premium offers they can be given but the average new subscriber is taking it on it's merits, and this is what counts in newspaperdom.

Old Hancock is being made quite of lively of late by the convening of Educational meetings, Farmer's Institutes, and the likes of that. What better is there than the different ideas of men combined to enlighten the intellect craving public?

It is rather amusing to note how many of the "small fries" in the newspaper world are hovering near some especial candidate—probably expecting a check for good words and behavior.

The idea most predominent in the mind of the public in reference to pure politics is quite frequently blasted by a "scapegrace" getting into the circle.

There is great joy in the print shop every time the weather changes to warm, or some kind hearted soul helps the writer out by bringing in a half column of good sound, common sense news.

Court Notes.

In the case of Franz Simper vs Frank Simper the plaintiff dispensed with his attorneys and announced that he will attend to the matter himself.

The case of Fremont S. Gibson vs M. A. Hunt was tried resulting in a verdict of $105.50 for plaintiff. Mr. Gibson is a real estate dealer from Mason City and sues for a commission for furnishing a purchaser to whom the defendent exchanged his farm for a stock of merchandise. The defence was a denial of the services being performed, The case occupied most of Wednesday and Thursday.

Wm. Ayers vs. Jacob Nunwiler and W. G. Hallet was taken from the jury Friday after the introduction of the evidence for the plaintiff. Plaintiff sued to recover a hundred dollars for services performed in moving a school house in Madison township. Defendants were members of a school board and claimed only to have acted in that capacity and deny any personal liability.

The third jury case was somewhat interesting. It was that of Fritz Klocke against Mrs. Maggie Farman and the subject matter was a stock of goods and wet groceries sold in the Klondike country to the defendent to be used by her in running a lunch counter and saloon, she claiming that she paid the amount due about $1900 in gold dust before returning to the United States. The jury returned a verdict in her favor Monday. The transactions involved were all at Dawson City and Grand Forks in the British Northwest Terrftory. As a sequel an original notice has been served on Mr. Klocke by the defendant in this case claiming $5,000 damages for slander.—Garner Signal.

BEST SPRING MEDICINE

The Palm Given to Doctor Greene's Nervura

THE GRAND JURY, THE PEOPLE, HAVE SO DECIDED

Used by Hundreds of Thousands in Spring as a Blood Medicine

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is indeed "The World's Great Spring Medicine." It has come to be recognized by almost everybody as the best possible spring medicine to take, and hundreds of thousands of our people use it during the trying spring months, to tone up anew the relaxed nerves and re-invigorate and enrich the blood.

A spring medicine is a necessity if one wishes to keep in perfect health and vigor during the changes from winter to summer. This grand spring tonic, this perfect spring medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is exactly what the system needs at this season. It not only purifies, but makes rich, red blood; it not only strengthens and invigorates the nervous system, but re-energizes and revitalizes the nerves by feeding them with renewed nerve force and power. It is not only an aid to digestion, but it creates a regular, natural and healthy action of the bowels, liver, kidneys, which in the spring are always sluggish and inactive.

In fact, it is just what people need to make them well and keep them well during these months, so threatening to the health of all, and when it is considered that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is made entirely from pure, health-giving vegetable remedies, and that people give it more testimonials of cure than any other remedy on earth, no one can doubt that it is the very best spring remedy for everybody to use.

Mr. Gustave Leibach, of 337 First St., Jersey City, N. J., says:

"I was troubled with sick headaches, and could not sleep on account of the pains in my head. I was suffering night and day with dyspepsia, could not eat anything, my stomach would sour so. I had to starve myself to have any ease. I had to give up work at last. I was so nervous and miserable, and I was falling away in flesh so that my friends hardly knew me. I tried several remedies, but without avail. At last someone recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried one bottle and began to improve. I started in to eat all right; then I picked up my health; my headaches disappeared, and my weakness and sour stomach went away. I used three bottles and could sleep all night with ease; I used six bottles and felt like a new man. I can now do a hard day's work without any trouble, and I am as happy as a bird in spring. I was so miserable, always suffering, always in pain, but now I am like a new man."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy this spring, for it is the discovery and prescription of a well-known physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th St. New York City, who is responsible for its beneficial action and who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

During the last century the bible was translated into 250 languages, and it is now accessible to nine-tenths of the world's population.

Dr. Berson and Lieutenant Hildebrandt ascended recently to take observations simultaneously with other aeronauts in other parts of Europe. They were [illegible] on the Swedish coast in three hours and a quarter and came down straight in a village of the province of Smaaland in the interior of Sweden.

Was it faith or water? The statement hails from New York city: Christian Scientists claim dominion even over rubber plants. The Brush will trial has developed many startling and ludicrous incidents of this faith in Eddyism, but none more amusing than that related by Mrs. Findlay, who was on the witness stand recently. "Somebody noticed one day that the rubber plant in our house was drooping, said she. "A day or two later it revived. Some remark was made about it, and Miss Duncan (a Scientist) said: 'Yes, I have been treating it by Christian Science.' Meanwhile," continued Mrs. Findlay, "I had been giving the plant fresh water every day."

Des Moines, March 4, 1901.

In a recent letter Congressman Hull announces that he has succeeded in getting through both houses of congress an appropriation of $200,000 to be spent on the Des Moines army post this year. Capt. Hull also says the deeds to the Brisco-Denny tracts are now in the hands of the department of justice, and will soon be turned over to United States District Attorney Lewis Miles. As soon as the title to the ground has been proven to be perfect, the government representatives will be sent to Des Moines to survey the ground and begin work on the establishment of the post.

George A. Lincoln, of Cedar Rapids, has been appointed state fish and game commissioner by Governor L. M. Shaw. Mr. Lincoln succeeds George E. Delevan, of Estherville. Mr. Delevan has held the position for three full terms, seven years in all. Mr. Lincoln takes his position April 1. He was born in Massachusetts, emigrated to Wisconsin and came to Iowa in 1867, having served in a Wisconsin army organization during the last three years of the war. Mr. Lincoln was alderman, recorder and mayor of Cedar Rapids, closing his third term as mayor of Cedar Rapids in 1898. He was a member of the state central committee from the Fifth district and postmaster at Cedar Rapids from 1891 to 1895.

The board of control has received a report from Dr. F. M. Powell, superintendent of the institution for feeble-minded children at Glenwood, to the effect the danger from smallpox there was past. Recently a case of smallpox appeared there, the patient being one of the firemen at the institution. It was feared for a time an epidemic might result among the inmates of the school, but Dr. Powell writes the time has gone by for the disease to appear from contagion spread prior to the quarantining of the sick fireman. The board of control has been relieved of considerable anxiety concerning the spread of the disease by Dr. Powell's report.

The Nebraska state penitentiary authorities have asked Iowa to take care of some of their prisoners. Since the fire which destroyed the Nebraska penal institution a few days ago the prisoners have been under heavy guard in the prison yard, but this is regarded as exceedingly hazardous and the authorities are asking neighboring states to help them out of the difficulty until permanent quarters can again be provided.

General George A. Stone of Des Moines, for many years national bank examiner, and one of the most gallant of the commanders of Iowa troops in the civil war, is dangerously ill at his home, and his friends consider his recovery doubtful.

President Polk of the street railway company has employed J. Carss and a corps of engineers to survey several routes for the proposed interurban line from this city to Indianola. In an interview Mr. Polk stated that he was sanguine a route not more than seventeen miles in length, as against the twenty-one miles by railroad, would be found and a practical grade for the operation of a line run by electricity discovered. He predicted that interurban electric lines would within the next five years place Des Moines in close touch and easy connection with Winterset, Indianola, Prairie City, Newton, Creston, Knoxville, Ames, Boone, Adel and other points comprehended in a radius of fifty miles of the capital city.

The "social evil" and kindred sins in Des Moines will be fought at their own door. Evangelist Rev. William Bremner of Friends' church and J. E. Harden of the First M. E. church have undertaken the great task of reforming Whitechapel. From the Iowa Loan and Trust company they have rented the principal building at 333 on the east side of "Pelton" avenue. They are now negotiating with a Christian family, which will constantly occupy the second floor of the building. The two evangelists will not sleep in the building, but will conduct services in the large room on the first floor day and night. They ask no money or other aid from the public—simply the prayers of all Christian people, and they feel God will do the rest. They have been engaged in slum work for months and have consecrated themselves to the life they are now undertaking.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY QUARREL.

Much Discussion at Berlin of the Latest Phase of Chinese Agitation.

Berlin, March 4.—The latest phase of the Chinese agitation, the projected commercial treaties, including the extraordinarily hostile tone of the Russian inspired press on the subject, the Russo-American tariff dispute and the Anglo-German relations now hold public attention. A considerable portion of the German press strongly disapproves of Germany's protesting against the Russian annexation of Manchuria, claiming that Germany has no interests there and that she pledged to Russia not to interfere with anything Russia chooses to do there. The jingo and agrarian papers are particularly outspoken in this respect. The Deutche Tages Zeitung says that Count von Buelow's proceeding on the subject is illogical and stupid and amounts to hauling chestnuts out of the fire for Great Britain. The more sober portion of the press deplores this new trouble, which creates diplomatic antagonisms likely to split the whole entente of the powers.

PRESIDENT OPPOSES DELAY.

Desires That Negotiations Be Pressed and Bloodshed Averted.

Washington, March 1.—Special Commissioner Rockhill at Peking has been instructed to make it known to the foreign ministers that the president strongly deprecates any action that will tend to delay or check the present negotiations there and especially is he desirous that there shall be no further unnecessary bloodshed. It is confidently believed that our commissioner will be able to secure the support and co-operation of a sufficient number of the other ministers to insure a cessation of the punitive demands which it is believed by officials here, are not only unworthy of civilized nations, but threaten to drive the Chinese to desperation and thereby cause a renewal of armed resistance on their part.

No Let Up on Chinese.

London, March 2.—"The German, French and British commanders," says the Peking correspondent of the Morning Post, "have ordered a continuation of the preparations for the expedition into the interior in event of the court being recalcitrant."

When a load of coal is purchased, instead of it going to the buyer, it usually goes to the cellar.

Porte Is a Dead Beat.

Constantinople, Feb. 28—It is stated that the Porte not having paid the installments due on the cruiser for which a contract was signed recently with the Cramp Shipbuilding company of Philadelphia, the latter considers the contract void and repudiates all responsibility in the matter.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

EXPLOSION DESTROYS A HOUSE.

Three Boys Who Were Inside Badly Injured, One Perhaps Fatally.

Clinton, March 2.—George N. Dayton, Daniel Maltby and George Mitchell, three boys ranging in age from 13 to 16 years, entered an empty house and detecting the odor of gas, lighted a match to locate the leak. The result was a terrible explosion, all the boys being seriously burned. It is thought Maltby will die. The house was blown to pieces. The boys owe their escape from instant death to the fact they were in the basement when the explosion occurred. The roof was blown off and the walls of the house blown outward. The building was a story and a half frame. The explosion was heard for blocks and windows were broken in nearby houses and articles fell off the shelves. The shattered building caught fire soon after the explosion. The boys were carried from the burning structure. The fire department was soon on the scene and extinguished the blaze.

DEATH OF MAJOR CURTIS.

Well Known Atlantic Man Passes Away After Long Illness.

Atlantic, March 4.—Major H. G. Curtis died here Friday evening. Major Curtis was prominently identified with the establishment of a new government in Porto Rico, serving as a member of the Porto Rican commission appointed by President McKinley in February, 1899. The service of Major Curtis was more particularly directed to the legal phase of the question in which he made exhaustive researches.

While in Porto Rico, Mr. Curtis contracted malarial fever, which eventually undermined his health. After returning to Washington the commission concluded its work of formulating a code of laws and was discharged. Major Curtis returned home last June in hopes of regaining the strength he had lost. While he improved somewhat, it was not a lasting improvement and for the past month he had been failing.

CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION.

Two Men Are Under Arrest at Clinton—Young Boy the Victim.

Clinton, March 4.—Jake Putnam and Eugene Johnson are under arrest at DeWitt, this county, charged with the abduction of Willie McMahon, the 16-year-old son of John McMahon, a farmer who lives near DeWitt. The boy was attending school at DeWitt and was last seen with Putnam and Johnson February 14. On the day the boy disappeared he had considerable money in his possession and wore good clothes. When Putnam and Johnson returned to DeWitt a few days after the disappearance of the boy they were questioned and state that young McMahon had been employed by an ice dealer at Savanna, Ill., and was at work there. When he failed to return home, his sister went to Savanna to look after the boy, but could find no trace of him. On her return to DeWitt, Putnam and Johnson were arrested.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

M. O. Bakke, Whose Home Is Emmetsburg, Under Arrest.

Algona, March 4.—M. O. Bakke, giving his residence as Emmetsburg, was arrested by the sheriff on a charge of forgery. He had sold a mortgage and note at the Algona State bank for $400, and then called on George Call to sell another mortgage and note for $700. Call's suspicions were aroused and he telephoned the man whose name was signed asking him if the note and mortgage were all right. He answered that they were forgeries. Call then sent for the sheriff and completed the transaction. Immediately the sheriff took Bakke in charge. He had his preliminary examination and was held to the next term of court.

GOES TO CONSERVATIVE LIFE.

Southwestern Mutual Life Policy Holders Fully Reinsured.

Marshalltown, March 2.—At a meeting held here in which 4,900 out of 5,200 shareholders were represented either in proxy or person, the business of the Southwestern Mutual Life company was transferred to the Conservative Life of Los Angeles, Cal. The American Life of Des Moines was also a bidder, but withdrew its offer prior to the vote. The Conservative will leave on deposit with the auditor of Iowa $100,000 in securities and maintain a branch office in Iowa, which will probably be located at Marshalltown.

HAMMER FOUND GUILTY.

Convicted of Attempting to Murder Wheatcraft.

Newton, March 2.—Dr. M. R. Hammer was found guilty of the charge of assault with intent to commit murder. The jury was out less than an hour. His alleged victim was Oscar Wheatcraft, who was stabbed several times during a street fight. Judge Bishop of Des Moines heard the case.

In Hands of Money Sharks.

Sioux City, March 2.—Not quite sixteen years ago two brothers, Henry and Thomas Jenkins, who live in the southern part of the county, borrowed $300 through a money lender, E. J. Norcross of Onawa. Since then they declare they have paid more than $700 upon this original debt, yet today they are defendants in a suit arising out of this transaction, in which they are charged with still owing Norcross $578 and two years' interest, aggregating about $670. If the pleadings of the defendants may be believed, that first $300 has grown marvelously in the sixteen years to a grand sum of more than $1,300.

Farmers' Telephone Company.

Cedar Falls, March 4.—The farmers in Lake View have organized a telephone company because of the difficulty with the Bell company. Several of the farmers will have 'phones in their residences. No charge will be made to the public for the use of the exchange, which will be located at Lake View. Connection will be made with Odebolt, Sac City, Early and Wall Lake. Charles Irwin has been elected president and B. Broughton secretary.

Sues Her Wealthy Husband.

Charles City, March 2.—Mrs. Carrie M. Palmer of this city has sued her husband for separate maintenance. The petition alleges unkindness and the fact that her husband ordered her not to return to his home in Chicago. Palmer is president of the Palmer Steel and Iron company of Chicago and worth $200,000. The proceedings are brought in Chicago.

Cedar Rapids Gets a Carnegie Library.

Cedar Rapids, March 5.—Andrew Carnegie has placed this city on his list for library donations and has told an Iowan that he will give the city $50,000 under the usual conditions these donations have been made.

Charged with Murder.

Traer, March 1.—Mrs. Frances Vpitil of Chelsea, this county, has been indicted by the grand jury for murder. Two weeks ago her husband died under mysterious circumstances. Some of the neighbors made an investigation and laid the matter before the grand jury with the above result. The case against the woman appears to be a strong one. William Haag and William Joens were also indicted. They are charged with an attempt to wreck a train on the Northwestern railroad.

An Irish politician says that half the lies told about him are not true.

BIG ELECTRIC RAILROAD.

One Is Planned to Connect Charles City With Des Moines.

Des Moines, March 1—The new electric railroad for which a company with $150,000 capital was organized a few days ago in Charles City, seems to be a very ambitious enterprise. The organization as it is being perfected by S. L. Kern of Charles City and George W. Dawson of Waterloo is only a small part of the plans the company has under consideration.

The new company expects to come into Des Moines with its electric line, and the company, when fully organized, will have a backing that will render it easy to float the bonds to carry the gigantic deal to completion. Messrs. Kern and Dawson, the promoters of the scheme, claim to have the best of assistance. They are moderately wealthy men themselves and have promoted a number of big deals that have been paying investments and have the confidence of capitalists. They number in their present backing a considerable amount of capital in Des Moines.

The proposed route of the new road is in jumps of ten to twenty miles from Charles City to Greene, then south through Allison, Parkersburg, Grundy Center, Conrad, Marshalltown, Van Cleve or Laurel, and then to Newton, where the Charles City line will meet that being proposed by the Cleveland syndicate in which large number of people are interest None of the cities named have no and south lines except Marshallto and the scheme is one of the m plausible ever brought out in the v of an electric line. The plan is sim the operation of a series of l railways. Between each of the to mentioned there are a number of land towns that would welcome railroad and will pay handsomely get it.

INDIANS AT WASHINGTON.

Go to Complain of the Conditions at the Tama Reservation.

Grinnell, March 4.—The government is having trouble with the Sac and Fox Indians, the remnant of the tribe of the famous Black Hawk, now located on the Tama reservation. The tribe has formulated its grievances in the form of a protest, which a committee of six tribal leaders will take to Washington. The committee has gone to Washington. The tribal laws and customs do not conform with the moral standard of the agent who charged them with polygamy. They claim that the agent forcibly interferes with the family relations resulting from their marriages and they demand exemption from such interference.

Accused of Extortion.

Fort Dodge, Feb. 28.—B. F. Woods of Calhoun county has been lodged in jail on the charge of attempted extortion. It is claimed by the prosecuting druggist that Woods came to him for the purpose of getting vengeance for selling liquor to his brother, and then suggested hush money.

County Is Responsible.

Oskaloosa, Feb. 28.—The district court has decided that the levying of a tax on one township to pay smallpox expenses of the township is illegal and that the county as a whole is liable.

Pardoned by Governor Shaw.

Clinton, March 2.—Joseph Cuddy, who was sentenced to the penitentiary at Anamosa, October 15, 1897, for a period of seven and a half years, has been pardoned by Governor Shaw and has arrived at his home here. Cuddy was convicted for forgery, his work being the cleverest ever executed in this section. His operations covered a period of four years and involved several thousands of dollars worth of property. In order to explain where he received his money, Cuddy had the story circulated that he had fallen heir to a large sum of money.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Senate.—The senate passed the army appropriation bill at 12:54 o'clock, containing the propositions of the republican majority for the temporary government of the Philippines and for the future relations between the United States and Cuba. Many amendments were offered to both propositions, but were voted down. The original Spooner amendment was amended regarding franchises as proposed by Hoar, the latter proposition having been accepted by the majority yesterday.

House.—The house had a busy day of routine, agreeing to the conference reports on the fortifications, District of Columbia and the military academy bills, the last named containing the anti-hazing legislation. The naval appropriation bill was sent back to conference, after the defeat of a motion to concur in the senate's provision of three more sub-marine torpedo boats. The Louisiana Purchase exposition bill, which has been in a precarious parliamentary state, was finally sent to conference for an adjustment of difference.

VETERANS DECLINE TO PARADE.

Will Not Participate in the Inauguration Ceremonies.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Veteran organizations of the civil and Spanish wars have officially declined to participate in the inaugural parade on March 4. The decision affects organizations in the Grand Army of the Republic, the Union Veterans' Union and the Spanish War veterans. The dissatisfaction of the veterans with the place assigned them in the parade is responsible for the action. It was their wish to act as the personal escort of the president. Grand Marshal Greene, on the contrary, assigned them to a position in the line ahead of the civic organizations and following the National Guard. General Daniel Sickles today notified General Greene that the veterans had declined to participate in the parade, and he tendered his resignation as marshal of the veteran division.

Government Prisoner Pardoned.

Council Bluffs, March 4.—Russ Whittlesey, a government prisoner at Anamosa, convicted in 1898 for embezzlement here of government funds, has been pardoned by President McKinley, after serving three years of his four year sentence. He will be free after midnight of March 23rd.

The Penalty for Hazing.

Washington, Feb. 27—The conferees of the senate and house have reached an agreement on the hazing amendment to the military academy appropriation bill. Yielding to the demands of the senate, they have eliminated the provision inserted by the first conference at the instance of the Dick investigation committee and the house conferees have agreed to accept the amendment as originally made by the senate with modifications and one addition. The modification limits the time during which offenders may be kept out of the army or navy to two years.

"Mrs. Pinkham Saved me from an Operation."

Hospitals in our great cities are sad places to visit.

Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case?

Because they have neglected themselves.

Every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back. All of these things are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb.

Do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an examination and possible operation. Build up the female system, cure the derangements which have signified themselves by danger signals, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from the hospital. Read the letter here published with the full consent of the writer, and see how she escaped the knife by a faithful reliance on Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the consistent treatment of her medicines.

Mrs. Knapp tells of her Great Gratitude.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have received much benefit from using your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. After my child was born, blood poison set in, which left me with granulated inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I had suffered from suppressed and painful menstruation from a girl. The doctors told me the ovaries would have to be removed. I took treatment two years to escape an operation, but still remained in miserable health in both body and mind, expecting to part with my reason with each coming month. After using one bottle of the Compound, I became entirely rid of the trouble in my head. I continued to use your remedies until cured.

"The last nine months have been passed in perfect good health. This, I know, I owe entirely to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My gratitude is great indeed to the one to whom so many women owe their health and happiness."—MRS. F. M. KNAPP, 1528 Kinnickinnic Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

DEATH

begins in the bowels. It's the unclean places that breed infectious epidemics, and it's the unclean body—unclean inside—that "catches" the disease. A person whose stomach and bowels are kept clean and whose liver is lively, and blood pure, is safe against yellow fever, or any other of the dreadful diseases that desolate our beautiful land. Some of the cleanest people outside are filthiest inside, and they are the ones who not only "catch" the infections, but endanger the lives of all their friends and relatives. There's only one certain way of keeping clean inside so as to prevent disease and that is to take CASCARETS. Perfect disinfectant and bowel strengtheners. All diseases are

AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Mrs. Doty, of Highland, Iowa, Restored to Health—A Miraculous Case—Her Husband Is Cured of Bright's Disease by Same Means.

Highland, Ia., March 4.—(Special.)—Friends of Mrs. W. H. Doty are very much pleased to notice the wonderful improvement in her condition. For eighteen years she has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and the torture she has endured during this time is past all description. Mrs. Doty tells the following story:

"I have suffered for the past eighteen years with Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism. I have tried doctors, patent medicines, plasters, liniments, electric treatments, and nothing did me any good. I had nearly lost all faith in anything, when I sent for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I said to my husband I expected that it was some more money thrown away, but when I had taken them a week I could see that they were helping me. The lameness I had suffered with for so long is nearly all gone. It is not a quarter as bad as it was. For years I had to wear a warm bandage around my forehead to prevent the pain. Since using the Pills I have been able to remove this altogether.

"I cannot find words to express my heartfelt thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills for their wonderful cure of my case. My husband has suffered from Kidney Trouble for years. Last spring a doctor said he had Bright's Disease, and treated him, but he received no benefit, and he kept growing thinner and weaker all the time. When I got Dodd's Kidney Pills he commenced taking four a day. He has taken them three months and is nearly well. His strength is increased, and the improvement in his case is almost miraculous. Dodd's Kidney Pills have certainly been a God send to us."

It is just cases like those of Mr. and Mrs. Doty that have made Dodd's Kidney Pills so very popular in Iowa.

They are 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"I have to thank you for a great kindness, Mr. Dynevor," she said simply. "You put no name to your note, so I never knew till now to whom I was indebted."

"It was a very trifling service. When I read the advertisement it flashed upon my mind you answered the description of the missing girl."

"Yes, I was the girl mentioned. It is nearly three months ago, and I have heard nothing. Sometimes I feel almost safe; then something depresses me, and I go through all my terrors again."

"You mustn't," he said gently; "you will make yourself ill if you fret over contingencies. Believe me, Easthill-on-Sea is as safe a hiding place as you can find. It is hardly known beyond its own immediate neighborhood."

The tea room was deserted—Harold established Beryl in a remote corner, and fetched refreshments for her from the buffet. The grey eyes sought his face half pleadingly:

"I ought not to trouble you," she said wistfully; "but I should like to tell you just this: I have not done anything dreadful—I mean, I am not flying from justice."

Harold laughed outright; he really could not help it.

"Forgive me," he said penitently: "but no one could possibly think you were. You do not look like an escaped criminal, Miss Lendon."

"My father has married again," she said frankly, "and I could not stay to see his wife in my mother's place, so I ran away. I don't think it was wrong."

"But he must miss you very much."

"Oh, no," she said naively, "he never cared for me. He always said I was a nuisance to him, and he would want me less than ever now he has his new wife."

"I hope you are fairly comfortable?" he said anxiously. "I have never met Mrs. Tanner; but I own to a great dislike of her friend, Mrs. Wilmot."

"Mrs. Wilmot is terrible; but Mrs. Tanner is not in the least like her. She is very sad and gentle."

"And you mean to stay with her?"

"Yes; if only the school gets on enough for her to afford to keep me."

"Miss Lendon," said Harold, when she rose to return to her post, "I need not tell you your secret is safe with me; but you are very young to be so much alone in the world. Will you make me just this one promise? That if troubles arise so that you need a friend, you will let me do my best to help you."

She was his enemy's daughter. Beryl felt if he knew she was the child of the pair who had wronged him he would have no more to do with her; but she only said simply she should never forget Mr. Dynevor's kindness.

It was a brilliant function, and an unqualified success. When at last the stalls were empty, and the flock of pleasure-seekers had gone home, Mrs. Craven carried off the busy money-makers to an informal supper at the Manor. Mrs. Dynevor and her son joined the party, and Beryl found herself seated between Kitty and her brother.

"Will you come and see me, Miss Lendon?" asked the daughter of the Dynevors kindly. "Mother will be very pleased to welcome you. I suppose, in strict etiquette I ought to call at Woodlands; but I might come in school hours, or make some other dreadful mistake, so it will be much nicer if you come to Uplands."

Beryl thanked her; but said something about her duties and Mrs. Tanner.

"Oh, she must spare you sometimes. I seem to know you quite well after all these hours spent together, and we can't go back to being strangers."

Mrs. Grey, her husband, and Beryl drove home in the shabby pony carriage; Mrs. Dynevor and her children walked the half-mile between the Manor and Uplands in the silvery moonlight.

"It was a huge success," said Kitty. "I really quite enjoyed myself, and we made a lot of money."

"And you worked like Trojans," said her brother; "everything went off famously."

"Mother dear," said Kitty anxiously, "are you tired?"

"Not very. You mustn't think me dull, Kitty; but somehow I never can enjoy myself at the Manor. I seem to see the good old days, when your uncle and aunt were alive and we visited there. Kind and hospitable as the Cravens are, it is not the same thing."

"Of course not, mother," said Harold; "but they are far pleasanter neighbors than the real owner of the soil."

"I hope he will not come here," breathed Mrs. Dynevor anxiously. "Harold, you must have been eight or nine when your Aunt Nina left the Manor; do you remember her at all?"

"Only that she was very pretty and gentle, and seemed more like a playfellow than an aunt; but why do you ask, mother?"

"Then you won't see the resemblance," said Mrs. Dynevor, in a disappointed tone; "but when I first looked at that girl who came with Mrs. Grey I thought the years had turned back, and I saw Nina as she was when your uncle brought her home a bride. Miss Lendon's face is graver and sadder, but the likeness is wonderful."

"Chance resemblances are puzzling things," said Kitty. "I have asked Miss Lendon to come and see us, mother—you don't mind, do you?"

"I shall be glad for her to come, Kitty, she seems a charming girl. And, my dear, if Harold were not the best of brothers, you might be earning your bread."

"I shouldn't be half as brave and contented over it as she is," said Kitty frankly.

Arrived at the Uplands, mother and daughter went to bed, for it was past their usual hour. Harold turned into his own den to smoke one pipe before retiring. As he lighted the gas his eye fell on a letter with the Marton postmark, addressed in the well-known had of Mr. Proctor.

"What can he want to write about? I saw him yesterday."

But the lawyer had gone out of his way to do Harold a kindness. He would not even trust one of his clerks to write the letter of warning which he sent to his old friend's son. The letter was marked "private"—a needless precaution, for Harold Dynevor would be sure to keep its contents from his mother and Kitty until the last possible moment.

Dear Dynevor: I have bad news for you. It has reached me from a true source that Eustace Lendon intends to give you three months notice of foreclosure at Micaelmas. My informant believes that he is keeping his intention dark, so that it may take you by surprise, in the hope that the three months will be all too short for you to get the needed capital. I need not assure you of my most earnest sympathy. Still, the amount, though large, is not preposterous, and it ought to be possible to arrange things. Anyhow, by this letter you have five months to raise the money instead of three.

Yours sincerely,
W. Proctor.

Harold Dynevor put his head on his hands and fairly groaned. He had been old enough when Dynevor Manor passed to a stranger to feel the loss of the old place very keenly; but that was as nothing compared to the bitterness he felt at the bare thought of Uplands, his mother's home, going from them to the man who was their direst foe.

"Please God, it shall not be," he said reverently, as he folded the letter and put it in his pocket. "Mother shall never lose the house she was born in if I can help it. I'll work as man never did before, I'll toil early and late, but that money shall be found. And Eustace Lindon must content himself with Dynevor Manor; Uplands shall not be his!"

But, brave as was the resolve, Harold did not make light of the difficulties in his path. To raise such a sum would have been a hard task even in prosperous times; and now, when a succession of bad harvests had spelled something like ruin to many a landowner, the difficulties of the attempt were quadrupled.

CHAPTER VIII.

Helen Craven's engagement followed very quickly on the fete, and she departed on a long visit to her fiance's family. Perhaps it was her friends' absence which made Kitty Dynevor remember the pretty girl at Mrs. Tanner's and her desire to see more of her. She missed Helen very much. There was a cloud on the Uplands. Kitty, who was still treated as "the little one," from whom all sorrow and anxiety must be kept as long as possible, was not allowed to know that Eustace Lindon now held the mortgage on their home; but she could not help seeing that her mother was graver than usual, and Harold seemed extra troubled. She knew them both too well to ask questions, and, deciding a little company would be good for them all, she strolled over to East hill-on-Sea about a fortnight after the fete, called at Woodlands, and asked to see Mrs. Tanner.

Kitty was impulsive in all things. She detested the Wilmots, but she was ready to believe Beryl that Mrs. Tanner was not like her sister, and she felt she could hardly hope to see much of Miss Lendon if she persisted in ignoring her employer.

She took a great fancy to the slender, sad-eyed widow, and made her request as frankly as possible.

"I lost my heart to your assistant at the fete, Mrs. Tanner. I asked her to come and see us; but perhaps she is standing a little on ceremony, for I have not seen her, so I came over today to ask if you would let her walk back and have tea with us."

"I shall be very pleased," was the prompt reply. "Miss Lendon is a dear little thing, and this is a dull home for her."

"Do you know," said Kitty, "when she came into the tent in her white frock, I thought Mrs. Grey had discovered some wandering princess, and pressed her into the service."

"She is very pretty," said Agnes Tanner, with a smile, "and, what is more, she is very patient and sweet-tempered. All my pupils like her, and my own little girls almost worship her. I hope I shall be able to keep her if only the school gets on."

Kitty said a few kind words, hoping Woodlands would prosper, and then Mrs. Tanner sent for Beryl.

"Miss Dynevor wants you to go back with her to tea at Uplands," she said kindly. "I can spare you perfectly, and the change will do you good."

Why wouldn't you come without my having to fetch you?"

Beryl hesitated.

"I don't think I ought to come," she said slowly. "You are one of the county, Miss Dynevor, and I am only a little school teacher."

"I am not a snob!" said Kitty, quite angrily. "I know a lady when I see one, and I don't value my friends for their position or their purse. Now will you come?"

Five minutes later they were walking back to Uplands together, and Beryl was telling Kitty how long and dreary she thought the way the first night of her arrival.

"I don't wonder," returned Miss Dynevor. "A drearier place to arrive at after a long journey I can't imagine. I can't think why people tried to turn that hamlet into a watering place. Easthill itself is delightful."

"You have lived there a long time, haven't you?"

"I was born at Uplands. Harold, my brother, was born at the Manor. There had been something wrong with the Uplands drains, and mother went to the Manor for two months. The old gossips used to declare it meant he would inherit the property, that the master of Dynevor was always born at the Manor. They were quite wrong, however. But I forgot—perhaps you don't know our story?"

"Mrs. Grey told it to me," said Beryl frankly. "I think it is one of the saddest I ever heard. I wonder you don't hate Mr. Lindon."

"Mother and Harold are too good to really hate any one. I am afraid when things go wrong at home, and they look more bothered than usual, my feelings towards Mr. Lindon are rather bitter."

"I suppose you don't remember his wife?"

"Oh, no; I was not born when she left England. Of course it was really her fault the place passed away from us; but I have always felt sorry for her."

"I wonder why?" remarked Beryl, trying to keep the eagerness out of her voice.

"A very little thing. There was a woman in the village here Aunt Nina took with her as maid. When they got abroad I think she was promoted to be a kind of humble companion. She came back about twelve months before Aunt Nina died, and she lived with us for a few years. She was not given to talking; but now and again she'd let out things. She was my nurse, and I was just the age of Beryl Lindon, Aunt Nina's second child. Somehow she'd say things now and then which made me feel Mr. Lindon ill-treated his wife. She never said anything outright—never enough for me to repeat it to mother; but though I was only a little thing—she left before I was ten years old—she said enough to make me sure my aunt was unhappy."

They were at Uplands now. Beryl had no time to ask the nurse's name, or if she were still living at Easthill. Mrs. Dynevor stood on the veranda waiting to welcome the stranger, and the conversation was changed.

TO LEARN TRADES.

Training School to Make Crippled Pupils Self-Supporting.

With the new year the pupils of the public school for crippled children, conducted by Mrs. Emma F. Haskell in Illinois hall, will begin a novel undertaking, says the Chicago News. A training school will be established with the hope that some of the pupils may be made self-supporting. They appear almost helpless so far as useful work is concerned, but Mrs. Haskell says they are not. Many of them can work with their hands, and are anxious to learn. The boy who has lost both legs has an ambition to become a carpenter. This appears rather impossible, and his ambitions will be turned in the direction of wood carving. The girls will be taught needlework and similar occupations. They are almost all too helpless to be taught domestic science. Supt. Cooley will make a recommendation to the board of education at its next meeting that materials and equipment for the school is provided. Mrs. Haskell will have charge of the classes, leaving the general work of instruction to her assistants. Truant officers of the board of education are to make a canvass of the city for the purpose of ascertaining the number of crippled and maimed children who would be able to attend school if they were furnished with transportation. Secretary Larson was refused his pay yesterday by the board of education. President Harris, who blamed City Controller Kerfoot for not honoring Mr. Larson's signature a week ago, refused yesterday to issue a voucher for his salary in the new position. Mr. Larson asked for a voucher for his salary at the rate of $4,000 a year for the part of December he served in the office. President Harris said he had been paid his former salary of $150 a month, and could not be paid the salary of secretary until the board voted it. A statement was furnished President Harris by Auditor Custer yesterday that shows that the revenue of the board of education for educational purposes will be $235,853 less than the appropriations called for.

TRICK OF VOICE.

How One Lawyer Keeps the Judge From Sleeping.

There is said to be a lawyer in Philadelphia who possesses a trick of the voice to which a certain measure of his success in United States Supreme court practice is due. The trick consists in waking a judge. Whether it is a common practice for the high dignitaries of the federal supreme bench to indulge in a nap in the course of a long and tedious argument, such happenings are not unknown, and it is well for an able logician of the bar to be prepared for it. The trick of waking a sleepy judge would seem to be something in the nature of slamming a law book under his nose or connecting his personality with the current of an electric battery. But the trick is explained as purely a matter of sound involved in the skillful control of the voice. It is said that a barrister practiced in the art and rhetoric of addressing the bench can gather all the waves of sound from his throat into a focus and deposit it in the orifice of the judge's ear with the general effect of a bomb. The trick, however it is accomplished, is said to have been worked repeatedly with success on the late Judge McKennan, whose habit of going to sleep on the bench was once a notorious subject of comment in the litigation over the Berliner telephone patents. This queer trick of the voice while it is said to be the peculiar property of one celebrated lawyer, is probably attempted often with varying success by others.—Philadelphia Record.

COLD INDEED.

Some of the Odd Tricks of Liquid Air

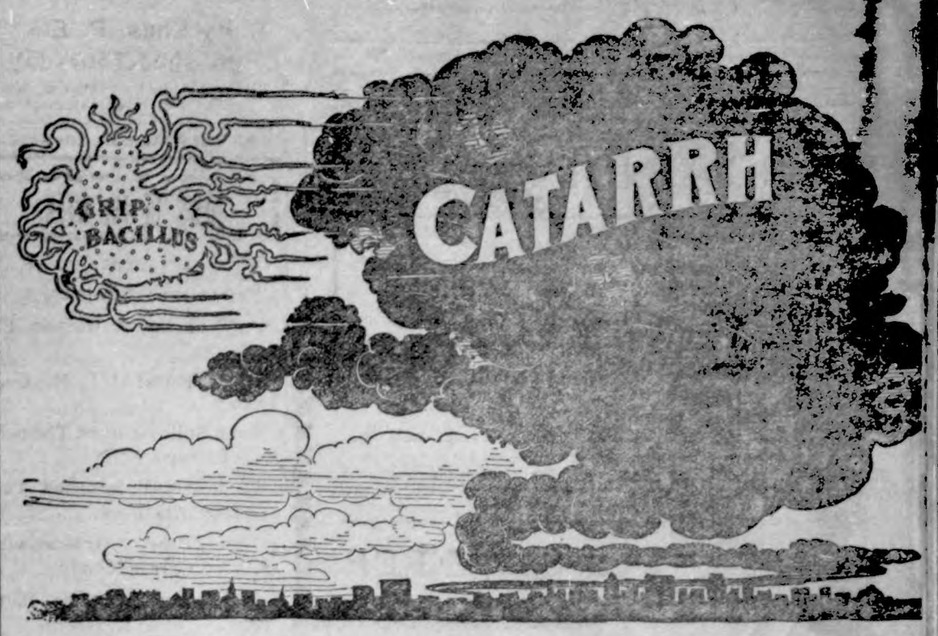
Liquid air is, perhaps, the coldest thing in the world. It is so sold that a cake of ice is like a fierce fire as compared with it, for a kettle of liquid air placed on a cake of ice will boil just as water boils over a hot fire. It freezes mercury so hard that one can drive nails in it. The story is told that Mr. Charles E. Tripler, the experimenter in liquid air, recently took a quart can of the remarkable substance with him on a visit to a friend. On the way he stopped in a restaurant to eat a beefsteak. The waiter brought in a hot broiled steak and placed it in front of Mr. Tripler. As soon as the waiter's back was turned Mr. Tripler hastily opened the can and exposed the meat to the liquid air. Instantly the steak was frozen hard as a rock. When the waiter came back his customer complained that the steak was frozen. So the waiter called the head waiter, and the head waiter blamed it all on the cook and the cook was at a loss to explain, and the result was that the frozen steak was taken back into the kitchen as a mysterious curiosity. A new steak was broiled for Mr. Tripler, and this one he ate with much relish

More Than Just Enough.

Some months before his death, Senator Cushman K. Davis wrote the following words to a young friend: "I believe in superfluous knowledge. I have little faith in the thing called genius. I think any young man can attain success, and great success, by good, hard, studious labor; not intermittent labor, but conscientious, constant effort. The men who have achieved success are the men who have worked, read and thought more than was absolutely necessary; who have not been content with knowledge sufficient for present need, but who have sought additional knowledge and stored it away for the emergency reserve. It is superfluous labor that equips a man for everything that counts in life."

The Rev. Dr. William Webster Belden of West Hartford, Conn., has offered $1,000 toward the proposed library building to be erected by the North Webster Memorial Library association.

AFTER THE GRIP COMES CATARRH



LIKE A TERRIBLE CYCLONE grip bacillus has passed over our country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, leaving behind it a dark cloud of anguish and despair.

Catarrh follows grip as effect follows cause.

A multitude of catarrh victims will spring up in the trail of the awful epidemic of grip that has just passed over our fair country.

The hope to these people is Peruna. Most people know this already.

Everyone who has had the least touch of grip, should not fail to take a course of treatment with Peruna.

Peruna eradicates every vestige of the disease and leaves the system in a normal condition.

Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"After giving Peruna a fair trial I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with coughs, colds, la grippe and all catarrhal complaints."—J. B. Crowley.

Hon. George H. White, Congressman from North Carolina, writes:

"I am more than satisfied with Peruna, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family, and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."—George H. White.

Hon. J. P. Megrew, Superintendent U. S. Capital Police Force, of Washington, D. C., says:

"Having suffered from the grip, I was advised by a friend to use your Peruna. I also used it for my catarrh, and I can now cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who is suffering from the grip and catarrh."—J. P. Megrew.

Miss Anna Russell, Past Worthy Counselor, Loyal Mystic Legion, 233 Endicott Bldg., St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"For years I have unfortunately found my system in a peculiarly receptive condition for catarrh when I was exposed in any way to inclement weather. At those times I would be severely afflicted with la grippe and its unpleasant consequences.

"Now for the past year and a half I have used Peruna in such cases and have found that it not only cures me quickly, but it also cleanses my blood and renders me less liable to catch cold. It is the finest preventative of colds that I know of and a very superior tonic."—Anna Russell.

Miss Alice Dressler, 1313 North ant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., wr

"Last spring I suffered from grippe and was partially cured, the bad after-effects remained thr the summer, and somehow I did get strong as I was before. In the I caught a cold after getting my wet and attending a lecture in a hall, and I suffered a relapse. An pleasant catarrh of the head throat followed, and as I was weak condition physically previou this, it took but little to break down completely.

"One of my college friends who visiting me, asked me to try Pe and I did so and found it all and than I had expected. It not only c me of the catarrh, but restored m perfect health, built up the entire tem, and brought a happy feelin buoyancy which I had not know years."—Miss Alice Dressler.

WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS.

As a sufferer for thirty years from the worst form of Psoriasis, finally cured by Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I wish to tell you my experience, that others may benefit by it. I was so grievously afflicted that the matter that exuded from my pores after the scales had peeled off, would cause my underclothing to actually gum to my body. After remaining in one position, sitting or lying down, for an hour or two, the flesh on my elbows and knees would split, so thick and hard would the crusty scales become. The humiliation I experienced, to say nothing of physical agony, was something frightful. The detached scales would fairly rain from my coat sleeves. I have read none of your testimonials that appear to represent a case so bad as mine. But as to the cure. I commenced bathing in hot Cuticura Soap suds night and morning, applied the Cuticura Ointment, and then wrapped myself in a sheet. In two weeks my skin was almost blood red in color, but smooth and without scales. Patches of natural colored skin began to appear, and in less than a month I was cured. I am now passed forty years of age and have skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Hoping that others may benefit by my experience, and regretting that sensitiveness forbids me from disclosing my name,

I am yours gratefully,
J. H. M., Boston, Mass., Sept. 30, 1900.

The Chicago Inter Ocean and The KLEMME TIMES one year for $1.40. Today is the day we give papers away!

On Feb. 22nd, in the eve, the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Union Orris called a surprise on them. There were present 52, young and old. We were there and know that all enjoyed themselves. The way those young folks played and sang made one wish the years did not roll by so fast, the ladies served supper at twelve which by the way was excellant. The old folks ate and dutifully went home at two, but the young folks stayed until the "we sma" hours. We heard Mr. Orris remark, since, that he had heard the roosters crow three times and had began to think of breakfast when came floating through the air, "we wont go home till morning" and may be we wont go then. He says he just groaned and went to sleep. We are sorry Mr. and Mrs Orris are going away for our good times are over. Last but not least they presented them with a handsome couch as a token of their sincere respect. May success and happiness follow them to their new home is the wishes of all their friends and neighbors.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof, Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the price of the four one year only $1.50. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throghout the West and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and and Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper add the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

The "social evil" and kindred sins in Des Moines will be fought at their own door. Evangelist Rev. William Bremner of Friends' church and J. E. Harden of the First M. E. church have undertaken the great task of reforming Whitechapel. From the Iowa Loan and Trust company they have rented the principal building at 333 on the east side of "Pelton" avenue. They are now negotiating with a Christian family, which will constantly occupy the second floor of the building. The two evangelists will not sleep in the building, but will conduct services in the large room on the first floor day and night. They ask no money or other aid from the public—simply the prayers of all Christian people, and they feel God will do the rest. They have been engaged in slum work for months and have consecrated themselves to the life they are now undertaking.

At the election of the Independepent School District, held on Monday Mar 11. H. E. Peitzke was elected as director for the one year term, H. W. Coming down to county politics Prof A. M. Deyoe of the Britt school would make an ideal county superintendent,—Hancock County Signal.

We are not advised as to the desires or plans of Prof. Deyoe, and do not know if he will be a candidate or not. The statement of the Signal "that Prof, Deyoe would made an ideal superintendent" is very pertinent, and the county would be truly fortunate if the proffessor could be prevailed upon to become a candidate. As an educator Mr. Deyoe has no equal in the county and stands among the best educators of the state. With such a man in the superintendent's office our schools would reach a much higher standard of usefulness. His long experience would be of much value to the poeple of the county and he should be prevailed upon to become a candidate and should he do so would probably have little or no opposition.—Britt News.

The Germantown center school is putting on considerable airy bigness of late. At the recent school election a petition was circulated signed and voted upon asking the township to make that school a graded institution The voters sanctioned it and now Germantown will begin to to turn out modern Henry Clays and Patrick Henries to the tune of several each year.

Our long gone friend and townsman Noah Shaw, dropped in Wednesday and rather happily surprised his friends here, He has been in tue State of "Ken tuck" for the past three months visiting old folks and the old homestead, leaving here December 11th. He reports a very pleasant and enjoyable trip but says Kentucky isn't what it used to be; the people have changed so in their mode of living and entertainment, the old friends mostly gone and new people having taken their place. He looks hale and heary and is welcomed home to Klemme.

An association of about 20 members has been organized to be known as The———Chorus. The purpose of this organization is to futher advance it's members along musical lines, both vocal and instrumental. A constitution has been drawn up to provide the admittance of all persons with a musical ability. Mr. Emil Bettin has been chosen to act in the capacity of President, and Wm. Koerner as musical director. The expectations of the association is to give to the pubic in the near future something quite uncommon and of a classical character in the musical line.

The people caucus as called for Monday night was duly held.

Great excitement and enthusiasm prevailed throughout the routine of work of nominating officers for the coming year. Mr. John Baumgartner was nominated on the peoples ticket for Mayor, Fred Henschen as Treasurer, E. P. Dow as clerk, and Fred Ridder and G. W. Kluckhohn as councilman. When the caucus was opened things were kind of dry but they soon dampened to a degree where the young men of the town asserted their right and endeavored to show that there were enough young 'uns to rule the roost. More caucuses have been held since and good men put up and judging from a non-interested stand-point it will be a war to the teeth between the powers to be and those already in power.

A Gold and Silver Battery.

The gackwar of Baroda, an Indian prince, has a battery of artillery consisting of gold and silver guns. There are four guns, two of gold and two of silver. The gold guns were made in 1874 by an artisan of Lakha, who worked on them for five years. They weigh 400 pounds each, and, except for the steel lining, are of solid gold. They are mounted on gun carriages of carved wood overlaid with silver.

The elephant and hundreds of other animals of different orders belong to the great five-toed tribe.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, March 10, 1901.

The secretary of the state board of health has learned of a statement made recently by Dr. G. J. Ross of Sioux City at the meeting of the Sioux City Medical society to the effect that there was not a case of smallpox in the state and that what is pronounced smallpox in Sioux City, at least, is the Cuban measles or some undefined disease brought from Cuba by the soldiers. Dr. Ross in the course of his talk said that if the disease now so prevalent in the state were actually smallpox there would be some deaths resulting from it, or at any rate there would be at least one virulent case. In reply to this the secretary of the state board of health takes occasion to tender Dr. Ross some information. A number of deaths resulting from smallpox have been reported to the board since January 1 and this does not actually present the number that have occurred because of the failure of many physicians to report them. As to virulent cases there have been a large number in many parts of the state. It was stated by Dr. Ross, according to the report received, that he had examined the nine cases of alleged smallpox in Sioux City and found none of them to be real smallpox. He makes the somewhat unique suggestion that if the disease actually is smallpox it would be the part of wisdom to turn all its victims loose in order that the entire state may get it while it is reigning in so mild a form. Circulars are now being sent out from the board of health headquarters in which strong criticism of physicians is made because of failure to recognize smallpox in its early stages and so prevent the spread of the disease.

State Superintendent Barrett has handed down a decision in an appeal case, holding that the question of how far a child should travel in order to reach the public schools has not been determined by the laws of the state and ruling that one and seven-eighths miles is not an unreasonable length. The case was appealed from the school township of Marion, in Plymouth county, and arose out of the refusal of the board of directors to grant a petition for the establishment of a new sub-district. The county superintendent affirmed the action of the board, whereupon it was appealed to the state superintendent and again affirmed. It was contended by the petitioners that their children did not have proper school facilities because of the great distance they had to travel. The question of maximum distance is one to be determined by the board and to be governed by conditions, and as there are good roads in this case a distance of one and seven-eighth miles is said to be not too great.

Adjutant General Byers has returned from Washington, where he attended the inaugural ceremonies. While in Washington he practically concluded arrangements for obtaining a battery of light artillery for Iowa. He expected to arrange for equipping the guard with magazine rifles and for the payment of the claims due Iowa on account of the Spanish-American war expenditures. On account of the confusion incident to the inauguration, he did not look after the rifles or the claims and will make a trip to Washington later on for this purpose. He was assured, however, in the ordinance department that a requisition for guns would be honored without delay. He expects on the return of the governor to forward a requisition for four Hotchkiss pieces.

Professor C. A. Cumming of the capitol improvement commission, in speaking of the work before the commission, mentioned the fact that a crack had been discovered in the east wall of the state house. An examination, he said, had disclosed there was a long crack near the entrance, running from the foundation to the second story. He said this discovery had given the commision some concern, but it did not appear anything could be done to better it. He said the engineer at the state house thought he could detect a rising and settling on each side of the break, caused by the changes in the weather and their effects on the foundations.

The members of the state board of control decided to reject the proposition of Nebraska to send some of the prisoners to this state to be cared for until its burned penitentiary can be replaced. The question might have been decided differently had it not been for the fact that Nebraska has learned that it could care for its own prisoners.

Governor Shaw has appointed Henry B. Hawley of Des Moines as a commissioner to the Pan-American exposition. The governor is required by legislative act to appoint five commissioners to look after the interests and exhibit of Iowa at the exposition. Mr. Hawley is a native of New York and of the vicinity of Buffalo. He has relatives living there now. He contemplates getting up an excursion to the exposition next summer, and hopes to be able to bring about a representation of the resources and products of the state. This is expected to prove difficult because of the absence of any appropriation to that end by the general assembly or by the state agricultural department.

The expert accountants, Phil H. Skinner and William Hedges, who are going through the accounts of the different offices at the state house, have just finished work in the office of the clerk of the supreme court. The next offices to be examined will be those of the adjutant general and superintendent of schools. It will be some weeks, it is expected, before the experts begin an examination of the accounts in the office of the board of control.

Senator Carter's New Job.

Washington, March 9.—Former United States Senator Carter of Montana has been appointed by the president as United States commissioner of the St. Louis exposition. He has accepted the offer. The position pays $5,000 a year.

In addition to Senator Carter, the president has selected for members of the commission ex-Senators John M. Thurston of Nebraska, William Lindsay of Kentucky and George W. McBride of Oregon.

To Revive the Shipping Bill

Washington, March 8.—It is semi-officially announced that next winter another effort will be made to pass the shipping subsidy bill which failed in the last congress. "Have you surrendered the shipping bill?" Senator Frye was asked. "I certainly have not," he replied, "and I never will surrender until necessary legislation has been enacted to restore our flag to the oceans of the world."

Cape Town, March 8.—The bubonic plague is spreading here. Five corpses, all of colored persons, have been found in twenty-four hours. Ten colored persons and one European woman, believed to be affected by the disease, have been removed to a hospital. Numerous persons who had come into contact with suspected cases have been isolated.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

JUDGE GIVES ROBISON SEVEN YEARS

Tried to Kill Fred Foster, a Barber of Algona, With Wife's Acquiescence.

Algona, March 7.—Jack Robison, the man who confessed to the shooting of Fred Foster, a barber of this town, some weeks ago, has been sentenced to seven years in the Anamosa penitentiary. He plead guilty on the stand before he was given his sentence. It will be remembered that Robison was tracked through the snow to his home, after he assaulted Foster on the streets of this town. The wife of Foster, who has been on friendly terms with Robison, was suspected of knowing something of the attack on her husband before it was made. She was pressed closely by authorities and finally confessed that she had instigated the attempted murder, prompted by a desire to get her husband out of the way so that she would be free to carry on her friendship with Robison. When she made her confession in the presence of her husband she broke down and wept bitterly. Her husband shook hands with her as he lay on his bed suffering from the bullet wound she had been instrumental in inflicting, and told her he thought a term in the penitentiary would do her good. Robison, as the perpetrator of the deed, was given his trial before Mrs. Foster.

NEW RAILROAD ORGANIZED.

Des Moines, Iowa City & Eastern Brought Into Existence.

Grinnell, March 11.—The railroad meeting of those interested in the organization of the Des Moines, Iowa City & Eastern, was attended by twenty-one representative men along the line. The organization was completed and the articles of incorporations signed. The directors elected are: Lyons, Starr, Ward and Reed of Des Moines; George W. Ball, of Iowa City; A. N. Rayburn, Montezuma; M. J. Kelley, Williamsburg; H. W. Hatter, Deep River; Aaron Cover, Millersburg. Excellent preliminary work has been done along the entire line.

TRIED PAT CROWE GAME.

Algona, March 8.—The grand jury has been called together again to investigate a blackmailing attempt and a case of forgery. Some months ago George C. Call, president of the Algona Savings bank, received a letter demanding that he leave $25,000 at a certain place or become an assassin's victim. Mr. Call never told anyone of the threat, but has now decided to submit the matter to the grand jury, having secured what he thinks is a clue to the writer of the letter which was signed "Jack." In view of the fact that Pat Crowe is conceded to have been sojourning for several months in west and northwest Iowa, it is deemed likely he was the author of the letter to Mr. Call and also engineered the express robbary at Manilla.

IOWAN APPOINTED.

W. E. Fuller to be Assistant United States Attorney General.

Washington, March 11.—The president has appointed W. E. Fuller of Iowa to be assistant attorney general of the United States.

Hon. W. E. Fuller was formerly congressman from the Fourth district, being succeeded by Thomas Updegraff. He was a candidate for governor four years ago when Shaw was first nominated. He has been prominent in Iowa politics for many years, and is an attorney of marked ability.

Gets $4,500 for Breach of Promise.

Mt. Pleasant, March 8.—The jury in the breach of promise case of Nelbe Herriman against David M. Layman returned into court with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, fixing the amount of damages at $4,500, which carries with it the costs, amounting to $185. Layman is a prominent farmer of Cannan township, who is a widower, and the plaintiff was his hired girl for several months in the summer of 1899 and claims the marriage engagement was made that spring. This is the first breach of promise case to be tried in this county for many years, and the verdict is the heaviest one rendered in a damage case in this county for about twenty years. The whole amount asked for in the petition was only $5,000. Layman is a well-to-do farmer and will file a motion for a new trial in a few days.

New School for Burlington.

Burlington, March 8.—A polytechnic school to be built at a cost of $150,000, and to be endowed with a fund of $60,000, is what the trustees of Burlington institute expect will be the result of the visit of Wm. R. Harper, president of the University of Chicago, to Burlington. The larger part of the money needed for this vast undertaking is to be raised in this city, but the influence of Dr. Harper, it is expected, will assist materially in the success of the project.

New Railway for Marion County.

Sioux City, March 8.—L. G. Everist of Sioux City, president of the Elmira Coal company, has announced that he has let the contract for the construction of a coal railroad which will extend from the Empire mine on Cedar Creek, near Bussey, in Marion county, to a connection with the Wabash and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroads. Work is to be begun by March 15, and the road will be built and equipped within sixty days of that date.

Corset Saves Woman's Life.

Davenport, March 8.—Mrs. Thomas Harrington of Big Rock owes her life to her corsets. She left her husband some weeks ago. Harrington has been living in Davenport, but he went out to Big Rock and pleaded with his wife to return home. When she refused he drew a revolver from his pocket and fired a bullet into her chest. Her corset stays turned it aside from her heart and she will recover.

Eckles Buys Iowa Farm.

Nevada, March 8.—James H. Eckles of Chicago, ex-comptroller of the currency, has purchased the old Bassmassen farm six miles northwest of Nevada. His brother has arrived from Ohio and will take charge of the farm. A herd of thirty-two Jersey cattle has been put on the farm, and the manner in which it will be conducted is indicated by the quality of this one item.

Horses Burned.

Cedar Rapids, March 8.—The large horse barn of W. C. Bryant at Marion was destroyed by fire at midnight. Twenty-two valuable horses were burned, together with all the contents of the barn. Two smaller barns with contents were also destroyed.

Gilbert Victor in New York.

New York, March 7.—Twelve marksmen participated in the association championship shoot at Madison Square Garden. Fred Gilbert was the victor with 93 kills out of a possible 100. Heikes and Crosby were tied for second money, each having 91 targets to his credit. Fox made 90 kills.

Aplington Has a Fire Loss.

Waterloo, March 6.—The business portion of Aplington was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $20,000 and the greater portion of the business section was burned. The town had practically no fire protection.

DEATH OF ED. CAMPBELL.

An Early Legislator and a Former Democratic Leader.

Fairfield, March 11.—Hon. Ed Campbell, Jr., widely known among Iowans and a former democratic leader in the state, died at his home in this city at 3:40 Saturday morning. Death resulted from senile gangrene brought about by a clot of blood forming in the main artery of the right leg. He was just past his eighty-first birthday, and since a surgical operation of heroic character performed on him four years ago, his health has been unusually good.

Two weeks ago Mr. Campbell went to Chicago for a visit with his children. Taken ill a few days after, he was removed to the hospital, where it was decided his condition was most serious. Amputation was considered unwise and impracticable, and the family, as well as Mr. Campbell, himself, were informed of his serious condition. He then determined to return to his home, and in spite of the protest of the hospital authorities, this was successfully accomplished, he arriving there Thursday morning. He was conscious until within a few hours of his death, and to the last was the same bright and ever-glorious Ed Campbell that his friends have always known. He leaves a wife and five children, John M. Campbell, Mrs. S. C. Farmer and Colin Campbell, of Chicago, and Mrs. W. E. Thompson and Mrs. Bell Bright of this place.

WOMEN USED THEIR HATCHETS.

Mother and Daughters Wreck a Saloon in Johnson County.

Cedar Rapids, March 9.—Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Barner and her daughter-in-law went into the only saloon in the little town of Oxford, Johnson county. They had hatchets concealed under their cloaks. Once inside, they began smashing glasses and bottles. The saloonkeeper disarmed them and put them out of the saloon. Later he was arrested for assault and battery. The younger woman's husband had been a frequenter of the saloon, and the keeper refused to stop selling him liquor. There is great excitement in the little town.

HERRIOTT A CANDIDATE.

Stuart Herald Publishes the Announcement of His Candidacy.

Stuart, March 9.—The Herald announces the candidacy of John Herriott for governor, subject to the decision of the republican state convention. It is claimed that the Ninth district is solidly supporting Mr. Herriott. He states in his announcement that he is a candidate in earnest and expects to make a clean, forceful fight for the floor. Mr. Herriott is a veteran of the civil war and also made an enviable record during his service as state treasurer.

Claims Money From the State.

Iowa City, March 9.—William J. Haddock, the secretary of the board of regents of the University of Iowa, has discovered the existence of sums due the university from the state of Iowa, amounting to $14,125. Six thousand dollars of this amount has been recovered from the state upon presentation of the claims of the university. The university now asks that the state pay the balance of the amounts due, all being owed under the same interpretation of the laws of Iowa. The amounts due the university arise from the refusal of the auditor of state to issue warrants for the moneys due the university under existing appropriations when the old code and session laws were replaced on October 1, 1897, by the new code.

Iowa Men Interested.

Chihuahua, Mex., March 11.—A syndicate of American capitalists has just closed a deal for the purchase of 500,000 acres of timber land in the Sierra Madras, a short distance south of Casas Grandes state of Chihuahua. The amount involved in the deal is $2,500,000 in gold.

The syndicate is composed of H. S. Smith of San Francisco, Robert Fullerton and W. O. Finkbine, Des Moines, Fred M. Stephenson and Shaw Kennedy, Chicago, John McComb, City of Mexico. Mr. Kennedy says there is enough timber on the land to keep five of the largest saw mills busy for thirty years.

War on Clinton Saloons.

Clinton, March 8.—The Ministerial association of this city has started out with a determination to close every saloon in the city, and that they mean business is shown by the fact that the members of the association have commenced injunction proceedings against eighteen of the prominent saloon keepers of the city. The only method open for the liquor dealers to escape prosecution is for them to come under the provisions of the mulct law, and this they refuse to do, saying that they might as well go out of the business as to try to conduct saloons under the provisions of this law.

Heavy Burlington Contract Let.

Chicago, March 7.—Contracts have been let by the Burlington for the building of a cut-off between Red Oak and Villisca, Iowa, at an expense of $696,000. New heavy steel rails are to be used and ties which have been treated to a preserving process. The new line will shorten by several miles the distance between Chicago and Omaha, and is only one of the many improvements which the company is contemplating in western territory.

Attempted to Blackmail.

Shenandoah, March 9.—A gang of seven toughs has written several letters to Henry Gallup, a citizen of Shenandoah, to the effect that it would burn his property if he did not leave town or pay it $280. Mr. Gallup has placed the letters in the hands of the postal authorities and an investigation will be made. The cause of sending the letters is that the gang believes Mr. Gallup gave information against them as gamblers.

Lost Her Millions.

New York, March 9.—The contest over the will of the late Mary Beach Tousey, in which Mrs. Rohrer, a relative, was suing to break the will, came to an abrupt end yesterday, the plaintiff offering no testimony, and the will was probated. The will gave the entire estate, worth a million dollars, to Methodist missionary causes.

Saw Mill Blew Up.

Marshalltown, March 11.—The boiler of a portable saw mill exploded at Montour, hurling L. G. Carter a hundred feet and probably fatally injuring him. Harry Smith was badly scalded and had his leg broken.

Iowa Defeats Minnesota.

Iowa City, March 9.—The eighth annual Iowa-Minnesota debate was won by Iowa, who took the negative side on the question: "Is it unwise for the states to attempt to tax personal property?"

Jackson and Stovall Indicted.

Sioux City, March 8.—Jack Jackson and John Stovall, charged with the Manilla, Iowa, express robbery, have been indicted by the grand jury at Denison.

New Electric Scheme.

Ottumwa, March 9.—The citizens of this city and Agency are planning to make a proposition to the Burlington road for the use of its old track between this city and Agency, to be used as an electric interurban line to connect the two cities. The plan would result in the removal of a number of people to Agency for suburban homes, and also develop the magnificent Garrison Rock district as a handsome park, now lying dormant because of a lack of facilities for reaching it. The Burlington is to abandon this track in order to avoid the hill.

HONORS TO AMERICAN MINISTER.

Reception Tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Conger by Missionaries.

Pekin, March 9.—At the farewell reception given Wednesday to Minister and Mrs. Conger by the American missionaries, Dr. Schifield referred to the good will and interest of all American ministers in the missions. He expressed the gratitude of the missionaries to Mr. Conger for his services in giving them security, his kindly feeling towards them and his appreciation of their work.

In reply, Mr. Conger said he had never been enthusiastic over the cause of the missions, but he respected their work and devotion of the missionaries, and intended to testify to this when he returned to the United States. Regarding the future, he thought they would have to modify their plans concerning assistance from their government. They must rest content with what they had secured in the past, but when he returned to China, he could and would gladly assist them in any manner.

He was surprised by the almost universal feeling of hope and determination on the part of the missionaries, which were in contrast to his loss of confidence in the Chinese as a race. He was impressed by the lack of appreciation by the Chinese of the efforts of their friends. He observed that the countries most respected were those which came with a strong hand and a strong policy. Some were extremely bloodthirsty, but the actual facts required that punishment be inflicted on those whom all recognized as guilty. To this all the powers agreed. The missionaries expressed their wish for Mr. Conger's speedy return.

CUBAN CONSERVATIVES WIN.

Constitutional Convention Decides to Consider the Platt Amendment.

Havana, March 8.—The constitutional convention met in secret session yesterday for a formal discussion of the Platt amendment. The conservative element scored a victory. It was decided to continue the sessions of the convention and to refer the amendment to the special committee on relations, with instructions to bring in a report.

Twenty-nine delegates were present, Senor Llorente and General Rivera being the only absentees. General Sanguily favored dissolving the convention and returning the amendment without discussion. The other delegates were unanimously in favor of continuing the sessions and of sending some answer to the executive department in Washington.

It is generally believed that the crisis, if any existed, has passed, and that by the time the committee reports the present excitement will have died out. Much depends upon the attitude of the radical delegates, if an impassioned appeal to the people is issued, as it is rumored will be the case, this may cause demonstrations of protest against the United States. But nothing in the nature of an uprising is any longer feared.

OLD MEMBERS REAPPOINTED.

The President Makes No Change in His Cabinet.

Washington, March 6.—The president yesterday sent the following nominations to the senate:

Lyman J. Gage of Illinois, to be secretary of the treasury.

Elihu Root of New York, to be secretary of war.

John W. Griggs of New Jersey, to be attorney general.

John D. Long of Massachusetts, to be secretary of the navy.

The nomination of Attorney General Griggs is among those and he will retain office until the president has been able to select his successor. It also is expected that the president will send in the nomination of Robert McCormick, formerly of Illinois, but now a resident of the District of Columbia, to be minister to Austria, vice Minister Harris, resigned.

The president also issued a new commission to George D. Cortelyou as secretary to the president.

DEPORTATION OF INSURGENTS.

Over Acts Showed Them to be in Sympathy With the Rebellion.

Washington, March 8.—Gen. MacArthur has notified the war department by mail that in pursuance of authority obtained from the department under orders of December 27 last, he has ordered the deportation of a number of persons "whose overt acts have clearly revealed them as in aid or in sympathy with the insurrection and the guerrilla warfare by which it is being maintained, and whose continued residence in the Philippine islands is, in every essential regard, inimical to the pacification thereof."

EMPEROR OPPOSES AGREEMENT.

Inclined to Recede From Cession of Manchuria to Russia.

London, March 9.—The Tien Tsin correspondent of the Standard asserts that pamphlets are widely and secretly circulated vilifying foreigners and inciting the Boxers to make renewed efforts.

"Emperor Kwang Su opposes the Russo-Chinese agreement as to Manchuria," says the Peking correspondent of the Daily Express, "and has instructed Li Hung Chang to refer Russians to the other powers."

Troubles for Manchester.

Liverpool, March 7.—On his arrival here on the White Star Line steamer Oceanic from New York, the Duke of Manchester, who with his bride was a passenger on board, was served with a writ for an alleged breach of promise, at the instance of Portia Knight of London. Miss Knight is an American, 23 or 24 years of age. She was on the stage in New York for a short time and has been living quietly in London for a year.

Chandler to Head Commission.

Washington, March 7.—Ex-Senator Wm. E. Chandler of New Hampshire has been selected to be president of the Spanish claims commission. The other appointments will soon follow, and it is intended that the commission shall get to work as soon as possible, in view of the vast amount of work to be done.

Montana Deadlock Broken.

Helena, Mont., March 9.—At half past 3 yesterday morning, although the legislature clock testified that it was not yet midnight, Hon. Paris Gibson (dem.) of Great Falls, was elected United States senator for the term expiring March 4, 1905.

Gave Botha Seven Days.

Lorenzo Marquez, March 9.—General Kitchener has granted General Botha a seven days' armistice to enable him to confer with the other generals.

Abuse is doubly painful when wit is used as a conveyance.

John Davis Sentenced.

Knoxville, March 7.—John Davis has been sentenced to fifteen months in the penitentiary and a fine of $500. He is the man who was found guilty of manslaughter for the shooting of one Hallowell at Bussey. The judge in giving this sentence read again his instructions given to the jury, and intimated that things might have turned out differently for Davis. He also stated that had Davis fired the shot that killed Hallowell before he (Hallowell) went inside the house the verdict should have been for acquittal, as most of the testimony showed that Davis was acting in self-defense.

CRISIS IN FAR EAST.

The Situation Almost Graver Than the Original Trouble.

London, March 9.—A crisis has arisen in far eastern affairs, which in the opinion of the British government, is graver almost than the troubles which originally turned the eyes of the world toward the orient. In this crisis secret negotiations are going on between the United States and Great Britain with a view to thwarting what both governments appear to consider a determined attempt on the part of Russia to plant herself permanently in one of the richest tracts of the Chinese empire—Manchuria.

The significance of the present phase can only be appreciated by those cognizant of the lethargic attitude of the British government hitherto regarding the Russian action in China. Within the last few days all this has changed. What a week or two ago was pronounced only in line with Russia's usual policy is now termed "a grave and serious state of affairs."

Lord Lansdowne is using every effort to bring the powers into line, in order to present to Russia such a menacing front that, without any ambiguity regarding temporary or other occupation, she may give up all designs upon Manchuria.

What prompts the British foreign office to take such an alarmist view of circumstances usually looked upon as fatalistic sequences, is the apprehension that Russia, having held her own in spite of the protest of the ministers of the powers to the Chinese government and having put herself on record in the reply to Sir Charles Scott as determined on at least a temporary occupation of Manchuria, will refuse to back down.

RUSSIA'S HOLD IS FIRM

Startling Story Told by a German Correspondent.

Berlin, March 11.—The Tageblatt's special correspondent, who has been traveling in northern Manchuria, Mongolia and on the borders of Siberia and China for a year, and whose reports hitherto have been correct without exception, has furnished his paper with a long letter which is just published, containing interesting details regarding the Russo-Chinese agreement on the subject of Manchuria, Mongolia and Turkestan. He says he is absolutely certain that the published version of this agreement is in no way near the actual truth. He then proceeded to give facts concerning the proposed internal administration of that part of China, demonstrating that Manchuria will become an integral part of Russia, more so than even Bokhara. In regard to Mongolia, he says there is no doubt a protectorate has been established, as this is evidenced by the hoisting of Russian flags everywhere, the thorough organization of the district, the establishment of tax-collecting offices and the opening of branches of Russo-Chinese banks, with no one but Russian officials in charge. All this, virtually, has taken place during the past six months and began during the Boxer outbreak. The clearest evidence, however, is contained in an army order issued by General Grodekoff to the Siberian troops, in which the general said: "You have nobly fulfilled your task of defending a line 1,500 kilometers long, on the frontiers of the Russian empire, from Urga (Mongolia) to Kho Shun, and have thrown back the enemy across the threatened line."

GEN. CELLIERS IS KILLED.

The Boer Commander Went to His Death at Lichtenburg.

London, March 9.—Lord Kitchener, reporting under date of March 7, says:

"The Boers failed in their determined attack upon Lichtenburg. Our losses, besides the two officers previously reported, were fourteen men killed and twenty wounded. The Boer general, Celliers, was killed.

"De Wet's position is variously reported, as his men are scattering through the Orange colony. Our troops marching north reported at Petersburg today.

"French reports further captures of a fourteen-pounder creusot, with carriages and limber complete, and one Hotchkiss, making a total of seven guns. The total number of Boers known to have been placed hors de combat since the eastern operations began is nine hundred and seventy-nine."

Adding to his last report, Lord Kitchener states 169 rifles, 24,970 rounds of ammunition, 183 horses, 1,240 trek oxen, 3,000 cattle, 13,580 sheep, 100 wagons and carts and large quantities of forage have been captured without casualties in Cape Colony.

He further reports: "Parsons found a small commando north of Aberdeen and attacked them. Kritzinger's commando yesterday entered Pearston, but Gorringe turned them out and De Lisle headed them off on the road to Somerset east."

TRIED TO KILL THE EMPEROR.

An Epileptic Throws a Piece of Iron and Hits German Emperor's Cheek.

Berlin, March 8.—While Emperor William was driving from the Rathskeller to the railway station at Bremen a workman named Ditrich Weiland threw a piece of iron into his majesty's carriage. Weiland was immediately arrested. In the attack the emperor was struck on the cheek just below the right eye. There was much bleeding, but the wound was not a serious one. The assailant of Emperor William in trying to escape fell under the horses of the escort riding behind the carriage. The members of the escort handed the man over to the police. During an examination at the town hall the assailant of the emperor suffered from several epileptic fits. During the intervals between these attacks he replied to several questions, but did not give out any important information. Weiland apparently pretends to know nothing of the occurrence. He is evidently weak minded.

JOHN A. KASSON RESIGNS.

Abandons Negotiations of Reciprocity Treaties and Goes to Florida.

Wills Point, Texas, March 11.—A cyclone passed through the west side of this place Saturday morning, demolishing everything in its track. Four persons are dead and about twenty injured. Fourteen dwelling houses were entirely ruined and a number of others were badly wrecked. The public school building is a total loss. The cotton oil mill is damaged and the largest gin plant is in ruins. Wires are blown down and poles and fences leveled. A freight car was blown off the track

"Fighting Bob" Evans an Admiral.

Washington, March 6.—It was announced at the navy department yesterday that Captains R. D. Evans and H. C. Taylor, having been advanced five numbers for services at the battle of Santiago, were commissioned as rear admirals to date from February 11 last.

System Held for DeWet's Escape.

Colesberg, March 5.—The blame for General De Wet's escape is placed on the system rather than on the commanders pursuing him. It has been impossible to direct the operations by telegraph, and the feeling is that greater discretion should be allowed the commanders in the field.

General De Wet marched five miles a day faster than the swiftest British column. Although the Boers are now demoralized, it is believed that they will quickly recover if they are allowed a few days' rest.

ROOSEVELT ADMIRES THE PICTURES.

Applauds the Union Pacific Enterprise—Its Souvenirs and World Map Amaze the Vice President.

Dr. George L. Miller, the Omaha pioneer and the veteran editor, who was the guest of Vice President Roosevelt while he was en route across Nebraska, discussing the trip, said: "The extraordinary interest that the vice president of the United States manifested in the Map of the World, which the Passenger Department of the Union Pacific presented to him, is readily explained. That map is the very largest thing in world pictures, and appealed to Roosevelt as nothing else could. It presented a birdseye view of the sections where today centers the interest of the civilized world. Then, too, it was a pretty tribute he paid to 'The Overland Route' pictorial advertising when he observed that the literature issued by the Union Pacific embodies all that is artistic in word and picture painting.

"I was much amused at the surprise manifested by Colonel Roosevelt when he discovered that he could stand on the rear of the fast flying 'Overland Limited' train and observe the rear view without encountering a single particle of dust. This was the first proposition of the kind he had ever encountered. True, he had seen some eastern roadbeds saturated with oil and rendered in a way dustless, but here was a roadbed in its natural state, giving forth absolutely no dust. He asked me a great many questions about the Sherman granite gravel and the manner in which the Union Pacific is ballasting its main line with the product.

"The Map of the World, the souvenir showing the various points of interest along 'The Overland Route' in colors, and the instructive little volume showing the fossil collections and deposits of Wyoming and other handsome literature presented by the representative of the Union Pacific Advertising Department to Colonel Roosevelt on this occasion, he assured me he would preserve with much care.

"'The advertising departments of the great western railroad systems are fast building up a distinct literature of their own. In an artistic sense, these souvenirs and booklets are quite desirable. I may say that in my collection made from all parts of the United States I have nothing that will compare with the matter presented to me by the representatives of the Union Pacific.'

"These were the words of Vice President-elect Roosevelt in discussing the maps and illustrated souvenirs presented to him by a representative of the Union Pacific passenger department while he was en route from Denver to Omaha over 'The Overland Route.' Continuing, Vice President Roosevelt said: 'These were superb specimens of the landscape artist's skill and the writer's clever arrangement of stories, embodying in all that is artistic in word picture and painting. Wherever one travels, the fame of "The Overland Route" goes. One good thing I have observed about the literature of the company is that it tells the truth. It advertises the trains on the Union Pacific lines to make certain time and certain connections, and when the traveler starts on his journey he finds the train service is just as stated.' Colonel Roosevelt was greatly interested in the Green river views and declared the pictorial features of the famous region wer true to life. 'Here is another thing,' continued the vice president, 'where accuracy is appreciated. Of course "The Overland Route" is probably better known than any railroad line in the world, but the Union Pacific seems never at a loss in presenting vividly the many scenes and incidents connected with this great system, and indeed now interwoven in the history of our country. This map of the world, for instance, is simply marvelous. It is brought absolutely up to date, and its completeness is most amazing. These pictorial souvenirs I believe are worthy of a place in any man's library.'"

James Harold, a veteran of the police department, who was placed upon the retired list four years ago, was seated on a bench in Portsmouth square in San Francisco meditating on the lively times of days gone by, when he was joined by one of the vagrants who infest that quarter. The stranger said he found it impossible to get work, and suggested that the present economic conditions were a full justification for crime. Harold took the fellow to task for his logic. "When I left Ireland sixty years ago," said the veteran, "I had sixpence in my pocket. Since then I have never been without money." "Oh, you're talking through your hat," replied the stranger, "and to prove it, I'll just bet you fifty cents you cannot show a twenty-dollar piece now." Harold accepted the wager, and drawing a fifty-cent piece from his pocket, was about to place it in the hands of a stakeholder, when the stranger grabbed the money and started to run. Harold was too quick for him, however, and before the fellow could get away he landed once or twice on his neck. The stranger showed fight, and Harold with his cane beat him into submission. The offender was taken to the city prison, where, under the name of Matthew Dalton, he was booked on a charge of petty larceny.

ON VERGE OF INSANITY.

Mrs. E. A. Deacon Tells of a Case Where a Lady Was in This Serious Condition, but Was Saved.

East Randolph, N. Y., March 11.—(Special.)—Mrs. E. A. Deacon of this town is Vice-President of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union. She is a lady of splendid capabilities, and these she has always directed towards the uplifting of humanity. What Mrs. Deacon says is accepted in East Randolph without question. No one has ever doubted her truthfulness or honesty of purpose.

Mrs. Deacon says: "My attention was first called to the remarkable curative value of Dodd's Kidney Pills, through the cure of a literary lady who was a friend of mine, and who from mental overwork was on the verge of insanity. After the failure of her physician to help her, her husband was advised to have her try Dodd's Kidney Pills, which she did with gratifying results. She used five boxes before she was completely cured, but at the end of two months' treatment, she was her own happy, brilliant self once more.

"Feeling languid and worn out myself, I thought they would perhaps be a help to me, and I am very glad to say that two boxes made a new woman of me. I feel ten years younger, am in the very best of health, and appreciate that it was entirely through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I give them highest indorsement."

These cases are becoming very common in Cattaraugus County, and many ladies have had experiences similar to those of Mrs. Deacon and her friend. What Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for these suffering women, they will do for anyone who gives them a fair trial.

They are 50c. a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

CONGRESS.

Washington, March 4.—The senate receded from its position on the appropriation for the Charleston exposition. This carried with it an agreement for passage of the $5,000,000 appropriation for the St. Louis exposition. Through the efforts of Senator Carter and Wellington the river and harbor bill was defeated. At the conclusion of the president's inaugural address the senate returned to its chamber and adjourned immediately until tomorrow.

House—The most important action taken by the house today, aside from that on the appropriation bills, was the defeat of the resolution reported by the rules committee for the designation of a sub-committee of the insular affairs committee of the house to visit Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines to make a report on the conditions existing in those islands. The resolution suffered defeat by the decisive vote of 139 to 84.

FIFTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

Washington, March 5.—Senate—Platt, of Connecticut, offered an amendment to the rules to limit debate in the senate. Its proponent had no purpose to provoke discussion upon it today, but several senators expressed their views in no uncertain terms. Mason, of Illinois, thought it did not go far enough and gave notice of an amendment under which, he said, the majority would not be under the control of the minority. Wellington, of Maryland and Bacon, of Georgia, denounced the effort to change the rules as unseemly, the former challenging the right of the senate to consider the proposition at this session. Morgan introduced a resolution declaring the Clayton-Bulwer treaty abrogated. It went over until tomorrow. In executive session the presidential appointments to the cabinet were confirmed.

Washington, March 6.—Senate—After a brief debate the amendment to the rules of the senate placing a limit upon debate, offered yesterday by Senator Platt, of Connecticut, was referred to the committee on rules. The debate developed the fact that no intention exists on the part of the proponent of the amendment to urge its discussion at the present extraordinary session. Morgan, of Alabama, who yesterday offered a resolution declaring the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty between the United States and Great Britain, addressed the senate for nearly two hours upon his proposition. His admonitions to Great Britain were particularly sharp. He declared that if Great Britain should endeavor to enforce the terms of the treaty the effort would result in a war in which the great empire, which had controlled for scores of years the commerce of the world, would be swept from power and her king would be left with only sovereignty over his own island.

Washington, March 7.—Senate—Senator William P. Frye, of Maine, today was re-elected president protempore of the senate to serve during the pleasure of the senate. This is the second time Senator Frye has been honored by his colleagues. Five years ago—on February 7, 1896—the republicans then being in a minority, he was elected unanimously. His services as president protempore, especially since the death of the late Vice-President Hobart, have won for him the cordial appreciation of his fellow senators for his able and impartial administration of the post. At today's session, Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, concluded his speech in support of his resolution declaring the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty between the United States and Great Britain. His peroration was really pathetic. He had devoted the best years of his official life, he said, to advance the construction of the Nicaragua canal, but now he did not expect to live to see the work on the great waterway begun.

Washington, March 9.—Senate.—After proceedings lasting only six days the extraordinary session of the senate was declared adjourned sine die at 1:15 p. m. During the session practically no business except that of an executive character was transacted. The session was called by the president in order that the senate might have opportunity to confirm appointments made at the beginning of the new administration. That business accomplished, there was nothing further for the senate to do.

FATAL CYCLONE IN TEXAS.

Wills Point Swept by a Tornado—Four Killed, Twenty Injured.

Washington, March 11.—The resignation of Mr. Kasson as a special plenipotentiary, charged with the negotiation of reciprocity treaties and arrangements was placed in the hands of the president by Mr. Kasson before he left Washington for Florida.

The president has withheld his acceptance, strongly urging Mr. Kasson to remain in the service of the government, and the matter is still in abeyance. While it is true that the action just taken looking to the extension of the period of time within which the French reciprocity treaty may be ratified, was at the instance of the French government, our government could not, of course, afford to disregard a request of that kind.

It also is true that it marks a determination on the part of the administration to renew the effort to carry some reciprocity treaties into being at the earliest opportunity.

MONEY USED BY CONGRESS.

Total Appropriations Placed at $1,440,062,545 for Two Years.

Washington, March 7.—Representative Cannon, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, and Representative Livingston, the senior democratic member of the committee, have prepared statements of the appropriations of the Fifty-fifth congress which will be printed in the Record tomorrow. Both place the total appropriation for congress at $1,440,062,545, placing those for the first session at $710,150,862, and for the second at $729,911,683. Mr. Cannon publishes a table showing the expenditures of the previous congress at $1,568,212,637, and Mr. Livingston makes a comparison with the Fifty-fourth congress which appropriated $1,044,580,273.

Boers Attack Lichtenburg.

London, March 8.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener:

Dover, Del., March 9.—The legislative deadlock on the election of a United States senator continued today, and final adjournment was taken without the election of a senator.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER IX.

It was a very happy evening that Beryl spent at Uplands. Mrs. Dynevor's heart went out to the pretty, graceful girl, who seemed so strangely alone in the world; Kitty had taken a fancy to her; and when Harold came in for tea the three were as much at home as though they had known each other for months.

"You must let me take you home," Harold said to the little governess, when she came downstairs about eight with her hat on.

"Oh, I could not trouble you, Mr. Dynevor, it is so far! And I am not at all afraid."

"Harold loves an evening tramp, and it is much too far for you to go alone," said Kitty. "Mind you come again soon. Mother wants you to, don't you mother?"

"Yes," put in Mrs. Dynevor. "I shall be very pleased to see Miss Lendon whenver she has time to come."

When they were walking down the broad, shady lane which led from Uplands to Easthill village Harold asked simply. "Do you know you have made a conquest of my mother, Miss Lendon? I never saw her so much taken with a stranger."

"She was very, very kind to me. Oh, Mr. Dynevor, when I saw her and Kitty together I could not help wishing I had a mother."

The voice was so sad it touched his heart.

"I wish you would confide your troubles to my mother, Miss Lendon," he said gently, "she would know how to comfort you. The advertisement offering the reward has not been repeated for some weeks now, and I had hoped you would feel happier."

To his surprise and alarm, he heard her sob. They were quite alone in a little frequented lane. He longed to comfort her, only he could think of no words.

"Miss Lendon," he said, very gently, "like you, I have known troubles—one presses on me now whose weight seems to crush me to the earth. Human friends can do very little to soothe an aching heart; but there is One above who knows all His children's griefs, and sorrows for them. He will comfort you better than any earthly friend."

"I know," she said, simply yet reverently. "Mr. Dynevor, I had better tell you the truth. I can trust you not to betray me to my father, and I cannot bear to come to Uplands and take kindness from you all when, if you knew my story, you would shrink from me in loathing."

An awful fear crossed Harold's heart. What could she mean? Only a little while ago, at the fete, she had assured him she was not fleeing from justice, and he had retorted no one could take her for a criminal. What did her present words mean?

"Whatever you tell me I will keep as a sacred trust," he answered. "But, indeed, Miss Lendon, you are mistaken; nothing you can say will make me shrink from you."

"But I am the child of the two who wronged you cruelly. I am your enemy's daughter—Beryl Lindon."

He started involuntarily. Really the movement was simply surprise, but she thought it was due to aversion.

"I never meant to deceive you or any one," she went on, her voice growing a little firmer as she proceeded. "I ran away from home because my father wrote that he had married again, and his new wife was to have full authority over me. Mr. Dynevor, that woman had lived in the house for nine months, openly as my maid, really as my tyrant. Last January, while my father was away, she—she struck me. I appealed to the housekeeper, who dismissed her. Do you think I could have stayed to see that woman in my mothers' place?"

"No one could have wished it," he answered quickly—"no one who loved you."

"I took Mrs. Tanner's situation because it was the only one I could get and the time was all too short. I had only three weeks from getting my father's letter to the day he brought his wife home.

"When I came to Easthill I had never heard of Dynevor Manor. I had not the least idea my father possessed property here, or I should have been afraid to come.

"Mrs. Tanner told me the first night I came to her that the Wilmots, who were her chief supporters here, objected to my name. She said they urged it was a slight to their employer, Mr. Lindon, that a poor little governess should be called by his name. When I found that this Mr. Lindon lived in Elchester square, and his name was Eustace, I knew it was my father, and I was only too thankful to agree to the proposal that I should change one letter of my name, and be known here as Miss Lendon.

"When later I heard my father's story from Mrs. Grey, and the cruel wrong he had wrought you and yours, I felt overwhelmed with shame. Though your sister had urged me to go and see her, I felt I dared not accept her invitation. I should never have come to the Uplands only she fetched me, and all through my visit I felt as though I were deceiving you all, that if you knew the truth your doors would be closed against me."

Harold took the girl's hand in his and held it close under cover of the darkness.

"Do you know what first made my mother take an interest in you? Your likeness to her sister-in-law, Nina Lindon. You must remember she and your mother were close friends for over three years. My father on his death bed told me he believed firmly that my Aunt Nina had never meant to wrong us. He thought either the will had been extorted from her by undue influence, or——"

"Or what?" asked Beryl eagerly.

"Oh that she was too ill to understand its real purport. I suppose you do not remember her? No, you could not; she died before you were four years old."

"I do remember her," said Beryl, in a very low voice. "You see, she was the only creature who loved me, so I was not likely to forget. She was very ill, and very unhappy; but, Mr. Dynevor, I can't believe she did what people think. She was too gentle."

"It was not a happy marriage," said Harold Dynevor, in a low tone; "from the little we know we always gathered that. My father wondered sometimes if she lost heart after your sister's death."

"I don't know." Beryl felt bewildered. "You see, I only remember her after."

"Do you mean you were away when Lillian died?"

"I think I must have been," she said, in a puzzled tone. "I can remember a little cottage, and a Frenchwoman who took care of me. One day a letter came, and she dressed me up in my best, and took me a long railway journey, and then I saw my mother. She was in black, and she cried when she kissed me, and said she would never part with me again while she lived. My bonne went home, and after that I had an English nurse."

"And you are Beryl Lindon?"

"Yes. Will you tell your mother and Kitty? I am sure they won't betray me."

"I am sure of that, too; but I do not mean to tell them. I do not see that what you have confided to me need go any further. If you are the child of our enemy, at least he has treated you no better than he has treated us. I am positive if my mother knew the truth she would only feel more kindly towards you. Come to us when you can; you will always be welcome."

They were at Woodlands, and, with a close pressure of the hand, he released her.

He found his mother alone when he got home again. She had been searching among old treasures, and had unearthed an album containing photos of bygone days. It was open at the picture of Mrs. Frank Dynevor as she was when she came home a bride.

"I wanted to show it to you, Harold," said his mother, "just to prove the resemblance is not all my fancy."

He looked at it thoughtfully.

"It is a very strong likeness," he said gravely; "but I hope it won't prejudice you and Kitty against that poor little girl. I think if ever a human creature stood in sore need of friends it is Mrs. Tanner's governess."

CHAPTER X.

Five thousand pounds.

The sum seemed to burn itself into Harold Dynevor's brain as the summer ripened. He did not actually know that Mr. Lindon meant to foreclose, but he could not doubt Mr. Proctor's warning. He felt that if five thousand pounds were not forthcoming before the 25th of December his mother must leave her lifelong home, and he himself go forth into the world a ruined man.

He had more than one long conference with the lawyer about raising the money. Mr. Proctor thought a private lender would be the only source whence he could obtain it. He said that at a forced sale the Uplands would fetch very little in excess of the actual sum needed; but he thought any one who knew the property might be inclined to offer six thousand for it, on the understanding it was to be redeemed. The one thousand could be paid back at once, the other five remain at interest.

"Only so very few people have capital to dispose of," he concluded, "and those few seem to fight clear of land. I am making inquiries among all likely investors. Don't you think General Craven would consider the speculation?"

"He can't. His daughter is to be married in the autumn, and he'll want all the ready money he can find."

The general, indeed, when sounded on the subject, took what seemed to Mr. Proctor a very hard view.

"You know, Proctor," the old soldier declared, "I've no liking for Eustace Lindon, and I'd not mind thwarting him; but I think for any one to enable the Dynevors to remain at Uplands would be to do them a cruel kindness. It is openly reported Lindon is coming into residence when we leave. It will be far and away better for Mrs. Dynevor and her children not to live, so to say, at his gates. I think it is a blessing in disguise that they will have to go."

"And I don't!" said the lawyer stoutly. "Think of the years the place has been in Mrs. Dynevor's family! Think how hard her son has worked to keep it up! If he leaves Uplands, Harold goes out into the world penniless."

"He'd be sure to get a good berth as land-agent to a nobleman."

"Such posts are not so easily picked up. I think you take a very unsympathetic view of the matter, General."

"Bother it all," said the old soldier irritably, "I suppose I had better tell you the truth! I like the Dynevors, they're the pleasantest neighbors I ever had, I think Harold's a son to be proud of; but, Proctor, I've got only one boy, and I haven't much money to leave him. Alick will have to make his way with very little except his pay. Can't you see I don't want him to marry Kitty Dynevor, a nice girl and a good one, but without a penny to her fortune?"

Beryl saw a good deal of the Dynevors in August. Woodlands broke up for the holidays, Mrs. Tanner and the twins went to spend a fortnight near their old home, and Kitty came over to Easthill-on-Sea, with her mother's orders to bring back Beryl for the time of their absence.

"You are to be sure to come unless you have a better engagement."

"I have no engagement, and I couldn't have a better one; only shall I not be in your way?"

"We want you, and we mean to have you!" retorted Kitty. "I told Harold about it, and he said it was a famous idea. I think you fascinated him that night when he saw you looking so forlorn at the railway station, for you are the first visitor we have had to stay in the house for years."

Mrs. Dynevor's welcome was almost motherly in its goodness, but it was Harold's greeting which went straight to Beryl's heart. She happened to be alone in the oak parlor when he came in, and as he took her hand he said gravely:

"Remember, no one here knows your secret—no one ever will know it from me; but if they learn it from another source they will be content, as I do, to remember you are Aunt Nina's child, and forget you are Mr. Lindon's daughter."

Beryl had been at Uplands just three days when Easthill was thrown into a commotion. Mr. Lindon, the great man of the neighborhood, had arrived and was putting up at his agent's house while he transacted some business connected with his property.

"Will he have the effrontery to call here?" Mrs. Dynevor asked her son.

"I should say not. If he does, send Kitty in to interview him. She is capable of freezing him if she tries."

"I wonder if he has brought his wife and daughter?" hazarded Mrs. Dynevor.

"No," retorted Kitty, who always knew everything. "His wife is not well, and his daughter is at school. Perhaps she prefers it to her stepmother's society, but she is the same age as I am, and I should certainly resent being kept at letters."

"Poor little thing!" said Mrs. Dynevor gently. "I wonder if she is like her mother? What is her name? Did we ever hear?"

"It was never mentioned in Aunt Nina's letters," returned Harold. "She always spoke of the children as 'Pet' and 'Baby;' not that she wrote often, poor thing!"

Beryl was in the room, and naturally heard these remarks. She almost forgot herself, and contradicted his last words, for she knew that Lillian had never been called "Pet." It was her own name in babyhood, and had not been given up till she went to the Burgesses, when, by her father's wish, she was always called Beryl.

No, Lillian could not have been "Pet." Try as she would, the girl could not recall any fond abbreviation of her sister's name. When she was brought home after Lillian's death no one ever spoke of the dead child except her mother, and she always said "your little sister." Mr. Lindon took no notice of Beryl at all. Her mother's maid had returned to England, as she had lately heard, to take service with the family at Uplands. Lillian's nurse had also left the Lindons, but of her movements Beryl knew nothing.

NEW BREAD AT PARIS.

From Fresh Flour and Greatly Increases Nutrition.

Among all the exhibits of bread and bread-making at the Paris exhibition the one which interested me most was a system of milling and baking combined. It is well known that all food substances when ground to a fine powder have a tendency to become oxidized. As is the case with coffee, which is the best when freshly roasted and freshly ground, so it is with cereal flour, which is never so aromatic or so nutritious as at the moment when it is first made. The Schweitzer system, in regard to the milling orperations, is a return to the old system of millstones, with the exception that corrugated steel grinders take the place of the millstones of the olden days, says the Paris Messenger. These grinders are so accurately adjusted as to admit of the making of the finest flour, while avoiding actual contact of the two grinding surfaces. The simplicity of the apparatus, the cheapness and the ease with which it can be installed commend this system particularly for domestic use and for the supply of villages and small communities. Nevertheless, it is capable of being operated on an extensive scale, as is demonstrated by the large establishment at La Villette, Paris, where more than 100,000 pounds of bread are made per day from flour not more than 24 hours old. Chemical analysis shows that the flour made according to the Schweitzer system has more than twice as much phosphate material as that made by the ordinary roller process. The importance of this fact in respect to nutrition should not be lost sight of, and we must admit that nutrition, not whiteness of color, is the principal object of bread-making.

To Avoid Taking Cold.

To avoid taking cold, keep the body warmly clad in winter and wear flannel undergarments. If you are strong and active, sponge the body every morning with cold water, and rub the skin briskly with a coarse towel until a glow is produced. If you feel chilly after this performance, co'd bathing of the entire body should be avoided in the winter. Before going out in the morning, be sure to fortify the system with a substantial breakfast. Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out into the cold. Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. Never stand inactive in cold weather, especially after having taken exercise, and always avoid standing on ice or snow, or where the person is exposed to the slightest draught. Never lean with the back against anything that is cold. Never sit by an open window in a car after any kind of exercise. Should your feet be wet immediately remove your damp shoes and stockings after entering the house, and do not try to dry them while they are on your feet by holding them near the fire. When hoarse, speak as little as possible. When going from a warm room into a colder atmosphere, keep the mouth closed and breathe through the nostrils so that the air may be sufficiently warm before it reaches the lungs. Take plenty of outdoor exercise and eat plain, nourishing food.

Optical Phenomena of the Sky.

Professor G. F. Straddling, in continuation of his course on light at the Wagner Free Institute of Science, spoke on "The Optical Phenomena of the Sky," says the Philadelphia Times. Professor Stradling described and explained the rainbow, the color of the sky, coronas, halos and the mirage. In speaking of the color of the sky, he said: "When light falls upon a surface which is large in comparison with the wave length, all waves are reflected equally. If, on the other hand, the fleeting surface is small in comparison with the wave length the short waves will be more reflected than the long waves. When sunlight falls on the air, which always has small particles suspended in it, the longer waves, the yellow and red, pass through and the shorter waves are reflected. Hence the sky is blue by reflected light, varying in color with the dimensions of the suspended particles. The longer the path of the light through the air, the farther towards the red end of the spectrum does the color of the transmitted light move. For this reason the colors at sunrise and sunset are so vivid. The scattering effect of particles explains the bluish color of distant objects, the color of the sea, the opal, of soapy water and watered milk."

Salt as a Vitalizer.

New lease of life is held out to persons suffering from loss of blood by disease or injury by the injection of common salt water into the system. Normal salt solution is the restorative used to stay the march of death even, it is said, when 90 per cent of the blood has been lost. The treatment may be applied to persons suffering from pneumonia, typhoid, malarial fever, peritonitis, acute and chronic Bright's disease and all heart affections issuing from the last named troubles. The quantity of salt water injected is made as nearly as possible, to equal that of the blood lost.

There is a great difference between a stiff will and a hard heart.

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

A Remarkable Experience of a Prominent Statesman.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON GIVES PE-RU-NA A HIGH ENDORSEMENT.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State, but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Pe-ru-na came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be able to fully eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing. Yours truly,

"David Meekison."

Many people can tolerate slight catarrhal affections. A little hoarseness, a slight cough, a cold in the head, or a trifling derangement of the digestive organs, do not much disturb the average person in his business. But this is not true of the public speaker or stage artist. His voice must always be clear, lungs perfect, digestion undisturbed. Hence the popularity of Pe-ru-na among the leading actors and actresses of this country. They have come to regard Pe-ru-na as indispensable to their success. Their profession is so exacting that it requires perfect health in every particular. They regard Pe-ru-na as their friend and safeguard. Many letters are received from this class of people. Miss Carrie Thomas, in speaking of Pe-ru-na, says: "I have used Pe-ru-na with splendid results. Would not be without it. No money would hire me to have a settled cold or chronic cough, or hoarseness. Catarrh is the most dreadful thing that could happen to one of my profession. Pe-ru-na is my shield and protector against this most undesirable disease."—Carrie Thomas.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and and Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par ortigually, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

Henry Terhufen, Klemme's hotel landlord has decided to pacify a tumultous life by retiring from active business to private life, and is going to build a fine residence on his lots in the eastern part of town. The material is now being hauled, and work will begin soon. We do not know the size of the dwelling, but Mr. T. will undoubtedly do this as finely as all other things he undertakes.

ELL CENTER NEWS

The most of the schools here that have not already closed will close this week.

The weather is about as changeable as the man in the moon as the saying goes.

Mr. Jones of Springfield, Ill., commenced his duties as teacher in the Marshall district last Monday.

The farmers are getting ready to commence spring work, such as cleaning grain looking over implements etc.

Ray Saunders closed his school in the Marshall district last Friday and returned to his home near Clear Lake.

Just as every one was expecting spring the clerk of the weather bureau ordered a change, and Sunday was the worst day of the season.

There will be a regular old fashioned spelling skule at the center school house on Friday night March 15, all are invited to attend that will.

Mr. Barz has lumber hauled for a new house on his farm here and we are informed it will be occupied by Henry Schwartz who is now farming the place.

At the peopies meeting last Monday E. Buss presented a petition petitioning the board to locate a road 2 miles in length running one mile north of the Theiman school house and one mile south of same, the bill was passed and a committee appointed to establish the road.

The board was also given power to remove the school house in the Greiman district one mile east of where it now stands so as to be in the center of the district, in case the building is not worth moving a new one will be built.

Wall paper very cheap at Shafer & Dow in exchange for butter and eggs.

GERMANTOWN GEMS.

Mrs. C. L. Blummer has been under the weather the past week.

Miss Emma Sampson visited in Germany a few days this week.

A. F. Stille moved onto the Ira Josten farm, a week ago last Monday.

O. G. Gast says that the new pony and the new girl match pretty well.

W. G. and C. H. Lenz attended a party at Garner last Thursday evening.

There were no services during the day last Sunday, on account of the storm.

Ben Kaste visited a few hours in Germany one day last week. What was the attraction, Ben?

Six of our prosperous farmers are contemplating building large barns this spring. This is a sure sign of good times and prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Wellemeyer, F. W. Lenz and Emma Beier attended the Sunday School and Epworth League convention at Fenton, Ia. last week.

Tuesday evening Mar. 5th, Mr. and Mrs. Beier gave a party to the young people of Germantown. The evening was spent in playing numerous games, after which refreshments were served. All present reported a very pleasant time.

The basket social given by Mrr. Edith Roemer at the Merten school house last Friday evening was a success in every way. After a very well rendered program consisting of dialogs recitations and singing came the sale of baskets. There were 28 baskets sold which brought the neat little sum of $22. What more would we ask? The proceeds go for a new library.

School Notes.

Snow balling, accompanied by bawling, is the prevaling game this week.

Quite a number of the little ones have undergone the pangs of vaccination.

Lena and Alma Frohling make a welcome addition to our room.

Nearly all the pupils are more than willing to help in the coming entertainment.

From Garner Signal.

The young lad of Garner arrested for tampering with the U. S. mail was placed under $500 bond to appear before the U. S. grand jury.

A merry party of Garner's young society people drove down to Mr. and Mrs. Asa Gibbs of Ell township and at the pleasant farm home had a good time generally. The evening was spent in social games and refreshments were served.

We are informed that a summer school for teachers is to be conducted in Garner, providing our citizens are willing to board the school ma'ams at the reduced rate. By all means let us encourage this worthy enterprise. It will help our city in many ways.

Gotlieb Gorgus an inmate of the poor farm died yesterday at about noon. The old man was a German and at one period had been a wealthy man but lost his money before coming to this country. For some years he had been a pensioner upon the bounty of Mr. Henry Terhufen, but a few months ago was taken to the poor farm.

Drills will be drill this year, that's why the drill editor of the Hancock Drill drills this town so much.

Say what you will life is but a fleeting moment, and the faster it fleets the better off some people would be.

If all men were endowed with such good graces' as the newspapers, some of them, say the candidates are this would be a sublime world to be sure!

This community is not imune from mumps, grip, rhuematsm and other pyhsical ailings among the feminasculine genders or pink eye among the equine sexes.

In looking over the exchanges one will see on their insides that tobacco dealers, like Patent Medicine men are beginning to advertise liberally in the news papers. What next?

The Garner signal and the Britt papers have dug up their long and shining bowie knives to see who can cut the deepest gash. The trouble is all about the court house question. The Tribune says the Signal is a Whispering Jonah, and the Signal gets back by saying the Tribune is a Jonah Whispering. Be that as it may, Bailey will bust a ham string endeavoring to keep the court house away from where it belongs and the Signal will get sick in it's saw-dust if Garner don't get it.

The caucus last Wednesday night, a week ago, put up. G. L. Bartholomew, as mayor, J. L. Harr, as clerk, Wm. Koerner as treasurer and Aug Lau and F. Gruetzmacher as councilman Mr. Bartholomew has withdrawn and the place is left vacant as yet on the ticket. J. L. Harr has also withdrawn and Chris Lau has been appointed to fill vacancy. In regard to the first caucus ticket, Mr. J. Baumaartner has withdrawn and H. Terhufen has taken his place. H. Terhufen, Fred Herschen, E. P. Dow, G. W. Kluckhonn and F. Ridder comprise the first ticket. ———, Wm. Koerner, Chris Lau, F. Gruetzmacher and Aug. Lau comprise the second ticket. Pay your money and take your choice!

L. H. Kaiser who has been assistant in the State Savings Bank for the last two years has resigned his position and accepted the position of secretary of the New Century Mining Company. He will be located at Smithville, Arkansas. During the two years of Mr. Kaiser's stay in Klemme he has by his ability, close attention to business, sterling integrity, courtesy to all and gentlemanly deportment, made himself valuable to his employers and they will find it hard to replace him. As a private citizen he became popular because he was always gentlemanly, kind and obliging and in short just such a young man as we we would wish our son to be if we had one. He left yesterday and will visit friends in Clayton county a few days before going to his new trome.—Garner Democrat.

That's more than ordinary mortals can stand, L. H. Kaiser is a good young man, is human like the rest of mankind but is not an angel in men's clothing. If Bracket wants a son like Kaiser why don't he get one, he might adopt Louie as his little son. We know he would be as submissive as a starved baby. And then again one might be adopted into the family circle that would gratify all the dearest wishes of Bro. Willies effectionate heart. Kaiser is alright and we are glad to see that he has been made secretary of the New Century Mining Co. success to him.

C. G. BRACHER, MANAGER

DOES THIS STRIKE HOME?

A South Dakota editor dishes up the following logic. Will it apply to this place? If not, you have it for what there is in it anyway. It's well worth a business man's time to read it. "The past in regard to our town matters not so much as the present. The history of our town with the past management is not a history that will be recorded on any cencus as being good on account of it's overflow of religeon, great on account of it's metropolitan airs, or wonderful to any degree on account of it's miraculous growth. The history while it will stand the test of time as a town of prosperity is not what it should be, is not what it could have been, and is truly not what it ought to have been by this time. Considering the place from a social standpoint, there has not been that high sociability which brings all people together as one, acting with one accord and impulse for the betterment of the community along these ways. There have been too many factions at work in the social circle, too many sword-points sticking out to the visible eye to make a stranger feel at home in our midst. Too much division in this way has been evident and prominent to allow for onward movement of the masses. Too much measuring in "our own half bushel" has caused many trials for both the leading socialists and those considered in "our own half bushel" as of minor importance. The idea to be conveyed is not meant to be construed as an illiterant and ignorant class nor do we think it will harm the community to say what has been said, but all must allow that sociability much higher can be entertained than that of the past. All can be better, act better towards one another, and do better, thereby making a better social community. And then; from a business stand-point. Has our town in the past transacted it's business from a truly manly business principle? Have we one and all conducted ourselves as we should in regard to placing our business with those most deserving? This is not intended as a question from a fool standpoint directed at the community at large, but is confined solely to the business circle of the town. Have you treated your neighbor as regards business properly? And now the present dawns upon us, are you reaping a harvest where others have sown, and giving nothing in return? Or are you making all you can here off the living knowing that nothing can be gotten from the dead and giving some undeserving business firm the benefit of your profits? If you are, you should be branded as a traitor and shunned for that act. You are not worthy of the man that helps to support you. To the business men a word of this kind would not hurt their mental capacity in the least. If the town has business men in it who are not patronizing home industry—business men mind you—they should be made aware of the fact. If they are good enough in their own minds to live and gain earthly substance from the circle they are none too good to give a just return for the chance of gaining their wealth, in other words, if you are making all you can and do not patronize home industry, but rather buy somewhere else, you are not doing as business principles and fairness have taught you, and should be forced to do so by deprivation of business. For the future a vivid picture can be outlined comprising many aspects as to how the town can be enhanced in all the religeous, social, and business ways. The first is to follow the Golden Rule "Do unto others as you would have them do onto you." Do away with eternal contention, lay aside your wrangling, stop all factional differences get out from under two faceiness, and be honest with yourself and all others. Practice what you preach and that is "patronize home industry" as willingly as you are anxious to have that done to yourself and the town will be happier and more prosperous."

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders, while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks, of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper add the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

ALARMING MORTALITY

Noticeable Among the Weak and Ailing.

SPRING THE TIME DEATH REAPS ITS LARGEST HARVEST.

There Is a Way of Eluding the Grim Destroyer.

Every Spring it is noticeable how many people are taken away that we have been accustomed to see in our daily life.

Statistics show that at no other season of the year does so many deaths occur.

Especially large is the mortality among weak and sickly people.

The reason for this is apparent. The body that is weakened by age or disease has much to contend with during the Winter months. Insufficient exercise frequently has been taken. Too much starchy and fatty foods have been eaten. The system has been allowed to become run down, and when Spring comes with its bright, sunshiny days, older people will begin to realize that their vitality has become very low. The same thing is true of people who are naturally sickly and weak.

This is the season of the year when even a strong person feels at his worst. That tired, restless feeling is experienced by too many.

There need not be as many deaths this year as usually take place. A little care will ward off many Spring funerals. If one is weak or ailing they should take time by the forelock and take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This great medicine has been in many cases, and will continue to be, the means by which the black angel of Death has been driven from the threshold. It dispels the grim destroyer in a scientific way, for it purifies the blood and gives strength and vitality to the nerves. It tones up and restores to a healthy condition all of the great life-giving organs of the body.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will enable those who take it to throw off little ills that prove dangerous only when they attack a system already wasted and weakened.

From many people, who have experienced benefit from this greatest of all life-lengtheners, comes the following from the famous General Longstreet of 1217 New Hampshire Ave., Washington, D. C. He says:

"It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony with many others for Dr. Greene's Remedy, which I have used with highly beneficial results, and I am able to recommend its virtues from experience. I have used it for catarrh and have derived help."

Mr. Wellington Hynes, Elizabethtown, N. Y., writes:

"I feel it my duty to tell how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura has done me. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night and everything worried me. I had no appetite and could not work, my head ached all the time and there was an all-gone feeling in my stomach, and I was always looking on the dark side of everything. I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. I can now do as much work as is expected of a man my age. I advise anyone who is troubled to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not go to a doctor but get a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. It is cheaper than a doctor's bill."

The latter part of Mr. Hynes' advice might be profitably disregarded, however, if you should feel you would like the advice of a physician. You can have such advice and have it free if you will write or call on the greatest known blood and nerve specialist, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

Good talkers are plentiful but good listeners are hard to find.

Some cough remedies hide a cough; they drug it into silence, but the irritation stays in the lungs to cause trouble. Morley's Honey Pectoral soothes, heals, strengthens and cures thoroughly. The cough stops because the cause is removed. Price 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

Honesty is undoubtedly the best policy but it keeps many a man poor.

Rich, Red Blood.

Morley's Sarsaparilla and Iron not only purifies the blood, but makes new, rich, red blood. If you have skin eruptions, boils, abscesses, rheumatism or scrofula, or if you have a run-down, tired-out feeling, try this remedy and note the prompt results. Ask your druggist.

RUSSIANS ENTRENCHING.

Both Russians and British Are Awaiting Instructions.

London, March 16.—A dispatch from Tien Tsin, received here by Reuter's Telegram company, dated from that city yesterday at 3:20 p. m., says:

"The Russians are now entrenching in the disputed territory. A company of the Hong Kong regiment, with fixed bayonets, is in front, while two companies of the Madras pioneers, under the command of Major Johnson, are held in reserve. Both the Russians and the British are awaiting instructions from their governments."

GEN. HARRISON DEAD.

Ex-President's Death Due to an Attack of Pneumonia—Sick a Week.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 13.—General Harrison died at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon without regaining consciousness. His death was quiet and painless, there being a gradual sinking until the end came, which was marked by a single gasp for breath as life departed from the great statesman.

General Harrison had been unconscious for hours before his death, the exact time when he passed into a comatose state being hard to determine.

The sudden illness of the general recalled to many persons that he had been in public more this winter than for many years, and it was remembered, too, that he had never before appeared so willing to discuss subjects of general interest. On New Year's day he made a notable address at the dedication of the Columbia club building and since that time has been conspicuously in the public mind by reason of the things he has been saying in a series of articles in the North American Review.

General Harrison was in perfect health last Wednesday and, contrary to common report, was not suffering from a cold or from illness of any sort. He was in full possession of the vitality and vigor which has characterized these later years of his life to a remarkable extent.

Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock he went down town to the law office of Miller & Elam, where he remained for about an hour and a half talking with friends. He walked all the distance to get the benefit of the exercise.

He returned from the afternoon walk without even feeling fatigue and in the evening went to one of the neighbors to make a short call. He then came home, and after talking with his wife and playing with baby Elizabeth for an hour, retired early.

Thursday morning he awakened with a pain in his chest which, at first, was hardly noticeable, but later gradually grew worse until Mrs. Harrison became alarmed and the family physician, Dr. Henry Jameson, was summoned. He pronounced it simply a cold; and at the time feared no alarming results.

Then the lungs became rapidly affected and the illness was complicated with intercostal neuralgia. Saturday his condition was serious, but not such as to cause particular alarm. Sunday for the first time the physicians began to have fears for the recovery of the patient, but said little to the public about the seriousness of General Harrison's condition.

The next day it was announced to the newspapers and to the public that the illness was more alarming than was at first supposed and there was danger that the general would never recover from the attack. Since Monday morning his condition has gradually grown worse.

None of General Harrison's children were present at his death. Neither Colonel Russell nor Mrs. McKee had reached the city, though both were hurrying on their way to the bedside of their dying parent as fast as steam would bear them. Elizabeth, the little daughter, had been taken from the sick room by her nurse before the end came.

From one who was present at the deathbed it is learned that the allegations of cruelty and injustice dealt out by England to the Boers in their struggle for liberty had been a subject for thought in the mind of General Harrison. To his friends he had often spoken of the pity and shame, as he viewed it, that the brave and sturdy farmers of South Africa should be robbed of their country, of all they have in the world, and forced to submit to terrible miseries in resisting the oppressions of a world power.

General Harrison, it is stated, would have liked nothing better than to come out frankly and strongly and say to everyone who would hear what he thought of England's cruelty; it was in his mind constantly; but he believed that an ex-president should observe the same proprieties of speech which are observed by a president of the United States. He was at all times careful to say nothing which could be misconstrued or twisted into a seeming regard of the high office which he once held.

In his semi-conscious condition, when the sentinels of discretion and propriety had gone from their posts and the mind of the man was wandering, he began to speak of the Boers and their hopeless struggle for national life. His voice was weak and trembling, his thoughts were not connected, but the listeners bending over him could hear words of pity for the dying farmer republics.

ARMISTICE NOW GENERAL.

Pending the Arrival of Gen. DeWet Hostilities Cease.

New York, March 14.—A special dispatch from Pretoria to the Journal and Advertiser, says:

Pending the arrival of General DeWet, a general armistice has been declared. General Botha has been in conference with General Kitchener and Sir Alfred Milner for several days and all three desire to consult DeWet.

DeWet is hurrying north through the Orange river colony in obedience to Botha's summons. He passed Brandfort last night. On his arrival a conference will be held here. There is joy today, caused by the hope that the last gun has been fired in the Boer war.

Gen. Trias Surrenders.

Washington, March 18.—The war department has received a cablegram General MacArthur at Manila, announcing, the surrender of Lieut. Gen. Trias, with nine officers and 199 well armed men. MacArthur continues:

"Most auspicious event; indicates final stage armed insurrection Prestige Trias southern Luzon equal to Aguinaldo."

Actors as a rule are pretty well posted—so says a bill sticker.

May Be New Attorney General.

Philadelphia, March 16.—A report is in circulation in this city that John G. Johnson, a leading member of the Philadelphia bar, and one of the most prominent attorneys in this country, has been offered the portfolio of attorney general in President McKinley's cabinet, to succeed Attorney General Griggs. When asked by a reporter for the Associated Press if he had been offered the attorney generalship, Mr. Johnson said: "I refuse to either confirm or deny the report." Mr. Johnson is a staunch republican, but has never taken an active part in politics.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

TRYING TO DOWN A LAW.

Ministers and Saloon Men at Clinton in a Deadlock.

Clinton, March 18.—About the only subject of conversation here now is the discussion of the saloon question which is becoming most serious and threatens to disturb the people and the business of the city in no small manner. Every saloon in the city, numbering about fifty, is closed and the liquor dealers declare that not one will be opened and no others started until the members of the ministerial association withdraw the injunction proceedings.

The day following the filing of the injunction suits, the Liquor Dealers' association met and by a majority vote decided to close every saloon in the city and remain closed until the ministers had been forced by public sentiment to withdraw the suits.

About a third of the liquor dealers are ready to come under the mulct law but the dealers not centrally located say they could not exist under the mulct law and being in the majority, by vote, forced all of the dealers to remain closed.

The Turner society and also the Tri-City Labor congress have adopted resolutions, condemning the action of the ministers. Most of the drug stores have taken out a permit to sell intoxicating drinks and it has been stated that some are doing a big business.

JUDGE HAYES DIES SUDDENLY.

Ex-Congressman Succumbs to Angina Pectoris While Visiting in Michigan.

Marshall, Mich., March 15.—Judge Walter Ingalls Hayes, of Clinton, Iowa, died here very suddenly of angina pectoris at the home of the late Charles T. Gorham at 10 o'clock last night. Judge Hayes was born in Marshall in 1842 and attended the funeral of General Gorman yesterday. Last evening he had been calling on some old friends and neighbors and when he reached the Gorman home, about 9:40 p. m., he sank immediately upon a couch, complaining of a pain in his side. He was unconscious until relieved by death.

He practiced law here directly after the close of the war, going to Clinton late in the sixties. He was an ardent democrat and served in the national house of representatives three terms from the second district of Iowa. At present he was serving as circuit judge in his home district.

GIVEN ONE YEAR FOR FRAUD.

Federal Court Makes Quick Work of Gilbert J. Moffett's Case.

Omaha, March 18.—Gilbert J. Moffett, who was indicted by the federal grand jury for using the mails to defraud, was brought into the federal court in Council Bluffs for trial. Moffett pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a sentence of one year and a day in the penitentiary, and was taken to the Fort Madison prison. Moffett admitted the above name to be his right one and said he had a wife and two children in Denver. He pleaded for a light sentence on account of his family. This is the quickest work of any case that has ever come before the federal court in this district.

Rock Island Extension to Sioux City.

Sioux City, March 16.—Much interest is being taken here in the report that the Rock Island will extend its Guthrie Center branch to Sioux City. It is thought quite possible that the Rock Island may make a connection with the St. Louis, Iowa & Dakota road in the extreme northwest corner of Audubon county, just north of Carroll county. From this point of union the St. Louis, Iowa & Dakota survey cuts across the northwest corner of Carroll county, clips the northeast corner of Crawford and runs through Ida and Woodbury counties into Sioux City. There has been talk of an alliance between these two lines for some time. Captain T. P. Gere, president of the St. Louis, Iowa & Dakota road, said: "The coming of the Rock Island to Sioux City would be of enormous advantage to the city, and it seems to me it is certain to come in due time."

Robbed of His Land.

Eldora, March 18.—J. A. Fisher, aged 80, states that he was swindled out of a quarter section of land lying in Dakota just across the line from this state, worth $6,000. The old man had made an unimportant agreement with the principal defendant and under pretense of reducing the agreement to writing a deed was wrung in on him which completely absorbed his title. The act was not performed by traveling professionals, but by home talent and the developments at the next term of court will furnish a racy sensation involving several parties.

Starts a Skunk Farm.

Sioux City, March 15.—A skunk farm is being established near this city by S. Richards of Leeds. He will raise the odoriferous animals in order to reap a profit off the sale of skins and oil. There is little demand for the rest of the animal's anatomy. John J. Friel tried skunk raising for profit near here several years ago, and after the first year has been trying to exterminate the progeny of the pairs used in stocking the farm. The business is a profitable one, but not a pleasant occupation, if one's nasal senses are overly acute.

Poisoned Cattle at Melvin.

Melvin, March 16.—Philip Scherzer, a farmer near here, has received word from Ames, where he sent the stomachs of several dead cattle, to the effect that arsenic had been found. When the snow left, several more of his cattle died, and an investigation developed the fact that bags of oats and corn had been placed in the field, saturated with arsenic. The deed is supposed to be one of revenge.

Prosecuted a Dairyman.

Waverly, March 16.—A. M. Mushies, a dairyman, was arrested here upon complaint of Dairy Commissioner Norton, charged with selling adulterated milk. Mr. Norton tested the milk and found that it contained water. Mushies was fined $25 and costs, amounting to $7.

Crazed by Blood Poisoning.

Dubuque, March 15—Miss Kate Loes ran a needle into her arm, making a slight wound which resulted in blood poisoning. She has now been removed to the asylum. The physicians say that her insanity is the result of nervous prostration brought on by blood poisoning.

Bulldog Attacks a Child.

Keokuk, March 16.—Elmer Leak, the ten-year-old son of Andrew J. Leak, was bitten by a vicious bulldog. It sank its teeth into the boy's leg to the bone. When several men came up they had to pry the dog's jaws loose.

Ghrist Gets Six Years.

Knoxville, March 12.—Austa Ghrist was sentenced to six years at hard labor in the penitentiary. The length of sentence was a surprise to Ghrist and the public in general, owing to the young man's former standing here. No doubt there never was a more smooth forging scheme perpetrated upon the people than the one in which Ghrist has been implicated. It was one of long standing, as as fast as the smaller notes that he had forged came due he forged one for a larger sum and paid off the ones for the smaller sums. The banks are not alone losers in this deal, but several prominent farmers were caught.

COST THE STATE A LARGE SUM.

University Fire Loss Will Aggregate Nearly $150,000.

Iowa City, March 14.—Through the efforts of Prof. A. V. Sims the valuable 100,000 pound cement and iron testing machine was saved to the university, as under his direction a stream of water was kept playing on it for over three hours. He was also the means of saving the engineering library of 750 volumes, valued at $2,600. Mr. Wright, the superintendent of the college of liberal arts building, had all the plans and records pertaining to the new building in the basement of south hall, but they were saved entire. Dr. Bierring lost a valuable pathological collection, which represented twenty years of labor in collecting, and a similar collection cannot be procured for any amount of money. A conservative estimate made by Secretary Haddock is as follows:

Medical building	$ 45,000
South hall	30,000
Bacteriological collection	10,000
Physiological apparatus	1,600
Medical microscopes	8,000
Medical museum	8,000
Dr. Bierring, books, slides, etc.	1,000
Dr. Whitels, books	40
Dr. Dean, books	30
Prof. Wilcox, books	50
Prof. Sims, private equipment	300
Students in engineering	75
Medical students	25
Dr. Harriman, books	25
Other losses	260
	$106,305
Medical library	3,000
	$109,305

Fully 30 per cent can be safely added to the above amount in order to cover the total loss.

BENNETT IS TO RESIGN.

Bank Examiner Opens a Savings Bank at Sioux City.

Sioux City, March 18.—State Bank Examiner Fred A. Bennett, with his brother, C. T. Bennett, of Alvord, Ia., and his uncle, Representative A. Bennett, of Manning, Ia., has organized a new savings bank for Sioux City with a capital stock of $50,000. Fred Bennett will be president, A. T. Bennett cashier and C. T. Bennett assistant cashier. A good share of the stock has been distributed among investors through this section of Iowa and in South Dakota. Both Fred Bennett and his uncle, A. T. Bennett, have been familiar figures among the younger republican politicians of this state. The first named has served as state bank examiner for several years, but he will now give this position up.

Road to Be Built.

Traer, March 14.—The Dubuque & Toledo railroad project is being renewed and a second survey is expected soon. A preliminary survey was made a year ago. The projected purpose is to build from Dubuque west and south, crossing Benton and Tama counties, and terminating at present at Toledo or Tama, but ultimately extending to Des Moines.

Judge Struble of Toledo is one of the projectors and of course desires the line if built to terminate at Toledo. Dubuque business men are especially anxious to get the outlet such a line would afford on account of jobbing trade. They are now raising money with which to make the survey.

Boers Still Raiding.

Adelaide, Cape Colony, March 15.—Kritzinger's commando is working northward and has eluded three British columns. It passed here on both sides of the town without attacking. A Boer patrol captured four native scouts and shot three of them.

Kritzinger's men have carried off all the horses in the Albany district, for which, as they were registered, Great Britain will have to pay 10,000 pounds. The raiders were civil to the inhibitants of the district, though they commandeered the horses and food. They did not indulge in the wanton destruction of property and in many cases offered cash for the food they obtained.

Smallpox in Poweshiek.

Grinnell, March 15.—Because a doctor diagnosed smallpox as "Cuban itch" the people of Hartwick, in the southern part of Poweshiek county, have been wrestling with the disease since January, and the disease has been spreading all over the county. The schools and churches of Brooklyn have been closed. Smallpox has invaded Grinnell, and there is no telling where it will stop. Upon recommendations of outside physisians and County Attorney Talbott, a strict quarantine is now in force.

The Lutheran college at Jewell Junction has been quarantined on account of smallpox. Several students escaped before the quarantine was declared.

Get a Big Contract.

Waterloo, March 16.—C. E. Atkinson of Webster City has been awarded the contract for the erection of the new Black Hawk county court house. The price named by Mr. Atkinson is $78,990, which does not include the marble columns for the front of the building nor other certain figures for the dome. The heating plant will be installed by W. I. Gray & Co. of Minneapolis for $4,110, and the plumbing will be done by the firm of Wallace & McNamara of Des Moines for $1,944.

Farm Hand Is Shot.

Council Bluffs, March 14.—Cyrus Stucker, a farm hand living at Carson, in this county, was the victim of an accidental shot from a long range rifle held in his own hands. Stucker with three other men were passing a country school house in a wagon, when a boy threw a snowball at the men. Stucker picked up the gun and playfully shook it at the boys. When he laid it back in the bottom of the wagon it discharged and the ball entered Stucker's heart, killing him instnatly.

Shot Through the Lungs.

Onawa, March 14.—Lloyd Brooks, son of George H. Brooks, a farmer living near Maple Landing, was engaged in cleaning his shot gun, and supposing it to be empty, when in some manner the gun was discharged, the load or shot passing through a door and into the person of Miss Baker who was brought to Onawa for treatment and her injuries are not regarded as fatal.

Doctor Will Bet $500.

Sioux City, March 18.—Dr. J. Ross says no case of smallpox exists in Iowa and offers to wager $500 on his opinion. He says that the test is to take the patients who have recovered from the disease that the city physician calls smallpox, vaccinate them with virus from unquestioned smallpox cases, and they will be found not to be immune.

In 1800 there were in all the world less than fifty shipbuilding yards. Today there are more than 700 shipbuilding yards, turning out a total of 1,000 vessels yearly.

Mr. Fuller Will Accept.

Cedar Rapids, March 15.—W. E. Fuller, of West Union, will accept appointment as assistant attorney general made by President McKinley several days ago. The story of his declination was without authority. Announcement of his acceptance has been made on the authority of his son-in-law.

Saw Mill Blew Up.

Marshalltown, March 11.—The boiler of a portable saw mill exploded at Montour, hurling L. G. Carter a hundred feet and probably fatally injuring him. Harry Smith was badly scalded and had his leg broken.

FARMING IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Great Natural Fertility of the Soil in Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

What Has Been Done by Premier Greenway, Himself a Leading Farmer.

Hon. Thomas Greenway, Premier of the Province of Manitoba, one of the foremost farmers of Western Canada, writes an excellent article to the press, from which the following extracts are made:

The writer came to Manitoba from Ontario in the autumn of 1878, and has ever since been engaged in agricultural pursuits. From the day, nearly twenty-two years ago, when he selected his homestead, he has had unbounded faith in the country as a place where farming can be successfully carried on, if pursued upon proper lines. There is a large number in this province who should rather be called "wheat-growers" than farmers. On account of the facilities, natural advantages, and therefore cheapness with which wheat can be grown, no doubt many have done exceedingly well by raising wheat only; still, it is far from ideal farming. Not only will such a course, if persisted in, have the effect of causing the land to run out, as has been the experience of those who pursued the same plan in the wheat-producing prairie States to the south of us, but it is far from being the most profitable course to adopt.

This fact is already being demonstrated in Manitoba. Let the farms in this Western country be managed upon the lines which were successful in the Eastern Provinces, and much more can be done here in a given time than was ever done in the East. The probabilities of failure are practically nil. Upon the farm there should be found horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, according to the ability of the farmer, with respect to his means and the extent of his holding. The wanton waste which has hitherto been practiced by many farmers, that of burning vast quantities of excellent fodder after threshing is done, should cease; it should all be used upon the farm and converted into the old, sensible kind of fertilizer manure, and afterwards be returned to the soil, so that what has been taken from it by the crop may be restored. Although admitting that the great natural fertility of the soil in Manitoba and the success that has attended the growing of wheat after wheat for years upon the same land have a tendency to make such a course as the one mentioned tempting, yet, if continued, wheat growing upon the same land year after year is undoubtedly a mistake.

The writer knows of no country that offers advantages so great to the agriculturist as does Manitoba. The various branches of farming can be carried on successfully, as twenty-two years of practical operations and observations of what others are doing have proven. To those desiring to make new homes for themselves, the low price of some of the best lands in the world (although rapidly advancing in price this year) offers still great opportunities. To all such the invitation is cordially given to "Come and see." There need be no poor people here. There is land for all who choose to come, land upon which happy homes can be established, and from which ample resources can be gathered against old age. All that a man needs to achieve competence in this domain is common sense and industry. With these qualifications he is bound to succeed.

For information regarding free homestead lands, apply to any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in these columns.

LAID TO REST.

Services Over the Remains of the Late General Harrison.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—Beneath a canopy of black placed on the rotunda of the capitol building, the casket covered with the silken folds of the Stars and Stripes, surrounded by thousands of blossoms, while over all floated the great battle flag that floated from the warship Indiana during the naval battle off Santiago, the body of ex-President Harrison lay in state for nine hours Saturday.

During that time fully 50,000 people passed by the coffin to take a last look at the distinguished dead, and when at 10 o'clock the capitol doors were finally closed and the people told that no more could enter, there were several thousand more waiting patiently in line. The body lay in state from 1:10 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night, and not once during the hours was there a break or a halt in the lines that passed rapidly on by the right and left of the casket.

It was Indiana's day with her dead, and most touchingly was the esteem and honor in which General Harrison was held by his fellow citizens revealed. In front of the Harrison home, along the streets through which the remains were carried on their way to and from the state house, in lines that stretched at times half a mile from the door of the capitol building, men, women and children stood for hours waiting their opportunity to pay a tribute of respect to the dead. It was an immense throng, but one more easy to handle, or rather one that required less handling, never gathered anywhere. There was no jostling, no disorder, no disturbance of any kind. Not a single objectionable feature marred the day. Weather more perfect could not have been devised.

After brief ceremonies at the home, the remains were escorted to the capitol by the three regiments of state militia, accompanied by the various civic organizations.

Indianapolis, March 18.—The funeral services over the remains of General Harrison were held at the first Presbyterian church. The rites were conducted by Rev. M. L. Haines, for many years the close friend of the general, assisted by Rev. A. J. Niccolls, of St. Louis. President McKinley and prominent men from all parts of the country were in attendance.

The honorary pall-bearers were selected, as far as possible, from the members of ex-President Harrison's cabinet, as follows:

Ex-Secretary of the Navy General B. F. Tracy of New York, ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker of Philadelphia, ex-Attorney General W. H. H. Miller of Indianapolis, ex-Secretary of the Interior John W. Noble of St. Louis, ex-Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster of Fostoria, O.; General Lew Wallace of Crawfordsville, Ind.; Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati, who was attorney general under Cleveland, and Judge William Woods of Indianapolis.

The active pall-bearers were all from the city, and were men who were friends of General Harrison for many years. They were: Augustus L. Mason, James Whitcomb Riley, Evans Woolen, Harry J. Milligan, Clifford Arrick, William C. Bobbs, Harry S. New, Howard Cale, John L. Griffiths, Newton Booth Tarkington, Hilton U. Brown and Samuel Ried.

The remains were laid to rest in Crown Hill cemetery at sunrise, the United States arsenal fired a salute of thirteen guns, and at one half hours intervals throughout the day a gun was fired. Just before sunset a salute of forty-five guns was fired.

DUNS THE SULTAN.

Consul Gummere to Pay a Visit to Little Morocco.

New York, March 15.—A special to the World from Washington says: The cruiser New York will stop at Tangiers on the way to Manila and take on board Consul General Gummere, who will be conveyed to the nearest port to the Moroccan capital. The consul general is to demand that the sultan settle the claims of American citizens against his government. The New York will await the return of the consul general. The sultan recently liquidated one claim against his government but there are a number of other claims still pending which he has shown no disposition to settle.

The consul general could make the trip from Tangiers on merchant vessels plying in those waters, but it has been the policy of the administration to impress the sultan by a naval demonstration in Moroccan waters.

Most of the claims grew out of interference by Moroccan government officials with commercial agents of American business concerns. The amount involved is not large, but a principle is at stake.

NEGRO BURNED AT STAKE.

John Henderson Expiates His Crime at Corsicana, Tex.

Corsicana, Texas, March 14.—John Henderson, a colored man of this state, who outraged and murdered Mrs. Younger, the wife of a farmer living near here, several days ago, after making a complete confession, was burned at the stake by a mob in the presence of more than 5,000 persons.

Henderson had been taken to Hillsboro in fear of the mob that gathered in this city soon after his arrest. The officials in charge of the negro started to take him to Fort Worth for safety. When the train reached Itasca the officers were overpowered and the negro taken from them by citizens of the county who had gone there for that purpose.

Henderson was then brought here and with proof of his guilt he confessed. Preparations were made to put him to death by fire. The town was filled with people, most of them armed, and the sheriff could do nothing.

Shot DeRodays in the Thigh.

Paris, March 18.—In the duel fought between Count Boni de Castellant and M. de Rodays, the latter was wounded in the thigh. La Liberete says M. de Rodays was hit in the right thigh at the first exchange of shots. Count de Castellane was not injured. The duel was then stopped. The meeting occurred in the Pare des Princes, where many cycling events occurred last summer. The Count de Dion directed the duel. M. de Rodays, whose wound was in the lower fleshy part of the thigh, bled abundantly but is not seriously injured.

The Plague at Capetown.

Capetown, March 16—Seven fresh cases of bubonic plague, including one European victim, were officially reported today. In consequence of the removal of the Kaffirs to a reservation outside the city as a plague precaution, the Malays held a mass meeting today and resolved to resist eviction by force if necessary. Several thousands are now here.

Carnegie Libraries for New York.

New York, March 16.—Andrew Carnegie, who, since retiring as an active figure from the steel world, has been able to devote himself exclusively to his other passion, the founding of libraries, has made his departure for Europe this spring memorable by the largest of that kind ever advanced. If New York will provide the sites and the maintenance, he has promised to give $5,200,000 to establish sixty-five branch libraries in this city.

AFTER-EFFECTS OF LA GRIPPE.

THE after-effects of the grip are often disastrous. It is commonly known to the medical fraternity that the numerous ailments and complications which follow the grip are apt to be more serious than the acute stage of the disease.

Some people have the grip very lightly. They may be confined to the house only a day or two and yet a long train of disagreeable, disabling symptoms follow. All sorts of tonics and stimulating remedies have been devised to meet this condition. None of them can compare in results with Peruna.

Every one who has had the grip ought to take a short course of Peruna. Read what the following people have to say about it.

Washington, Feb. 4 1899.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."—M. W. Howard.

Grip Produces Catarrh.

Henry Distin, the inventor and maker of all the band instruments for the Henry Distin Mfg. Co., at Williamsport, Pa., writes:

1441 South Ninth Street,
Philadelphia, Pa., May 6, 1899.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Dear Sir:—"I write to inform you that I had a bad attack of la grippe last December which lasted more than three months and which left me with catarrh, when several of my friends advised me to try your wonderful medicine, Peruna. I began with a bottle the first week in March and it certainly did me a great deal of good. I was so well satisfied that I purchased another bottle and followed your directions, which you furnish with every bottle, and I am glad to say that it has cured me. I shall certainly recommend the Peruna to all my friends."

GRIP CAUSED NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

D. D. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barber's Union writes from 15 Western ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over. I suffered with a severe backache, indigestion and numerous ills, so I could neither eat nor sleep, and I thought I would give up my work, which I could not afford to do.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. I used it faithfully and felt a marked improvement. During the next two months I took five bottles, and then felt splendid. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Washington, April 24, 1900.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—"About two months ago I was taken very very ill with la grippe and was obliged to go to bed. I took three bottles of Peruna with very beneficial results and was able to leave my bed in a week, and regained my usual strength very soon. I have nothing but the highest praise for Peruna and recommend it to those similarly afflicted wherever I can."—Frances M. Anderson.

Grip Poisoned Her Blood.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctor called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned.

"I also suffered with dyspepsia, and had either to starve or suffer from what I was eating. A neighbor who was using Peruna praised it so highly that she induced me to try it, and I soon found this was what I really needed.

"I could soon eat my regular meals with relish, my system was built up my health returned, and I have remained in excellent strength and vigor now for over two years."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

Miss Alice Dressler, of 1313 N. Bryant ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes as follows concerning Peruna:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the Nervous Prostration.

A Noted Boston Woman Describes its Symptoms and Terrors.—Two Severe Cases Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

ADELE WILLIAMSON.

"I am so nervous! no one ever suffered as I do! There isn't a well inch in my body. I honestly believe my lungs are diseased, my chest pains me so, but I have no cough. I am so weak at my stomach, and have indigestion terribly, and palpitation of the heart; am losing flesh; and this headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I had hysterics.

"There is a weight in the lower part of my bowels, bearing down all the time, with pains in my groins and thighs—I can't sleep, walk, or sit, and blue—oh goodness! I am simply the most miserable of women."

This is a most vivid description of a woman suffering with nervous prostration, caused by inflammation or some other diseased condition of the womb.

No woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is no need of it. Read about Miss Williamson's case and how she was cured.

Two Bad Cases of Nervous Prostration Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM;—I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all, and was too weak to walk across the floor. My heart was affected so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."

MISS ADELE WILLIAMSON,
196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

"I had nervous prostration terribly, caused by female weakness. I suffered everything; was unable to eat, sleep, or work. After a while I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I really began to improve on taking the first bottle. I continued to take the medicine, and am now better in every way, and feel like a different person. I am simply a well woman."

A LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER X.—(Continued.)

The girls went up to the Manor that day to lunch by special invitation. Helen was still away, but her mother loved to have Kitty there; and, Alick being at a safe distance, the General made much of them. It was he who proposed to while away the afternoon by showing the girls over the house.

"You are not old enough for it to be painful to you, Kitty, and if we are to turn out in December it may be your last chance of seeing the old home. You know nothing is changed since your uncle's time. Mr. Lindon let it to me just as it stood, furniture and plate, even the family pictures included."

Kitty was delighted at the proposal. "There's a picture of father taken when a boy I really want to see, and another of poor little Lillian as a baby. Mr. Lindon must be thankful she died, or he'd have gained very little by his marriage."

They went to the picture gallery first. Kitty talked gaily, but Beryl was strangely silent. As she gazed on the portraits of dead-and-gone Dynevors the strangest feeling of having seen them all before came to her, and when she saw the picture of Lillian Dynevor, painted during her father's absence in Australia as a surprise for him, she had the oldest fancy that once, long ago, she, too, had sat on a low stool dressed in white, with a basket of primroses strewn on her lap.

It must have been fancy, and yet——

We have seen everything now except the old nurseries," said Mrs. Craven. "I never would use them because the last child who had played in them died."

"She fitted up new ones in the other wing, which weren't half so convenient or airy," said the General, with a smile. "So much for superstition."

The old nurseries had a deserted air. They had not been used since Nina Lindon's second marriage, and the big cupboards were still full of childish toys. Kitty opened the door of one and took out a large wax doll. Beryl nearly seized on it with a cry of delight. It seemed to her she had known that flaxen-haired baby as long as she had known anything.

"Poor little Lillian!" said Kitty gently. "To think that if she had lived she would have been twenty-two!"

"It is a pretty name; but I wonder she was not called after her mother."

"Aunt Nina's favorite flowers were lilies," explained Kitty; "but mother told me once the child was never called Lillian or Lilly. She called herself 'Pet' as soon as she could talk, and 'Pet' she remained up to the time of their going abroad."

"And how old was she then?"

"Just three. There were nearly four years between her and her little half-sister."

A servant approached with a perplexed face and addressed the General.

"Mr. Lindon wishes to see you, sir."

Kitty Dynevor's cheeks were crimson, her friend's face turned ashen pale.

"I suppose I must see him," growled the General, "and I can't be rude to him under his own roof; but I wish, for all that he had stayed away."

The General went downstairs to receive his unwelcome visitor. Kitty Dynevor, who had not the least desire to meet the man she regarded as her natural enemy, promptly declared she and Miss Lindon must be going home, and in a few inutes they were walking swiftly down the avenue.

But the butler had ushered Mr. Lindon into the library, which commanded a full view of the carriage drive. He was seated by the open daughter, and she is away from home."

Mr. Lindon sat out his full twenty minutes; but his attention wandered strangely, and General Craven felt certain when he rose to go he was planning some fresh wrong to the Dynevors, for his face was full of a malignant triumph.

"Kate," the old soldier told his wife later on, "I wish with all my heart now I had 5,000 pounds lying idle, and I'd lend it to Harold Dynevor with all the pleasure in life. Lindon's an evil man, if ever there was one, and I'd do something to keep Uplands from his clutches."

Mrs. Craven smiled. Years younger than her husband, there was a good deal of romance left in her still.

"Even though our boy has the good taste to admire a 'penniless lass with a long pedigree,' I tell you this, James, I'd rather Alick married Kitty Dynevor without a silver sixpence than Eustace Lindon's heiress."

window, and he distinctly saw the two girls pass. He broke off abruptly in the middle of a sentence to ask:

"Are those your daughters, General?"

He knew perfectly that the answer would be in the negative.

"No," said General Craven shortly. "One is Miss Dynevor, the other a young lady engaged in a school near here. I have only one grown-up daughter

CELLER DIGGING and OTHER EXCAVATING DONE.
PHILIPP ELL. PROPRIETOR.

Joe Lawhorn and wife pleasantly entertained a few of their friends last Wednesday evening the occasion being in honor of Miss Minnie Cramer, the time was spent in playing carom and authors and as usual supper was served consisting of dainty but appetizing viands.

Some one bent on doing evil cut the rope on the Gilbert flag pole and carried it off thus depriving the teacher and pupils the use of the flag untill the frost goes out of the ground enough to dig the pole up or climb the pole and put a new rope in. Anyone that will steal a flag rope is not much better than a Fillipino.

The spelling school here last Friday evening was a decided success, a good program was carried out, to mention it all would take too much space, two prizes were offered in the spelling contest the first to the one spelling the school down and the second the booby prize went to Mr. Gauley for missing the first word. Everyone seemed to have a good time.

STORY OF A JNAWAY.

Showing the Foolish Things Excited People Will Sometimes Do.

All the details of a runaway accident that startled a throng of shoppers did not get into the papers. Most people know how the spirited horses, for the time wholly unmanageable, dashed down the street, how the natty little brougham was overturned and how the woman in it was rescued uninjured, except for the fright and the bruises incident to such a shaking up. But that is all they do know. They don't know, says the Milwaukee Sentinel, the side of the accident that is causing glee within the intimate family circle of the woman herself. The carriage was upset on one of the crowded downtown streets, and a small army of men rushed to the rescue of the occupant while the coachman, gathering himself up after his tumble, ran after the horse. Through the window of the brougham, as it lay on its side, the rescuers could see the woman, a heap of fur and silks and laces and frightened femininity crouched in one corner. They shouted to her to cover her head while they broke open the door so that the falling glass would not injure her, and then having demolished the side of the carriage they tenderly lifted her out. Once on solid ground, her wits came back to her. She looked at the wrecked carriage, then at the men, some of whom had cut their hands on the broken glass, and then back to the carriage again.

"Why didn't you open the door?" she asked, mildly. "It would have saved all that trouble."

H., "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicine I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellant health for years. She says Electric bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For Sale by J. L. Harr.

Twice Proven,

From the Vindicator, Ruthfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For Sale by J. L. Harr.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. Announcement.

A. M. DEYOE,

Great Western's latest Move.

Klemme Will Be Honored.

Prospects Are Good For Another Railroad Through Klemme.

"At a late hour last Saturday evening a leading business man of our town was called from his warm cot for an interview with a stranger who was looking the ground over for the above company. It seems that the whole move is on the quiet and only those most interested are allowed the privilege of knowing what is going on. The surveyors, who were at that time a short distance northwest of town, did not know what was up. The survey starts within a mile of the terminus of the Chicago Great Western at Hampton and passes west of Sheffield near the McKenzie church and crosses the Chicago Great Western at this place.

From here the route as laid out goes by way of Klemme, striking the Linden Ranche northwest of town. From Klemme it takes a northwest course and crosses the Milwaukee at Britt, then to Titonka, Bancroft, Swea City, Eagle Lake and Fairmont, Minn., where they have no orders further, but expect to go on from there in the same direction.

The party gave the gentlemen here to understand that this was to be a division point and was particular to know what could be secured in the way of a yard, shops and depot room. He was assured that anything the Great Western wanted would be granted without a murmer. Between Fairmont, Minn., and Sumner, Iowa, it is as near two hundred miles as a road can make it and as Thornton is centerally located, and being on their newly acquired M. C. & Ft. D. line gives us ample assurance of the division. The route from Hampton to Fairmont is through a territory hitherto unoccupied and will be a great feeder for the Chicago road of stock and grain and opens up a vast market for their newly acquired coal fields in Webster county. The town of Klemme, in Hancock county, has felt the need of a direct Chicago market and will hail with delight the advent of the Chicago Great Western. Britt, while having one of the best lines out of Chicago, will benefit by the competition the new line affords and all the way through to the terminus it will be a matter of great rejoicing.

That Thornton has room to feel grateful none need dispute. 'Tis an old saying that "everything comes to the man who waits," and the good Lord knows we have waited long and patiently. That a new era in our history is about to open, those on the inside of the move feel certain and we believe that when we meet to celebrate the 4th of July 1901 we will have something to celebrate that will make the oldest inhabitant burst his suspenders. Let here come, we'll be here.

The Chicago Great Western is one of the heaviest lines 'thru-out this part of the state, and to have a branch come from it up through Klemme means a boom both rich and rare. This place will heartily appreciate a move of this kind and our business will yield liberally to the advancement of this proposition and deal now in negotation. Although we now have good shipping facilities more can be utilized to a great advantage, and a good through line like the Great Western to Chicago and other eastern markets would do a wonderful lot of good for the farmers and stock raisers hereabouts. It seems to be an assured fact that it will come and Klemme will not be the loser. There is not a dissenting voice within seeing or hearing and a right of way will be given up cheerfully by our property owners. We too say: Let her come! No. 72, everybody sing!

The fact that we have slurred any of Klemme's business men remains to be seen, To be sure, we have reprimanded and said some harsh things to some of our boys, (Bro. Bracket has done the same, and who wouldn't when they as gay as the Bro. is at present) but if one instance can be sighted by the brother, wherein we have defamed one Klemme citizen and 'business' man, he can come right into this den of religeon and poke his finger into our left eye. (Our right eye is a little off sight now.) He knows no more of what he is talking than a whale has feathers and forwards a larger bare faced, pure, unadulterated falsity than we even dared to think of. Taken from a business standpoint we believe our newspaper work as regards advertising is far in the lead and as to other work we have a vague idea that our work will stand the test of merit with his. If he can give us much "value received" for advertising Klemme enterprises as the TIMES can we would be thankful and glad to have him measure up and prove it. That's business for Klemme dealers and is a proposition they will profit by if the editor up the line dares to tackle. What's he ever done in the way of booming our town that merits such libelous statments and the patronage of this community? Nothing, but to boom his purse and create contention among Klemme people That's the only good we can see!

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stocks as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies in the United States and and Europe are held by small investors having few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. The profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced shares of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for and to add the limited productiveness of copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at good prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be realized by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Development Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced shares now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

STORY OF THE CAPTURE

Suffering of Funston and Companions on the March.

Manila, March 29.—Aguinaldo, who was captured by General Funston and Boers were killed or wounded."

"Our losses were slight. Many brought to Manila on the United States gunboat Vicksburg, was brought ashore at 3:10 p. m. yesterday and taken before General MacArthur at the Malacanang palace. He talked freely, but seemed ignorant concerning recent events. He appeared to be in good health and was even cheerful. He lunched with the officers of General MacArthur's staff, and was then escorted to the Anda street jail.

General Funston gives out the following story of the capture:

"On the night of March 8 the party who were to go after Aguinaldo embarked on the United States gunboat Vicksburg. It was originally intended to take cascoes from the island of Polillo and to drift to the mainland, but a storm arose and three of the cascoes were lost. This plan was abandoned. At 2 a. m. March 14 the Vicksburg put her lights out and ran in sore twenty-five miles south of Casiguran, province of Principe. The party landed and marched to Casiguran. The Americans had never garrisoned this place, and the inhabitants are strong insurgent sympathizers. Having arrived there the insurgent officers, ostensibly commanding the party, announced that they were on the way to join Aguinaldo between Pautobang and Baler; that they had surprised an American surveying party, and that they had killed a number, capturing five. They exhibited General Funston and the other Americans as their prisoners.

The insurgent president of Casiguran believed the story. Two of the Pacuna letters, previously concocted, were forwarded to Aguinaldo at Palanan, province of Isabella. General Funston and the others were kept imprisoned for three days, surreptitiously giving orders at night. On a small quantity of crackers and corn, the party started on a ninety mile march to Palanan. The country is rough and uninhabited and provisions could not be secured. The party ate small shell fish, but were almost starved. Wading swift rivers, climbing precipitous mountains and penetrating dense jungles, they marched seven days and nights, and March 7 had reached a point eight miles from Palanan. They were now so weak that it was necessary to send to Aguinaldo's camp for food. Aguinaldo dispatched supplies and directed that the American prisoners be kindly treated, but not be allowed to enter the town.

On the morning of March 23 the advance was resumed. The column was met by the staff officers of Aguinaldo's body guard, which was ordered to take charge of the Americans.

While one of the ex-insurgent officers conversed with Aguinaldo's aide, to warn General Funston the rest who, with eleven Macabebes, were about an hour behind. Having received this warning General Funston avoided Aguinaldo's detachment and joined column, avoiding observation. The Tagalos went ahead to greet Aguinaldo and the column slowly followed, finally arriving at Palanan.

Aguinaldo's household troops, fifty men in neat uniforms of blue and white and wearing straw hats, lined up to receive the newcomers. General Funston's men crossed the river in small boats, formed on the banks, and marched to the right and then in front of the insurgent grenadiers. The Tagalos entered the house where Aguinaldo was.

Suddenly the Spanish officer, noticing that Aguinaldo's aide was watching the Americans suspiciously, exclaimed:

'Now, Macabebes, go for them."

The Macabebes opened fire, but their aim was rather ineffective, and only three insurgents were killed. The rebels returned the fire. On hearing the firing, Aguinaldo, who evidently thought his men were merely celebrating the arrival of reinforcements, ran to the window and shouted:

"Stop that foolishness; quit wasting ammunition."

Hilario Placido, one of the Tagalo officers and a former insurgent major, who was wounded in the lung by the fire of the Kansas regiment at the battle of Caloocan, threw his arms around Aguinaldo, exclaiming:

"You are a prisoner of the Americans."

Colonel Simeon Villa, Aguinaldo's chief of staff; Major Alambra and others attacked the men who were holding Aguinaldo. Placido shot Villa in the shoulder. Alambra jumped out of the window and attempted to cross the river. It is supposed that he was drowned. Five other insurgent officers fought for a few minutes and then fled, making their escape.

When the firing began, General Funston assumed command and directed the attack on the house, personally assisting in the capture of Aguinaldo. The insurgent body guard fled, leaving twenty rifles. Sango Barcelona, the insurgent treasurer, surrendered without resistence. When captured, Aguinaldo was tremendously excited, but he calmed down under General Funston's assurance that he would be well treated. General Funston secured all of Aguinaldo's correspondence, showing that he had kept in close touch with the chiefs of the insurrection in all parts of the archipelago. It was also discovered that Aguinaldo, January 1 had proclaimed himself dictator.

He had been living at Palanan for seven months, undisturbed except by a detachment of the Sixteenth infantry visited the town. On that occasion the entire population took to the mountains and remained there until the troops retired.

The scarcity of elephants in India may be inferred from the fact that in 1894 an elephant could be bought there for $225; now the price has advanced to $4,000.

Boston letter carrier, Philip Pilsbury, has been thus employed since September, 1858. During the forty-two years of his service he has walked over 75,000 miles.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

SURVEY FOR THE CUT-OFF.

Milwaukee Begins Operations on a Line From Muscatine to Ottumwa.

Des Moines, March 30.—The Milwaukee & St. Paul engineers are in the field and have begun a survey of the proposed cut-off from Davenport via Muscatine to Ottumwa to a connection with the Kansas City line at Ottumwa. Engineer Nicholson, in charge of the engineering corps, stated to a friend at Muscatine that his instructions were to survey a line straight through from Muscatine to Ottumwa, without regard to towns. For instance, the proposed survey will cross the line of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern between Coneville and Columbus Junction without passing through either place. The survey will extend westward from Coneville within a few miles of the southwestern division of the Rock Island, to Washington through Grace Hill, and cross the Skunk river in the south part of Cedar Creek township in Keokuk county. Thence it will bear southwest into Wapello county via Competine, a small village in the northeastern part of the county. From Competine the route will be southwest at a sharp angle to Ottumwa, where connection will be made with the line from Marion to Kansas City. It is expected by the Milwaukee to complete this line before next fall, and throw it open to traffic. It will give the Milwaukee the shortest line from Kansas City to Chicago, and place it in a position to command the traffic between those cities. It will cross the Iowa Central and the Burlington & Western at Richland, Keokuk county, and give that town direct connection with Davenport, Muscatine and Chicago.

HAS THE RIGHT TO LABOR.

Iowa Convicts Not Punishable by Solitary Confinement.

Des Moines, March 30.—The unique instance of a man so insistent on doing hard labor as to have the sentence of a court partly set aside in order to enable him to toil, has just come to light. The individual is Patrick E. Price, a convict to Anamosa penitentiary. Price was sent to Anamosa from Plymouth county, being sentenced for eighteen months for the crime of larceny. He arrived at the prison March 15. Since then he has been in solitary confinement.

Price grew tired of being idle and wanted to work. Warden Hunter refused to let him to do so, as the court in sentencing him had omitted the words "at hard labor." The same phrase was left out of the mittimus. The warden held he could not allow Price to labor under the circumstances, so he was obliged to languish idly in his solitary cell.

Finally Price wrote out a request to Warden Hunter, humbly pleading to be allowed to do hard labor. The request, with an explanation of the circumstances, was forwarded by Warden Hunter to the board of control. This body sought an opinion from the attorney general. The latter has returned a ruling in the case. By the grace of it, Price can now work to his heart's content. Mr. Mullan holds that by section 5675 of the code it is required that all punishment of persons imprisoned in the penitentiary must be by hard labor and not by solitary confinement.

CHICAGO GREAT WESTERN.

Seems to Be Absorbed by the Harriman Syndicate.

Des Moines, March 29.—There are not lacking indications that control of the Chicago Great Western will soon pass from President Stickney and the English bondholders allied with him to the Herriman syndicate. Vice President Oppenheim is quoted as confirming the report of the probable transfer of the Great Western to the great syndicate. Mr. Oppenheim stated that negotiations were pending which may result in the road being absorbed. In the event of the control of the Great Western passing to the Herriman syndicate it is the general opinion that the Northwestern will be given control of the southern part from Oelwein to St. Joe and Kansas City, thus giving the Northwestern a long desired connection with Kansas City, while the Chicago-St. Paul part of the system would be given over to the Illinois Central. This would place the Northwestern on even terms with its great competitors, the Burlington and Milwaukee & St. Paul, for southwestern business via the Kansas City gateway.

SHORTAGE AT PARNELL.

Inspector Finds Postmaster at that Place $2,000 Short.

Iowa City, March 29.—C. E. Stewart, United States inspector of postoffices, has discovered a shortage of $2,000 in the money order department of the postoffice at Parnell. He visited the office and in making his inspection discovered that about $2,000 had been taken in in the department which had not been accounted for.

Mr. Stewart began making a search through the office and found hidden away in various places about $700 in bills, still $1,300 short. Mr. Stewart reported his finding to the postmaster, who was considerably surprised, but when shown the books and accounts went out and raised the required amount of money. Inspector Stewart is working on the case and the guilty party, whoever it is, will be prosecuted.

Revenue Stamp Offices Abolished.

Burlington, March 30.—In accordance with the order from Washington, the positions of six internal revenue employes have been declared vacant. The offices are those of J. A. O'Neal of Burlington, traveling collector; Miss Smith, local cashier, and the stamp deputies at Keokuk, Ottumwa, Clinton and Muscatine. The saving to the southeastern revenue district will be $3,600. The abolishment of the outside offices will result in increasing the revenue business at the Burlington office by $350 per day. Collector Kemble says the abolishment of the Ottumwa office will be quite a hardship to the cigar manufacturers of that city, and will mean an additional total expense of about $40 a month in getting their stamps by mail from Burlington.

Bullet in Hi Nose.

Davenport, March 31.—Harry French, who has beeen attending the school at Faribault, Minn., is in the hospital there as a result of a bullet fired by a companion, lodging in his nose. He and a schoolmate were having target practice with a pistol. Harry was throwing objects in the air for flying targets, and the other lad was manipulating the firearm.

Bank Robers at Riverside.

Cedar Rapids, March 28.—The savings bank at Riverside was broken into early yesterday morning. The burglars drilled through the steel doors of the vault, but the inner safe resisted their efforts. They secured only a small sum of money from the cash drawer and escaped on a hand car towards Iowa City. There is no clue.

FRANCHISES GRANTED.

Indianola and Winterset Vote for an Electric Railroad.

Indianola, March 26.—The proposition to grant a franchise to J. S. Polk, president of the Des Moines City Railway company, for the construction of an interurban street railway over parts of the streets of this city to connect with the Des Moines system, carried by a vote of 578 to 101, with nearly a full vote polled.

Winterset, March 26.—The proposition to grant a franchise to the Winterset and Creston electric railway project was adopted at the election in this city by a majority of 132.

EXPRESS LINES ASSESSED.

There Is a Slight Raise in the General Assessment.

Des Moines, March 30.—The arithmetical problem of assessing the express companies of the state has been completed by the executive council. There is a slight increase in the assessments made this year over those of last year. All of the members of the council are agreed that the increase should have been greater but the Cheshire law gives the council no alternative than to follow its provisions to the letter.

The new assessment compared with that of last year, also the number of miles operated by each company, follows:

	No. miles in Iowa.	Ass'm't per mile. 1901.	1900.
American	2465.52	$33 1-3	$33
Pacific	139.88	25	24
Great Northern	77.98	25	37
Wells, Fargo & Co.	548.00	25	25
United States	4208.04	25	24
Adams	1858.00	30	25

In assessing the express companies by the Cheshire law the council is required to arrive at the actual value of the business of the various companies in the state and make its assessments accordingly. Reports are furnished to the auditor of the state in much the same manner that the railroad companies report to the executive council.

In determining the actual value of the property in the state the council has used as the whole aggregate value of the company's property, the value as determined from its shares of stock, less the amount of securities, real estate and personal property outside the state and exclusively outside the general business of the company.

CENTERVILLE SALOONS SMASHED.

Eight Women, Led by a Man, Wreck Three Joints.

Centerville, March 31.—Eight Centerville women, headed by a man, raided three joints Saturday morning, smashing two, breaking the plate glass windows and fixtures. The third joint proprietor destroyed his own liquors. The women warned the dealers to cease selling liquor. They claim the saloons here have not complied with the mulct law.

At 9 o'clock a. m. Mesdames Wininger, Adams, Stevenson, Charles Bryant, Elizabeth Charlton, John Dailey and McDaniel, all of this place, gathered at the home of Mrs. Salter, south of the square. Headed by John Dailey, a prominent grocer of the city, they left the house and proceeded to the south part of town, where there had been much drunkenness for the past week. They proceeded to the place kept by D. Johnson, entered, and in a very short time left it in a wreck. They smashed the bottles, glasses, mirrors and ended by demolishing the plate glass window.

They next hurried to the joint kept by Buck Roberts and repeated the performance, smashing everything breakable in sight, leaving the place in a condition much like it would apear after a cyclone struck it.

Their appetite whetted for more joints to conquer, the little band of determined women repaired to the place kept by Blachey Kinder. Kinder saw them coming and bolted the doors, making a desperate attempt to remove his stock by the rear door. The crusaders saw his move and promptly checked it by making a detour. In desperation Kinder knocked in the heads of the kegs, broke the bottles and allowed his enemies to enter. They saw what he had done, and left after warning him to desist selling liquors.

"Slippy" Holden, the keeper of another joint, heard what the women had been doing and marshaled his friends in force. When the band appeared "Slippy" was ready for them. The crusaders saw that they were outnumbered and retired, repairing to the H. & H. drug store, and the Scandinavian drug store, where they frightened the proprietors into promising they would sell no liquor, and then went up town, where they were met by the police and dispersed.

FIVE IOWA MEN APPOINTED.

Three Given Captaincies, One a Chaplaincy and Another a Cadetship.

Washington, April 1.—Among the appointments made by the president lately were five from Iowa. J. N. Patton of Des Moines, who has been in the transport service, is made captain and assistant quartermaster in the regular army. Harry E. Wilkins of Des Moines, who graduated from West Point, but who served as major of volunteers, and H. J. Gallagher are made captains and assistant commissaries of substance. Oscar H. L. Mason of Green Mountain is appointed chaplain in the regular service. He was formerly chaplain of the Forty-ninth Iowa. Bugler Titus, who led the charge at Tien Tsin and was the first American to scale the walls, has been appointed to a cadetship at West Point. Titus' home is Vinton.

Swift After Express Robbers.

Burlington, March 28.—Superintendent Swift, accompanied by two detectives, was in the city on a new scent in the daring robbery of $20,000 from the Adams Express company of a few months ago. It is reported that the detectives have obtained from Montgomery Ward of Chicago a complete list of the persons to whom the particular catalogue was sent, pieces of which made up the dummy package used to displace the original. They are now tracing down every man, woman or child who received one of these catalogues, and expect in that way to find where the dummy was manufactured. Superintendent Swift said that they did not despair of ultimate success and were confident that the daring robber would yet be placed behind prison bars.

Shot by Mistake.

Burlington, March 28.—Jake Decker, the night flagman at the Main street crossing of the Burlington railroad, was accidentally shot by Morris Dowling in the little shanty near the crossing about midnight and died shortly afterward.

Dowling was passing his revolver to Decker for inspection when in some unaccountable manner the weapon was discharged and the ball crashed through Decker's mouth.

Twelve-Year-Old Hero.

Rockwell City, April 1.—Elmo Adams, aged 12 years, beat out the flames which had caught in the clothing of his little 9-year-old sister, Lucile. She had brushed her cotton apron against the redhot stove, and her clothing caught fire. The brother seized her and with his heavy mittens beat out the flames. Neither child was injured by the accident.

Muscatine, March 31.—Lee Berry, aged 21 years, while duck hunting with Joshua and Lewis Mills, was fatally shot by the discharge of the gun of the latter. The two were crawling up on ducks, when Mills' gun caught on his boat and exploded, the charge entering the hip of Berry

General Weaver Mayor of Colfax.

Colfax, March 27.—General James B. Weaver, once candidate for president of the United States, ex-congressman, and several times candidate for congress, has been elected mayor of Colfax by a majority of 26 votes, his opponent being P. H. Cragen. General Weaver ran on the citizens' ticket and Mr. Cragen as a republican. Three aldermen were also elected on the citizens' ticket.

ASPECT IS MUCH BETTER.

Said Russia's Agreement With China Is Only a Modus Vivendi.

Washington, March 30.—It is stated on excellent Russian authority that the Manchurian convention has from the first been regarded simply as a modus vivendi. It was this phase of the subject which Count Cassini brought to the attention of Secretary Hay yesterday, and simultaneously appears to have been impressed upon the minds of the British officials, as Lord Lansdowne announced to the house of lords that the convention, viewed as a modus vivendi, might not present the objections heretofore held against it.

The Russian authorities at Washington have all along construed the convention as a modus vivendi, although Count Cassini has now made this rather plainer to Secretary Hay. It is explained that the term modus vivendi, as applying to the present convention, means that abnormal conditions have arisen in Manchuria, and that normal conditions can best be restored by means of the modus vivendi. The chief purpose of the modus, it is explained, would be to provide for the evacuation of Manchuria by the Russian troops, as their presence there is part of the abnormal condition brought about by the disturbances. But with these forces withdrawn, Russia expects that assurances will be given that quiet will be maintained and that the formal condition will be, in fact, restored.

When the old state of things is thus restored, it is the Russian view that the modus vivendi will cease to operate as its purpose will have secured the correcting of abnormal conditions brought about by the Chinese outbreak and the dispatch of a large Russian force to different points in the province. It is said that the integrity of China will be completely preserved, and that nothing in the nature of a Russian protectorate or suzerainty will exist.

WORTHY OF HIS FATHER'S SON.

Herbert Gladstone's Bugle Call to the British Liberals.

London, April 1.—Herbert Gladstone, member of parliament for West Leeds, has issued a letter to his constituents, containing a striking indictment of the government, which, the Daily News declares, "will be welcomed by all Liberals as a bugle call to action and as worthy of his father's son. He appears to have struck a note on which the majority of the Liberals can unite against what the Conservative organs admit to be the weak management of the party in power."

The letter is short. Its quality can be judged from the following excerpts:

The war in South Africa will cost not far short of two hundred millions, and the settlement is as far off as ever. There are problems to be solved in the far east of the first magnitude and the government appears destitute of a clear, settled policy. Already the huge expenditure for the army and navy is going up by leaps and bounds, and will force Europe to add to its ruinously large armaments. Where is it to end?

The Irish question is more to the front than ever and the government seems to view it with apathetic impotence.

The advocates of the Liberals are not endeavoring to take up the government's burden uptil they have "exacted conditions that their policy will not again be stultified by the rejection of their measures by the house of lords."

Whether the conditions should be exacted from the king or whether the Liberals must frankly appeal to the country for the practical abolition of the house of lords, is not quite clear. But anyway, as the Daily News says: "It is a bold and somewhat startling suggestion, in which Mr. Gladstone seems to have put his finger on the weak spot of modern Liberalism."

KANSAS VISITS THE PRESIDENT.

Wants Funston Rewarded With Brigadier Geleralship.

Washington, March 30.—The Kansas congressional delegation has decided to urge the president to appoint General Funston a brigadier in the regular army as a reward for his daring capture of Aguinaldo. Senator Burton and Representatives Long and Curtis, the only members of the delegation in the city, have called upon the president for that purpose.

The members of the Kansas delegation do not consider that a brigadier generalship would be too great a reward for General Funston's exploit and point to General MacArthur's recommendation that he be appointed to that grade as complete demonstration of the great service he has rendered to the government. They are exceedingly warm in their praise of General MacAuthur for giving the entire credit of the expedition to Funston. In view of his recommendation they do not believe that the president will hesitate to bestow upon the gallant Kansan the star he has won.

AGUINALDO GETS ADVICE.

Former Members of His Cabinet Urge Him to Sue for Peace.

Manila, Mar. 30.—Aguinaldo yesterday conferred in the Tagalog language at the Malacanang palace with several former members of his cabinet and other prominent Filipinos whom he had asked to see. They explained to him the hopelessness of the insurgent cause and advised him to use his influence to establish peace and for the recognition of American sovereignty. The result of the conference is yet unknown.

The first execution in Manila under American rule took place today at Fort Malate, where five natives were hanged for the murder of Archibald Wilson, an Englishman, superintendent of the waterworks. The motive for the murder was robbery.

Twelve thousand Filipinos have taken the oath of allegiance to the United States at San Vincente, South Ilocos province.

Look Out for Swindlers.

Iowa Falls, March 30.—Patrons along newly established rural mail delivery routes are being bothered by a new species of swindlers to such an extent that the government officials have been notified and an effort will be made to stop the operations of the frauds. The plan is a simple one, but has worked very successfully in many localities. The stranger represents that he is a government inspector of rural mail delivery boxes, and, after an alleged inspection and the propounding of several pertinent questions, a fee is demanded ranging from $3 to $4, and in awe of the presence of a supposed government official, as well as through ignorance of the regulations supposed to govern the new route, the fee is often paid.

Czar's Palace Over a Mine.

London, March 27.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Paris states on the highest authority that a mine has been discovered beneath the palace of Emperor Nicholas at Tzarskoe-Selo, seventeen miles south of Ct. Petersburg.

Several notabilities, the dispatch further says, are implicated in the plot against his majesty. The Russian press was not permitted to mention the affair.

People who buy goods on the installment plan evidently believe in trusts.

NEBRASKA CHOOSES SENATORS.

Rosewater and Thompson Withdrew and Millard and Dietrich Won.

Lincoln, Neb., March 29.—The republican caucus nominated J. H. Millard, president of the Omaha National bank, of Omaha, for the long term and Governor Charles H. Dietrich for the short term for the United States senators from Nebraska. Prior to this Rosewater and D. E. Thompson, the two leading candidates, withdrew and the two men nominated were named as a compromise, Dietrich being suggested by Thompson and Millard by Rosewater.

Yesterday at noon Millard and Dietrich were elected by the joint session. Each received 70 votes, the entire strength of the republican members of the legislature.

Governor Dietrich's election to the United States senate will raise Lieutenant Governor Savage to the office of governor, which the former will vacate on his qualification as senator.

FUNSTON GIVEN REWARD

The President Makes Him a Brigadier General.

Washington, April 1.—The following army appointments were announced at the white house Saturday.

To be major-general in the United States army: Brigadier General Lloyd Wheaton, vice Miles, promoted lieutenant general.

To be brigadier general in the regular army: Col. Jacob H. Smith, Seventeenth United States infantry, brigadier volunteers, vice Daggett, retired; Bridadier General Frederick Funston, United States volunteers, vice Wheaton, promoted.

The announcement of these appointments was made in a conference between the president, Secretary Root and Adjutant General Corbin, and at the same time the long expected list of appointments of majors and captains in the paymasters', quartermasters' and commissary departments and of chaplains was made known. The list included two majors and twenty-five captains in the paymasters' departments; twenty-one captains in the commissary department; thirty-seven captains in the quartermasters' department and seventeen chaplains. All of these appointments are in the regular army, under the recent act of congress enlarging and re-organizing the army, and without exception the staff appointees are from volunteer officers.

The chief interest, however, centered in the three high appointments of a major general and two brigadier generals and more particularly in the selection of General Funston after his gallant exploit in capturing Aguinaldo. Following are the announcements General Corbin sent to General MacArthur:

Washington, March 30.—MacArthur, Manila: The following appointments made: Wheaton, major general; Smith and Funston brigadier generals. Secretary joins me in congratulations to all.

(Signed) Corbin.

TURKEY IS TOTTERING.

Ottoman Troops Defeated by Arab Insurgents.

London, March 28.—Advices received here from Constantinople are to the effect that affairs are rapidly reaching a dangerous pass there. Turkish finances are in an inextricable confusion. All government salaries are from six to eight months in arrears. Upward of a million Turkish pounds are due for war material, while the military expenditure is daily increasing in order to cope with the rebellion in the province of Yemen in southern Arabia and the possible rising in Macedonia.

There is no doubt that the Ottoman troops received a severe check at the hands of the Arab insurgents, who in a manifesto denouncing the sultan proclaimed his brother, Mohammed Reshad Effendi, to be sultan with the title of Mohammed V. The young Turks party have adhered to the Arabian proclamation and the opening enmity to Abdul Hamid, the sultan, has spread to the palace and the sultan's advisers. Izzet Bey is said to be preparing for flight. The patrols of Constantinople have been doubled. Mohammedans and Christians are arrested hourly and large numbers are daily shipped to Asia Minor.

The tension between Bulgarians and Mussulmans in Macedonia is extreme. It is reported that another band of marauders has crossed Bulgaria into Macedonia.

GOEBEL CASES REOPENED.

New Trial Ordered by Court of Appeals for Powers and Howard.

Frankfort, Ky., March 30.—Caleb Powers and James Howard, who are under sentence as principles in the assassination of Governor Goebel have been granted new trials by the court of appeals.

In the case of Howard, who was condemned to be hanged, the whole court concurs in the decision, reversing the action of the lower court because of erroneous instructions, incompetent evidence admitted in the trial and minor technicalities.

In the case of Powers, the former secretary of state, who is serving a life term, Judges Hobson, Paynter and White dissented. The majority opinion holds that the pardon of former Governor Taylor, issued before Powers was arrested and while Taylor's title to his seat was clouded, was not valid; that the indictment of Powers is regular, but orders a new trial on the ground of erroneous instructions, the admission of incompetent evidence and unimportant techaicalities.

Japan Prepared for Any Emergency.

Yokohama, March 30.—The feeling that there can be no peace in the Orient save by administering a drubbing to Russia is growing stronger. It is almost the unanimous voice of the native press that if the powers do not take measures to curb Russian aggression, Japan must undertake the task alone. Coupled with the strong undercurrent of public opinion is the evidence that the government is preparing for the emergency with the utmost possible diligence. Unceasing activity at the various naval stations and yards is reported. The nation is evidently gathering its resources and energies for the struggle.

Shaw Refuses a Pardon.

Rockwell City, April 1.—Governor Shaw has telegraphed Sheriff A. L. Riseley to the effect that he cannot grant a pardon to Henry Wilcox, sentenced to eighteen months for the murder of his father. Andrew Wilcox. The petition for pardon was signed by over 200 citizens of the county, whose sympathies are still with the young man, believing that he killed his father in self-defense.

A clock that will run two years with one winding has been invented by a jeweler in Jefferson City, Mo. It is operated by weights.

FORCE AT MOROCCO ABANDONED.

Washington, March 28.—Secretary Long has cabled an order to Admiral Rogers on board the cruiser New York at Tangier to proceed at once with that vessel to Manila. This is an abandonment of the plan to have the New York convey United States Consul General Gummere from Tangier to Mazargan, in the attempt to collect American claims. It is the purpose of the state department to endeavor to adjust these claims and other outstanding issues against Morocco without any show of force and in the ordinary practice of diplomacy

AGUINALDO CAPTURED.

General Funston's Daring Plan Was Successful.

Manila, March 28.—General Frederick Funston's daring project for the capture of Aguinaldo in his hiding place in the province of Isabella, Island of Luzon, has proved completely successful. Aguinaldo was captured there on March 23.

The United States gunboat Vicksburg, E. B. Barry commander, with General Funston and Aguinaldo on board, arrived here this morning. Sometime during the month of January from his hiding place in the province of Isabella, Aguinaldo wrote letters anathematizing the sub chiefs who had taken the oath of allegiance to the United States. Later Aguinaldo ordered insurgent forces in southern Luzon to join him at a rendezvous in Isabella province. The rebel officer intrusted with these orders secretly negotiated with the Americans. On securing necessary information, General Funston planned Aguinaldo's capture, and, with General MacArthur's authorization, proceeded two weeks ago to make the attempt. General Funston, with Surgeon Major Harris, Captain Newton of the Thirty-fourth infantry, Lieutenant Admire of the Twenty-second infantry, Lieutenant Mitchell of the Fortieth infantry, six veteran scouts and a company of native scouts, all picked men, embarked on the gunboat Vicksburg and were landed on a remote beach above Baler. It was arranged that Aguinaldo's emissary, with the native scouts, should pass themselves off as insurgent troops who, having captured General Funston and others, were taking them as prisoners to Aguinaldo. At the right time, when brought before Aguinaldo, General Funston was to give a signal, when the tables were to be turned and Aguinaldo was to be seized. Six days' march into the interior were contemplated. Treachery was considered possible, but every precaution was taken. The troops in New Viscaya and New Ecija and the gunboats Vicksburg and Albany were to co-operate with General Funston's force.

General Funston's plans were carried out almost to the letter. Aguinaldo's hiding place was found, and Funston and the other Americans were conducted into Aguinaldo's camp. The signal was given and the Filipino leader and his immediate retainers were captured and escorted back to the ships. Troops from the ships and from the nearest garrisons had advanced as closely as possible to Funston's destination, and met the party on their return with Aguinaldo in order to prevent a rescue.

The dangers of the expedition can hardly be overestimated. General Funston and his companions trusted their lives to the Filipino scouts in the American service. Had even one of them proved disloyal and sent word to Aguinaldo in advance, the entire American party might have been ambushed and captured.

There was some fighting after Aguinaldo's capture, and before the Vicksburg was reached on the return trip, but the details have not been given out.

The province of Isabella, where the capture of Aguinaldo occurred, is on the Island of Luzon, about 200 miles northeast of Manila, and about seventy-five north of Baler, on the eastern coast, which place was made memorable by the capture of Lieutenant Gilmore and his party from the gunboat Yorktown in April, 1899. Isabella province is wild and mountainous, especially along the coast, where the high range known as the Grand Cordellinas Orient, extends for 100 miles or more, the highest point of the range being but a few miles from the shore. Rugged trails, in some places but a foot or two in width, lead across the mountain streams, and where these overflow their bank-trails are waist-deep in mud. It was to this uninviting district that General Funston and his small band were sent a short time ago. It was a part of the island that had never before been visited by American troops.

Washington, March 28.—The capture of Aguinaldo will be a source of great satisfaction to the president and to his advisers. Coming so soon after the surrender reported by General MacArthur of prominent Filipino officers and the successful establishment of civil government by the Taft commission, they feel that the end of the rebellious warfare in the islands is near at hand. With the expected collapse of further opposition which it is confidently believed will follow, the hope is expressed that it will not be necessary to maintain a large standing army in the islands as is now contemplated.

The disposition of Aguinaldo, now that he has been apprehended, will be an interesting one for the administration to determine. The possibility of his capture at any time has always been kept in view, and his future has been a matter of informal discussion by the officials. It is not believed, however, that any definite line of action was ever determined upon in regard to the matter. The attitude of the government for a long time past, had been one of comparative indifference to Aguinaldo's capture, it having been determined to crush the rebellion without regard to his whereabouts. His recent activity in directing the course of operations against the American forces probably brought about the recent change in this attitude.

As the leader of an insurrection against the United States government, Aguinaldo may be tried and executed, a lesser punishment meted to him by executive clemency, or complete amnesty extended. While the question of punishment rests with military authorities, it is believed the president will make the matter one for determination primarily by the authorities here.

WILLIAM TALKS OF REVOLUTIONS.

Attack by Weiland Has Seriously Affected His Views Toward People.

Berlin, March 30—Emperor William, in the course of a speech to the Alexander regiment in the court yard of the barracks, said, according to the Kreuz Zeitung, that his hearers must be ready day and night to act as the body guard of their king and give their life blood, if necessary, for the emperor and his house.

Calling to mind the events of 1848, his majesty said that if such days should come again the regiment would certainly repress all insubordination or misconduct against the king.

Amazement is everywhere expressed at the emperor's strong hints of a possible revolutionary rising and of street fights with the troops. Well informed circles see in his majesty's deliverance further proof that the attack upon him by Weilman at Bremen has very seriously affected his views and attitude toward the German people.

Dietrich Will Hold His Job.

Lincoln, Neb., March 30.—Senator-elect Dietrich announced definitely last night that he would not resign as governor until late in the fall, probably not until after election, barring, of course, an extra session of congress, which he did not regard as probable. Governor Dietrich justified this action by saying he had outlined a plan of state administration which he was anxious to put in effect, and in this he is upheld by Lieutenant Governor Savage.

When a fool parts with his money the chances are that some other fool gets part of it.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 1, 1901.

Smallpox has crept into the schools of this city and orders have been issued by Superintendents Hiatt and Sheakley closing every door for one week.

Reports coming in to the office of the secretary of the state board of health indicate the small pox epidemic is serious at Mason City. Seven persons have died recently of the disease. This is the largest number of deaths to be reported from any one point in the state since the outbreak last fall. The number of deaths in Iowa, however, is larger than generally supposed. Seventy-five persons are estimated to have died from small pox in Iowa since last October. Two deaths have just been reported from Atlantic. Another death was reported from Thurman. In the meantime, the number of cases reported daily to the board of health continues large.

Justice Tris has notified every proprietor of every establishment in which slot machines are worked that the operation of such a machine is gambling, and unless stopped at once he will issue warrants for arrests according to the statute prohibiting gambling. This notification has resulted in the closing of every machine in West Des Moines.

F. M. Hubbell believes that the Illinois Central will build the Minneapolis & St. Louis from Angus into Des Moines and thence to Newton to connect with the Iowa Central and make a through route from Minneapolis to Peoria and the south through Des Moines.

A general canning plant will probably be established in Des Moines in the next few weeks with a plant attached for the manufacture of cans and boxes and a capacity for putting up a couple of million cans of vegetables and fruits each year. It will probably be located on the Rock Island tracks between this city and Valley Junction.

The city council has directed the purchase of Tracy Home for a small pox and contagious disease hospital. The hospital costs $5,000.

William McMillan of Des Moines has loaned to the state historical collection a large number of rare guns running from a blunderbuss of the fifteeenth century down to modern rifles. A relic in the shape of an oak, ten inches thick and four feet long in which are imbedded three grape shot, a solid shot six inches in diameter and innumerable pieces of shells is in the collection. This came from Chickamauga. The iron is ingrown in the wood, evidently having been impotent to kill the tree. A soldier's button, in which is a minnie ball imbedded by its force like the setting of a ring, accompanies the collection.

The board of control has received the report from the warden of the state penitentiary at Anamosa giving the information which had been asked regarding the valuation of the state property there and a statement of losses which had been sustained by fire. The report shows the state has suffered a loss of $17,000 in the last five years. In 1896 a fire occurred in what was then the dining hall at the penitentiary. Fire protection was inadequate and the loss on the building was $5,000 and on personal property $12,000. The valuation of the buildings will be estimated at a later date.

Over three million dollars in improvements will be made in the cities and towns of Iowa during the coming season. Nearly three million alone represents the assured outlay in forty of the leading centers of the state, the figures being based upon statistics gathered through numerous Iowa correspondents. The exact amount, figured in round numbers, that will be expended in the forty cities and towns referred to is $2,750,000. The improvements contemplated, many of which are now in process or have just been completed, embrace a large variety. Many of the cities and towns are erecting new public buildings, including churches and school houses in many instances, some are improving the business portions of the towns, while nearly all are being honey-combed with new and modern residences.

DISCUSSED AGUINALDO'S CAPTURE.

President and Cabinet In Favor of Liberal Reward for General Funston.

Washington, March 30.—The cabinet meeting yesterday was devoted almost entirely to a discussion of the capture of Aguinaldo, its effect upon the military situation in the Philippines, the disposition to be made of the insurgent chief and the reward to be given to General Funston. The situation was considered in all its phases, but no definite conclusions were reached, either with regard to General Funston's reward or to the punishment of Aguinaldo. The president as well as all the members of the cabinet are in favor of the most liberal and substantial recognition of the service performed by General Funston. There will be some discussion of the question of making him a brigadier general in the regular army, but it was thought that full reports should be awaited before acting. The matter will probably be allowed to rest where it is for the present. General Funston is holding a volunteer commission as brigadier general which will not expire until June 30 of this year, so that so far as honor and emoluments are concerned, his standing would not be prejudiced by the delay.

The view of the mapority of the cabinet was that the time was not yet ripe to decide what course should be pursued in the disposition of Aguinaldo.

BIG OFFICIAL TENSION IN JAPAN.

Possibilities of War With Russia Are Freely Discussed.

London, March 31.—The Yokohama correspondent of the Daily Mail writes:

"There is great tension in official circles.

"The foreign office is open day and night.

"Frequent conferences are held between the generals. The emperor has been present thereat, and has made frequent inquiries as to the condition of the service. Three staff officers have been dispatched to Korea to make investigations.

"The possibilities of war are freely discussed."

English Soldiers Slashed by Germans.

Tien-Tsin, March 26.—In an affray last evening two members of the Welsh Fusileer regiment and a member of the Victoria contingent, who were acting as policement, were sabred and bayonetted. It is alleged that Germans were the principal culprits.

Fight to the Death.

London, March 26.—The colonial secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, when asked in the house of commons today if it was possible to change the offer of peace terms to the Boers, said the negotiations were closed and there was no intention of re-opening them.

LOVE IS BEST

By Florence Hodgkinson

CHAPTER XII.

It was springtime at Easthill-on-Sea, and things were settling down again. Mrs. Dynevor, with her son and daughter, still lived at the Uplands, but with no fear now of the mortgage foreclosing. It was generally believed—and specially so by Harold—that the interest was paid to the young mistress of the Manor; really it went into the local bank account of "Kitty Dynevor," for Lillian knew that Alick Craven's wooing would soon end successfully, and wanted Kitty to have a nice little sum in hand for her trouseau.

Woodlands was a school no longer. Mrs. Tanner lived at the Manor as chaperon to Miss Dynevor; and Lillian, thoughtful in all things, had insisted on purchasing an annuity of two hundred a year for her friend, so that, as she put it, if she did not live long Mrs. Tanner need not open a school again.

Mrs. Dynevor and Kitty were often at the Manor, and loved Lillian even better than they had loved Miss Lendon; but Harold never went there, and when he met his cousin at Uplands treated her with a cold reserve that almost broke her heart.

"Your brother was kinder to me when I was a poor little governess," she said to Kitty. And that damsel, then on the eve of her wedding, lectured Harold pretty sharply on his manner to her favorite.

"You don't understand," he said coldly. "Lillian is rich, we are poor, and that makes a gulf between us."

"But it need not," Kitty persisted. Lillian and the twins were her bridesmaids when the June day came that made her Mrs. Alick Craven; and somehow, when the happy pair had driven off, Harold found himself alone in the garden with the chief bridesmaid.

"It went off very well," he remarked, "I never saw Kitty look better."

"No. I think they will be very happy," she said quietly.

"I suppose yours will be the next wedding in the family, Lillian? It is high time you chose a prince consort for the Manor."

"Only that I am not going to do anything of the sort," she answered.

"I thought I heard Mrs. Tanner say something about changes at the Manor."

"Yes; but they need not mean matrimony." She hesitated. "You were so kind to me in the old days, when first I came to Easthill, that I would like to tell you my plans. I am quite sure I am not fit to be a great lady, and I should like to feel that my life was of use to some one, so I am going to London to be trained as a hospital nurse."

'Lillian!"

"And as my life will be spent among sick folk, you see, I shall never want the Manor; and—you are the last of the Dynevors—you would make me very happy, Harold, if you would go back to the old home which was to have been yours, which would have been yours if I had never been born."

"Lillian, you know it is impossible!"

"I know you have shunned the Manor lately; but if it was your own?"

"I have only shunned it because something it contained was growing all too dear to me. Lillian, did you ever guess my secret—that I loved you with all my heart, and but for the gulf between our fortunes I should have asked you to be my wife?"

"And I thought you hated me because I was my mother's daughter."

"I love you dearly; I have loved you ever since the old days, when I thought you were only a penniless little teacher."

"I wish I had been," she answered wistfully. "I don't think money has brought me much happiness. But Harold, when I go to the hospital you must take the Manor; the dear old place can't be left desolate."

And then Harold Dynevor's love conquered his pride. He took Lillian in his arms, and whispered that he would only take the gift with the giver.

And now Dynevor Manor is a happy home, and children who bear the old name make merry in the nursery Mrs. Craven had been afraid to use.

The End.

Lesson In Astronomy

It was the third week of our trip across the plains. We were now just seventy-five miles from Fremont, and expected to make it very shortly; but on rising I was disgusted to find that one of the horses—we had only two—was dead lame. He had cast himself in the night. I was rubbing the strained tendons when the professor came and stood beside me.

"How long before he will be ready for work again?"

"I don't know," I said shortly. "Hand me that oil."

"What is a near estimate?" he inquired, with a touch of mild irritation. "Surely in these days of scientific exactitude so slight a matter as the length of a horse's lameness may be computed with reasonable accuracy."

"I just wish you'd try it, then," I said, sulkily. "He may be ready tomorrow—we may have to wait two weeks—unless you want to ride the mare in. I don't mind walking."

"And leave my specimens to the mercy of any Yahoo that happens along? My dear Curtis, I could not think of it! Since there's only you and I we can make ourselves very comfortable. But I do hope the creature will be all right in a short time. I am anxious to be in Fremont to study the collision of the comet with my colleague there."

"Collision of the comet!" I repeated straightening up. There's nothing so tiresome as rubbing a sprain."

"Certainly! That brilliant comet to which I have called your attention for several nights, will surely collide with the earth, in a few days at farthest. The phenomenon will prove a rare and wonderful one, though astronomers have often expected such an occurrence. Unfortunately, something always seemed to interfere."

"May the interference continue," I said, laughing. "I don't believe this old world will be smashed up yet awhile."

"I did not say it would be smashed," returned the professor with some dignity. "The most advanced theorists agree in saying that the comet itself is now only in a gaseous form, and that now only in a gaseous form, and that——"

"Hallowell," I interrupted, "go and make the coffee. We can discuss gaseous comets while we eat."

Three days passed, and the black was no better. As miseries never come single, his mate, a pretty mare, having the undue curiosity of her sex, experimented with a tempting weed, and was in a very serious condition when I found her. I dosed her with several remedies, getting little help from the professor. He was so busy watching a cloud that lay along the horizon that I was tempted to smash his telescope in order to bring him down to mundane affairs. Having done what I could for the poor mare, I came back to the wagon.

"I don't believe she'll pull through," I said savagely.

The professor squinted one eye up a little tighter.

"Amazing!" he murmured. "It travels with scarcely the sped of a locomotive. I marvel the velocity is no greater—doubtless the earth's gravity exercises a controlling influence at present." Then, in a different tone, "Curtis, there's a buffalo calf coming toward us. I suppose you would not be interested if I told you of the arrival of something really important."

I took the glass out of his hand.

"It's not a calf, Hallowell. It's a man—riding like the deuce. What do you reckon is the matter?"

Hallowell was from the east and was not used to southern localisms.

"It is impossible to reckon anything on so slight a basis," he answered seriously—then made a wild dive at something that floated by. When he turned to me there was a shining bubble in his hand.

"The comet!" he shouted. "The collision has occurred."

"Do you call that thing a comet?" I asked contemptuously. "I might say to you with Festus—'Much learning hath made the mad.'"

"It is a detached fragment from the main body of the gas," he replied, dancing triumphantly around. "The comet as a whole is that faint cloud you see yonder."

"The deuce it is," I said anxiously. "We shall smother or be blown away. I remember you said something about its traveling like a train."

"Not blown away," corrected the professor. "We can take refuge in the hole by that hemlock yonder. As to our chance of smothering, I wonder you can mention such a trifle in the face of material of such overwhelming scientific interest. I think—"

We were interrupted by a cry from the advancing horseman. I saw that he was using whip and spur on his mount, and that the latter instead of responding was evidently played out. Indeed, as he reached us, the poor brute went down. His rider staggered up before I could lend my assistance.

"For God's sake let me have a horse!" he exclaimed entreatingly. "I am on my way from X—, to Fremont, with a pardon for my brother. If I do not reach the town before 12 tomorrow, the best man that ever buckled will die for no worse fault than putting a bullet through that hound. Pistol Pete. It is nearly 5 now!"

"You shall have the horse and welcome," I replied, for the young fellow's manly face was haggard with an awful grief, "but one is dead lame, and the other is too ill to stand."

He made a rush for the horses to satisfy himself, and came back with a gesture of despair that went to my heart.

"Look!" he cried wildly, drawing out an envelope. "There's a life in that paper—and I have ridden—ridden—and met with one hindrance after another!"

The professor looked at him pityingly.

"How limited are the capabilities of the body compared with the desires of the spirit," he murmured.

"I cannot bear it!" cried the stranger, frantically. "They told me that was a good horse—the liars!"

He flung himself on the ground and hard, dry sobs shook his chest,

The professor picked up the glass.

"In less than an hour it will be here," he said thoughtfully.

"Thank God I am not a scientist," I said rudely. "You fellows have about as much feeling as the dry bones you study."

The professor ignored me, and shook the prostrate man.

"Get up," he said, commandingly, a new note in his voice. "Do as I tell you, and your brother may be saved yet."

The man rose. We both stared at Hallowell. I wondered if he had really gone crazy.

"Take the tongue off the wagon," he said curtly, "and spread the cover and all the cloth you can find on the ground near me."

For a moment I hesitated; then it dimly occurred to me that even a bookworm might have original ideas, and I said sotto voce to the newcomer—

"Do as he says; he's by no means as big a fool as he looks."

I rather think Hallowell overheard me, for he shot a distinctly ungrateful glance in my direction, but he could say nothing, as we were both now zealously obeying him.

He made us cut the great cloth cover in two large sails, and these we fastened on the wagon under his orders.

"Surely—surely," I gasped, "you don't think that you can make that cloud of gas help us? Why, it's fading away!"

"It is not fading," said the professor, brusquely. "It seems much fainter because you are so near it and because of the action of the sun on it. Do as I tell you—there's no time to lose."

When he was satisfied he made us scramble into the wagon and we sat there, waiting for—what? Three apparently sane men in a horseless wagon, waiting for a sky motor which momentarily grew fainter! When ten minutes passed by outraged dignity asserted itself.

"I won't be made a fool of," I said, angrily, and started to leave the wagon.

Hallowell pushed me back on my seat. Then I became aware of a sickening odor—a fresh breeze on my back— a pale mist around us shot with brilliant hues, and lo! we were running over the plain at a rate that threatened to wreck the wagon—our sails swelled out like two great wings.

My hair was rapidly assuming a vertical position, but the two faces near me showed utter unconsciousness of danger. That of the stranger was burning with joy and reverent thankfulness. To him it was a God-sent miracle for a good man's rescue. The professor was radiant over this new factor in his knowledge and he muttered his observations aloud. Neither seemed disturbed by the fact that from the speed and the smell, breathing was no easy matter. As to me—my one hope was that I might touch old earth again safely.

On, on we flew. Again and again I expected an immediate smashup, but our wagon was of fine and strong make, the plain was level, and we bade fair to reach the town shortly. In less than two hours we were not three miles from Fremont!

Then a terrible idea flashed on me which I had been too hurried to think of before. We should pass the town! Like the brook, we might go on forever— or at least far enough to wreck us on the broken lands beyond. As to the stranger, the trip would have been of no earthly use to him.

"I shall jump," he said simply, as if in answer to an outspoken inquiry. The professor was looking anxious but he said nothing.

But we had forgotten the little river lying near the town. We struck it like a cyclone, and its four feet of water was whipped into wild spray around us, while the wagon spun like a frantic top, then stopped with a lurch that nearly sent us flying. Either the force of our motor was lessening or perhaps, even at its best, it would not have had time or strength to loosen the wagon from the heavy snag driven between the spokes, for the pale gas rushed on, leaving three dripping men and some ruined specimens in the river, with Fremont not 500 yards away.

SOME MEDICAL HEROES.

Nerve and Self-Sacrifice in Cuban Insect Experiments.

A remarkable example of nerve and self-sacrifice has been exhibited in the experiments that are being conducted with mosquito inoculation by the army surgeons in Cuba. There has been no doubt in the medical profession for several years that yellow fever could be communicated by flies, mosquitoes and other insects, and it has recently been discovered that inoculation can be used to protect people from yellow fever just as smallpox can be prevented by vaccination. The matter is still in an experimental stage and has not yet reached that development under which medical men generally can safely use it. In order to accomplish practical ends and ascertain how the discovery could best be utilized for the human welfare in countries subject to yellow fever epidemics, Dr. Jesse W. Lazear and Dr. James A. Carroll, assistant surgeons of the United States army, offered their lives. It was quite as heroic as the act of Hobson in sinking the Merrimac to obstruct the channel of Santiago harbor, but comparatively few people will ever hear of their heroism. They fed mosquitoes upon the bodies of yellow fever patients in the hospital at Havana and then deliberately allowed these mosquitoes to attack their arms. The infection of both was promptly discovered and they were treated with all the skill and care that their associates could devise, while the study of their symptoms and the course of the disease was carefully observed. Dr. Lazier died, but Dr. Carroll survived and his report is one of the most important contributions to the vast literature concerning contagious diseases. —Chicago Record.

STORMS ON BAIKAL.

Tempestuous Times on One of Siberia's Great Inland Seas.

The part of the Siberian railroad that will skirt the southern shores of Lake Baikal has not yet been built. It involves difficult engineering, and the railroad authorities decided, for a few years, to use ice-breaking steamers, tie barges to them, load them with passengers and freight cars and thus ferry trains across the lake. But now they have come to the conclusion to build the line around the foot of the lake as soon as they can, for they are having no end of trouble with stormy and foggy Baikal. The lake is sixty-five miles wide and it is no joke for the passengers to be penned in their cars on the barges for twenty to forty hours at a time, as has happened now and then within the last year. On these occasions a storm on the lake or a heavy fog has made it impossible to reach port on the farther side. Anyone knowing the conditions of travel on this lake might expect such accidents. There is no good port and one cannot be made without spending a fortune. A while ago sailing vessels were the only means of transport, and they sometimes took over a fortnight in crossing the lake, beating up and down and waiting for a chance to get to the landing while storms were raging for days and days. Millions of Russians seem to have an erroneous idea of Baikal. It is the largest fresh water lake in Asia, but the Russians do not hesitate to call it the largest in the world. In fact, the lake is thus ranked in some of the geographies used in Russian schools. The compilers of these text books would seem never to have heard of our great lakes and those of central Africa.—New York Sun.

TEUTONS IN FRANCE.

Parts of the Republic Are as Much German as the Fatherland.

The northern third of France and half of Belgium are today more Teutonic than the south of Germany. This should not occasion surprise when we remember the incessant downpour of Teutonic tribes during the whole historic period. It was a constant procession of Goths—from all points of the compass—Franks, Burgundians, and others. France was entirely overrun by the Franks, with the exception of Brittany, by the middle of the sixth century, says the London Express. All through the middle ages this part of France was German in language and customs as well. The very name of the country is Teutonic. It has the same origin as Franconia in Southern Germany. In 812 the council of Tours, away down south, ordained that every bishop should preach both in the Romance and the Teutonic languages. The Franks preserved their German speech 400 years after the conquest. Charlemagne was a German. His courtiers were all Germans. He lived and governed from outside the limits of modern France. The Abbe Sieyes uttered an ethnological truism when, in the course of the French revolution, he cried out against the French aristocracy: "Let us send them back to their German marshes whence they came."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The average woman is quick to jump at conclusions and mice.

"I Followed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Now I am Well."

A woman is sick—some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds back something, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and this completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it a wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. This is the reason why hundreds of thousands of women are now in correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can give every symptom, so that when she is ready to advise them she is in possession of more facts from her correspondence with the patient than the physician can possibly obtain through a personal interview.

Following we publish a letter from a woman showing the result of a correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. All such letters are considered absolutely confidential by Mrs. Pinkham, and are never published in any way or manner without the consent in writing of the patient; but hundreds of women are so grateful for the health which Mrs. Pinkham and her medicine have been able to restore to them that they not only consent to publishing their letters, but write asking that this be done in order that other women who suffer may be benefited by their experience.

Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with falling and inflammation of the womb. I suffered very much with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and was not able to do anything. What I endured no one knows but those who have suffered as I did. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I doctored with the physicians of this town for three months and grew worse instead of better. My husband and friends wished me to write to you, but I had no faith in patent medicines. At last I became so bad that I concluded to ask your advice. I received an answer at once advising me to take your Vegetable Compound, and I did so. Before I had taken two bottles I felt better, and after I had taken five bottles there was no happier woman on earth, for I was well again. I know that your Vegetable Compound cured me, and I wish and advise every woman who suffers as I did to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Believe me always grateful for the recovery of my health."—MRS. ELLA RICE, Chelsea, Wis.

MINERALS AT BUFFALO.

The Pan-American Exposition Will Have a Wonderful Exhibit in This Line.

The minerals exhibit will be one of the most important features of the Pan-American exposition. The applications for space are so numerous as to raise the question as to the possibility of accommodating all the prospective exhibitors.

The building to be devoted to the exhibit is one of a group of three magnificent structures arranged in the form of a horseshoe, at the western boundary of the Esplanade. The Mines building is the southernmost of the group, and is connected with the Horticulture building by one of the conservatories which flank the Horticulture building on the north and south. It is 150 feet square, and at each of the four corners it has a pavilion 100 feet high. The eastern facade, looking upon the Esplanade, shows three high recessed arches between the towers, forming an open loggia elaborately and beautifully ornamented with plastic details and decorated in brilliant colors. From this loggia are the main entrances to the building. There are also entrances in the corner pavilions, in which displays will be made. The ornamental detail is very picturesque and interesting. Dr David T. Day, superintendent of mining at the Pan-American exposition, says of this building: "I have to say that the building designated for the mineral exhibits is, for its size, the most efficient building of its kind I have ever seen."

Applications for space now aggregate about 15,000 square feet, whereas about two-thirds of this space is all that is available. "These applications," says Superintendent Day, "cover many industries and many states, besides the fine exhibit from Canada including the new and interesting precious metal deposits of Ontario, British Columbia and the Klondike region. On the other hand, South America will also be well represented, with a large collective exhibit of the mineral industries of Peru, Brazil and Chili, as well as other countries having minor, but interesting, displays."

The United States exhibit will be a magnificent one, and in some respects it will surpass any yet made. For instance, the mineral resources of the Great Lake region, particularly the great iron ore deposits of Lake Superior and the transportation and utilization of these ores at the lower lake ports, especially Buffalo, will be adequately represented for the first time. Practically the entire mining exhibit made by the United States commission at the Paris exposition is coming back from Paris to the Pan-American exposition. Included in this exhibit is a magnificent suite of gold and silver specimens from Colorado, and the finest specimen of native gold ever taken from the earth, which come from California. A complete series of all the mineral species found in the United States, according to Dana's classification, is also included in the exhibit, and to these will be added specimens of the resources of Uncle Sam's new possessions.

He left this week for Watertown where he takes up the starting duties in this new capacity. Frank has been our agent for over a year and has given the people good service. Being a person of a sober and temporate nature and quick in the dispatch of duties he won many friends, several of our young folks disliking very much to see him leave.

A deal has been closed by the Gruetzmacher Bros. of Klemme, and S. J. Carlson, of Twin Lakes township wherein the Gruetzmacher Bros. trade their store building, the adjacent machine shed and the lots on which these buildings stand, on main street, and the machine shed and lots just north of Shafer & Dow's to Mr. Carlson for a 520 acre farm in Twin Lakes township. Both parties will retain possession until the first of next March when the change of ownship is to take place. Gruetzmacher Bros. will be found at the old stand selling hardware and machinery for at least another.

Just about as often as the spring thaw comes and a little water gathers in the ditches along the road one can find by driving out into the country that many of the old wooden culverts are broken down, rotted out or gone entirely, thus making it very uncomfortable for the farmers when driving to town, and very often where a culvert is dilapited in this way the road is utterly impassable. The old plank box is no good and as fast as they become destroyed the district supervisors should replace them with heavy tile. If the townsip is not able to do this the county should be called upon for aid. Hancock county is amply able to afford good roads.

Strikes a Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chornic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "No remed helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicine I ever used." They have also kept my wife in excellant health for years. She says Electric bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by J. L. Harr.

A Horrible Outbreak

"Of large sores on my little daughter's head developed into a case of scald head" writes C. D. Isbill of Morganton, Tenn., but Bucklin's Arnica Salve completely cured her. It's a guaranteed cure for Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pimples, sores, Ulcers and piles. Only 25 cents at Harr's.

It was recommended to me by a druggest as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by J. L. Harr.

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For Sale by J. L. Harr.

Twice Proven.

From the Vindicator, Ruthfordton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. Second in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For Sale by J. L. Harr.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. BOOK OF STANDARD PHRASES.

General Reader Will at Once Recognize Them.

A local newspaper man who has for some years felt, in his own experience, the need of a handbook for standard reportorial phrases, has undertaken the compilation of a work of that character. The writer hereof was recently permited to glance through a number of proof pages of this work, which will undoubtedly prove of inestimable value, if not absolutely indispensable, in the teaching of the science of journalism, in so far as that science appertains to local or reportorial work. In order to impress the standard phrases upon a student's mind, the compiler of the book has arranged the material in the form of questions and answers taken at random from the proof pages:

Q.—Where does the famous man or woman in need of a rest generally go?

A.—Far from the maddening crowd.

Q.—What ceremony invariably precedes the interment of the well-known citizen?

A.—The last sad rites.

Q.—By whom is the departed citizen invariably mourned? A.—By a wide circle of sorrowing friends.

Q.—What notable discovery has the well-matured diva or actress always succeeded in making before the opening of each season? A.—The fountain of perpetual youth.

Q.—What pitiable noises always follow a serious railway disaster? A.—The shrieks of the wounded and dying.

Q.—What does the doomed man always do on the morning he is to hang? A.—He chats with the death watch and partakes of a hearty breakfast of ham and eggs.

Q.—Who always says that the last big snowstorm is the worst in his recollection? A.—The oldest inhabitant.

Q.—What always happens when a big after dark fire is on? A.—The lurid flames shooting into the night sky.

Q.—By what are the burning cornices of the doomed building licked? A.—Tongues of flame.

Q.—What does the captured embezzler sometimes do? A.—He makes a clean breast of his peculations, which he admits have been going on for years.

Q.—What is any inaugural parade? A.—An inspiring pageant.

How would you describe any debutante? A.—As being beautiful and vivacious.

Q.—A bride? A.—Blushingly beautiful.

Q.—A divorcee? A.—Fascinatingly beautiful.

Q.—What always happens to the victim of a powder magazine explosion. A.—He is hurled through the air a distance of 120 feet, and blown into an unrecognizable mass.

Q.—What does the hero who stops the runaway team generally do? A.—He refuses to give his name and disappears in the crowd.

Q.—What is the roystering son of the wealthy man usually called? A.—The wayward scion of a distinguished family.

Q.—When you are a trifle doubtful as to your facts, how do you introduce your story? A.—By saying that it is stated upon the highest authority.

Q.—If you wanted to interview yourself on the financial situation, what authority would you give? A.—An eminent figure in the world of finance, who, for obvious reasons, desires that his name be withheld.

Q.—What does the famous personage do when he gets in? A.—He arrives in our midst.

Q.—What is the year's initial fall of snow? A.—The first flurry of the season.

Q.—How would you allude to a wiped-out polar expedition? A.—More victims of the frozen north.

Q.—How would you intimate that an exalted couple were about to separate? A.—It is whispered about that a scandal in high life is brewing.

Q.—What does the young mother, finding herself and her child in peril, always do? A.—She frenziedly claeps her babe in her embrace.

Q.—Is there any such thing as a baby in these descriptions? A.—No; only babes.

Q.—In what state does the oldest inhabitant usually go hence? A.—Full of years and honors.

Q.—What happens to the hero of the football game? A.—He is carried off the field on the shoulders of his enthusiastic friends.

These, as stated above, are only a few quotations taken at random, according to the Milwaukee Sentinel, but enough are given to indicate what incalculable value the book will be to journalists.

TAKE THE INITIATIVE.

Good Advice to Take if You Are in Trouble.

"There is nothing like taking the initiative when one finds one's self in for trouble," said a fat drummer who has had a wide and checkered experience. "I had the truth of this proposition very forcibly illustrated last week," he continued, relating the story to a New Orleans Times-Democrat man, "while I was making a trip through northern Alabama. I got off at a small railroad station and then found it necessary to drive ten miles into the country to see a storekeeper who had a big unpaid account with the house. There was only one livery stable in town, and everything in it had been rented out except a dilapidated old surrey and a gaunt, flea-bitten gray mare. The proprietor assured me, however, that I could make the trip all right in the rig, and I started out. The roads in that part of Alabama run over the steepest hills I ever saw in my wife and when you start on a ten-mile journey you can safely calculate upon traveling that distance horizontally and another ten miles up and down. I had gone perhaps two miles when I struck an unusually sharp ascent and the gray mare balked. I gave her a touch of the whip, she made a sudden jump, and in less time than it takes to tell it, the surrey was a wreck. It seemed to go to pieces in a dozen places all at once. The shafts pulled loose, one of the axle trees snapped, and repairs were totally out of the question. While I was cussing my luck and wondering what I could do a farmer came along with a four-mule team. I made a dicker with him to carry me to my destination, simply tying the mare to the fence and leaving the surrey where it stood. I got there all right and came back next day on the same farm wagon. On the outskirts of town I met a man I knew, who stopped the team and told me I'd better look out for war. He said the livery man had made out a bill as long as my arm and was all prepared to have me hauled before a country magistrate if I refused to pay. I rapidly framed a plan of action and drove straight to the stable. The proprietor was standing in the door. 'Well, sir,' said I, 'what do you intend to do about the way I've been treated?' 'What d'y'mean?' said I, 'that I have been put to a large expense and my life endangered all on account of your criminal negligence in giving me a surrey you knew to be out of repair.' 'I didn't know anything of the kind,' he interrupted. 'Have you ever read section 4-11-44 of the penal code?' I asked, pityingly. 'No,' he said, looking startled. 'I thought not,' said I; 'you'd better read it and find out what your responsibilities really are.' He hemmed and hawed for awhile. 'S'pose we call it off,' he suggested. 'Call nothing off!' I exclaimed, warmly; 'but I am open to compromise if you really want to keep out of jail. What is the very best you have to offer?' To make a long story short, he refunded me five dollars I had given the farmer for carrying me both ways and I graciously forgave him. Since then I have learned that he had a bill for $32 against me in his pocket at the very time I got in ahead of him with my bluff. Nothing like taking the initiative, my boy; it will carry you through in nine cases out of ten."

GLASS PAPER.

How the Fragments of Broken Bottles Are Now Utilized.

The term glass paper applies to a polishing or smoothing paper for use on wooden surfaces, and is generally referred to and known as sand paper, though in this particular form the surface is coveerd with glass instead of sand. The fragments of broken bottles and coarse waste, after being carefully washed to remove all grease and dirt, is crushed under a revolving stone and sifted into six sizes. The sifting is done by means of revolving cylinders of wire cloth having from 16 to 90 wires to the inch. A surface of thin glue is spread on the paper and the sifted glass dusted over it with a sieve. One patent process consists of coating cloth in this manner instead of paper, two applications of glue and sifted glass being applied.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and also Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper add the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 8, 1901.

Secretary Wesley Greene of the state Horticultural society has received and tabulated reports from twenty counties in various parts of the state, on the condition of the fruit trees. These show the trees in good condition. The circular sent out asked for reports on the present condition of fruit trees and "the indication of an average condition in which 100 represents the normal condition." The tabulated returns thus far make the following showing:

Apples, 85; pears, 86. Plums—American, 87; European, 80; Japan, 4; cherries, 85; peaches, 82; grapes, recovered, 82. Raspberries—red, 75; black, 74; blackberries, 85; strawberries, 84. "This showing is very good, considering all the conditions," said Mr. Greene. "There has been some little injury to cherries, the trees starting to grow last fall because of the long warm weather. There has been a good deal of damage to blackand red raspberries, many of the canes having been killed. Peach buds are promising. The prospects for a large fruit crop are not quite as good as last year, the trees not being set so full of buds as they were a year ago. However, there is an ample number of buds for a good crop and it does not necessarily follow that the thickest set of buds will be followed by the most fruit. I think the reports thus far in show pretty accurately the conditions, though there may be slight changes when the reports are in from all the countries."

There is no prospect of any attempt to insure the state buildings, according to John Cownie, of the board of control. Mr. Cownie in speaking of the question said the losses as shown by the reports to the board were too light to warrant the state in taking out policies and paying premiums. "It has been shown," said Mr. Cownie, "that thirty per cent of the premiums paid into a fire insurance company is sufficient to cover the losses, the other seventy per cent going to the company. If any such percentage holds true as to the losses on the state buildings, the state certainly would make money to carry its own insurance." Mr. Cownie is satisfied the insurance companies will not consent to issue blanket policies taking risks on all the institutions under the board without exacting a stiff premium. In his opinion the legislature would be pursuing a poor financial policy if it directed that the state buildings should be insured, in view of the losses sustained.

Judge Silvara, as the result of a test case tried before him, in which the defendant was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs, announced that the Sunday closing law must and will be enforced. He declared that any storekeeper brought before him in the future on the charge of violating this law will be fined as high as $100 and costs, that it was determined the rights of the clerks shall be protected. The clerks' unions are organized to make a determined fight.

Judge Silvara has rendered a decision in the case of state of Iowa vs. Charles McFarland, holding that Sunday baseball playing is permissable under the statutes of the Iowa code. The decision not only applies to the city of Des Moines, but, if correct, permits Sunday games to be played in any section of Iowa. The case was brought early last fall and tried before Silvara. Charles McFarland, one of the Des Moines pitchers, was arrested on the charge of violating section 5040 of the code relative to Sabbath breaking. McFarland was selected as the defendant, it being the object of the prosecution to make the case a test of the Iowa Sunday labor laws. The attorneys for the defense demurred to the petition filed by the state on the ground that section 5040 does not construe ball playing as labor, and, as there is no reference made to sporting, games, etc., McFarland was not violating the Sabbath laws in the legal sense. The state attempted to show that the defendant was regularly employed by the Des Moines ball club; that he depended upon the management for his whole support, and that in entering in a game of any description or character on the Sabbath day he was laboring. The court sustained the demurrer and the case was thrown out of court.

Secretary of State Martin will collect a fee of $2,000 from the Union Pacific railroad on account of the filing of the amended articles of incorporation, $100,000,000. Last year the company increased its capital $5,000,000 and Secretary of State Gibson neglected to collect the filing fee. The company cited the precedent, but this was ineffective and the charge will be made unless the attorney general decides differently. Mr. Mullen's opinion is well known and questions of this character, and it is thought that he will rule that all cases where an increase of capital is made the maximum of filing fee must be paid.

TURKEY FINALLY SETTLES.

Credit for Forcing an Arrangement Belongs to Lloyd C. Griscom.

Washington, April 3.—There is reason to believe that Lloyd C. Griscom, secretary and charge of the United States legation at Constantinople, who is now on his way home, has earned the credit of effecting final and satisfactory settlement of the American missionary claims against Turkey that have taxed the abilities of no less than three of the ablest ministers ever sent by the United States to Constantinople. It appears now that Mr. Griscom has finally succeeded in arranging with the Turkish government the principle upon which these long standing claims shall be settled and the pledge of the Turkish government is in such binding form that it is not doubted that payment will soon be made.

Japanese Press Bellicose.

London, April 4.—"The Japanese press continues very bellicose," says the Yokohama corespondent of the Daily Mail, wiring yesterday. "Count Okuma (formerly premeir and now leader of the opposition) declares, that Japan must assert herself or the result of the course of an incisive article, the work of thirty years will be lost. Russia, he says, is not a Russian chattel and Russia's action is a direct challenge to Japan."

Smash Coat of Arms.

Geneva, Switzerland, April 8.—A serious demonstration against the Russian and Italian consulates and the residence of the Italian consul occurred in connection with the extradition of Jaffei, an alleged accomplice of Gaetano Presci, the assassin of King Humbert. The mob tore down and shattered the coat of arms of the Russian consulate, but were prevented by the police from doing material damage.

DeWet and Botha Combine.

London, April 4.—Dispatches from Cape Town indicate that General Botha and General De Wet may join in gathering a force of 13,000 men for operations against General French in the Transvaal. Two hundred Boers have reappeared near Richmond, Cape Colony, and the town guard has been called out to defend the place.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

SLOT MACHINES SEIZED.

Justice at Des Moines Takes Steps to Secure a Test Case.

Des Moines, April 5.—The war against slot machines inaugurated by Justice W. A. Tris last week took a decided turn yesterday when he ordered Constable George S. Perry to file informations against a number of places in which the machines have been operated since he gave his order, and to subscribe to petitions for search warrants against the buildings in which the machines were operated.

As soon as the informations were filed Constable Perry was given a warrant for the arrest of Jesse Hammond, a cigar dealer at 211 West Fifth street, charging him with keeping a gambling house, and a search warrant for the premises with instructions to seize the machines found in the place.

Constable Perry, with a deputy and a dray wagon, swooped down on the Hammond store and after serving the search warrant on the clerk in charge, searched the premises and seized two slot machines, both of which were displayed conspicuously in the store room and on which were cards announcing the rewards that would be paid to players securing certain combinations. The machines were loaded into a dray and hauled to the office of Justice Tris.

Hammond gave himself up and says he will fight the case to the end. He claims that the fact a cigar is given for every nickel played in the machines removes the element of gambling and makes the playing of the machines legitimate.

SAY IT IS HUMAN BLOOD.

Damaging Evidence Offered in the Hossack Murder Trial.

Indianola, April 5.—The most damaging evidence thus far submitted in the Hossack murder trial was offered yesterday. The medical experts, Dr. Grimes of Des Moines and Professor Tilton of Indianola, who made the chemical analysis of the blood found on the axe with which the prosecution alleges Mr. Hossack was murdered and which the defense has insisted is that of a fowl, testified that in their opinion the blood is that of a human being. Dr. Grimes goes further and intimates that in his opinion an effort was made to wash the blood from the axe before it was submitted to him for analysis.

One witness testified that he had seen Mrs. Hossack chopping wood and knew her to be an expert with an axe.

It must be admitted, however, that the prosecution has not thus far furnished any direct evidence and it is extremely doubtful if the chain of circumstantial evidence thus far offered will be sufficient to eliminate all doubt of the defendant's guilt from the minds of the jurors. Unless more positive evidence of threats or desire on the part of the defendant to get rid of her husband are offered, it begins to look like the defense will be able to sustain its claim of easy acquittal.

On the other hand, however, it is known the state has not by any means exhausted its efforts and it is claimed by the prosecuting attorney that the best evidence is yet to come. The prosecution was never more confident of securing a conviction.

FEW RECORDS TO BE FOUND.

Cities and Towns Fail to File Papers as Required.

Des Moines, April 8.—Investigation in the office of the secretary of state discloses almost inconceivable looseness in certifying to the secretary of state the records of incorporation of towns and cities. Though the law clearly requires a copy of the entry made by the county clerk of all proceedings in the incorporation of towns and cities, and in the discontinuance or enlargement thereof, and in the annexation of one town or city by another, to be filed by the secretary of state, there are scores of towns and cities in Iowa in which no such records have been certified to the secretary of state's office.

If the book in which the changes in towns and cities in Iowa are recorded in the secretary of state's office is examined, it is found there is scarcely a town or city in the state in which the records are complete. In some cases there are no record of the incorporation of the town; in others no record of the change of a town to a city of the second class. Towns that have been discontinued are still towns so far as the record is concerned. The record book pertaining to cities and towns runs back as far as 1855, and persumably from the failure of clerks of courts in the counties to certify up the records required, it has at no time been kept with any completeness or accuracy.

LEHIGH HAS A $60,000 FIRE.

Business District of the Town Nearly Wiped Out.

Boone, April 4.—The town of Lehigh, three miles northwest of here, was nearly wiped off the map by a fire which broke out early yesterday morning and raged furiously until property valued at over $60,000 was destroyed. It was first discovered at the rear of H. W. Ross' hardware store. At that time it had such headway that it could not be controlled by the meager facilities at hand. It was only stopped by tearing buildings down that were in its path. Ross' hardware store, the postoffice, the bank, the livery barn, a racket store, a bakery and a restaurant and three boarding houses are total losses. The damage is covered partially by insurance—estimated at about one-half.

CONTEST OVER MADE LAND.

Sioux City, April 5.—A fight has been instituted between the Illinois Central railway and the city of Sioux City for possession of a valuable strip of land along the Missouri in the business part of the city. The city stole a march, put a force of men at work and the land was fenced in. The Illinois Central will immediately bring legal action to eject the city and retain the property. The land in question is an accretion to the city's original grant to the Sioux City & Pacific railway for wharfage rights. Later the Illinois Central purchased of the Sioux City & Pacific and in the meantime the Missouri river added to the original strip amounting to eight or ten acres, valued at thousands of dollars. The city claims that the new land is not accretion, but that it was formed by the protective dikes and barriers built by the government.

Put a Bullet Through His Head.

Iowa City, April 6.—Fred Howald, a young man 30 years of age residing at Solon, twelve miles north of here, attempted suicide at his home. He placed the muzzle of a 32-caliber revolver into his mouth and pulled the trigger. The bullet went through his head and fell out on the floor. Howald said he was tired of life and wished to be done with the world by Easter morn. He will probably succeed in his desires.

Liquor Salesman Fined.

Washington, April 2.—Frank Roesch, a traveling salesman for a Burlington, liquor house, has been found guilty under the law passed by the last general assembly of soliciting orders for intoxicants, and was fined $50 and costs. This is the first conviction in a district court in Iowa under the new law. In this instance the liquor was shipped from Burlington and no appeal will be taken from the decision.

STATE REVENUE THIS YEAR

General Taxes Should Bring in Over $1,400,000.

Des Moines, April 5.—From the returns certified to the auditor of state by the county auditors it is computed the amount of state tax authorized to be raised for the general revenue fund by the levy made in 1900 and collectable this year is $1,404,828.37. This will be the proceeds from a levy of 2.6 mills on the total assessed valuation of the counties, not considering taxes that are delinquent.

In the enactment regarding the general levy for state purposes, the legislature in 1900 fixed the amount to be raised for general state purposes at $1,400,000. While the executive council fixed on the levy necessary to raise this sum, it was figured out in the revenue department of the auditor's office what the levy should be. The reports from the auditor show that the rate was determined with unusual accuracy, a levy of 2.6 mills coming within but $4,828.37 of raising the exact amount required.

While the total of the amount the county treasurers are authorized by the county auditors to collect is $1,404,828.37, it is to be borne in mind that not all of this will be collected. From experience it is learned the state gets on an average of over ninety-eight per cent of the amount of the levy, the delinquent list being less than two per cent. On the other hand, the uncollected tax will be offset by the amount of the collections of the tax ferrets. Hence it is computed the state will receive this year almost an even $1,400,000.

In addition to the amount to be raised for general state purposes, there is a levy of one-tenth of a mill for the state university and one-tenth of a mill for the agricultural college. These levies will raise $54,031.91 for each institution.

In a short time the matter of computing the levy to be fixed by the executive council this year, the proceeds from which will be collected in 1902, will be taken up. On or before the third Monday in June the county auditors are required to transmit to the state auditor, abstracts of the assessment in their respective counties. The second Monday in July the executive council will meet as a board of equalization and equalize the assessments between the counties. Before the first Monday in August the results will have to be certified back to the county auditors. The executive council can then fix the rate of the levy. The amount to be levied for general state purposes this year and collected in 1902 is $1,500,000, or $100,000 more than the amount to be raised by the tax collections of the year 1901.

This year a real estate assessment is required by law. It is expected there will be a large increase in the valuation of real and other property and although the state will levy $100,000 more general revenue, yet it is believed a rate of 2.6 mills, the same as the rule now in force, will be sufficient. In the revenue department of Auditor Merriam's office, it is calculated it will not be necessary to raise the levy from the present rate in order to get $1,500,000 on the increased valuation of property. In 1899 the rate of the levy was 2.9 mills

FOR BUENA VISTA COLLEGE.

Local Citizens Have Contributed $25,000 of the Endowment.

Storm Lake, April 8.—Buena Vista college, which has been struggling for existence in competition with the larger educational institutions of the state, is to be placed on a self-sustaining basis by an endowment of $100,000. In addition to subscribing funds to purchase the site and build the handsome college building, Storm Lake citizens have kept the college running by liberal assistance yearly. Now local citizens have subscribed $25,000 more towards an endowment of $100,000. The Presbyterians of Iowa have promised as much more and a large percentage of this has been actually subscribed. The board of aid for colleges have assigned Buena Vista a field in Ohio which is very promising, and President Reed stakes his reputation on the question of successfully raising the $100,000 endowment this year. The college has always done excellent work, but unfortunately its presidents have not had the faculty of raising funds. Mr. Reed is long on this faculty and is filling the position with gerat credit and honor to the college.

CONTRACTS TAKEN AWAY.

Regents Will Complete Collegiate Buildings--Dean of Law School.

Iowa City, April 5.—The board of regents of the State university heard arguments of the Warren Roberts company of Chicago as to why notice should not be served on them taking the new collegiate hall out of their hands, as provided by the contract, on account of neglect and delay. The board felt that the building must be done by September 1, and the Warren Roberts company could not give satisfactory evidence of ability to do this. The regents will go ahead with the building themselves. The foundation of the building was laid in 1898, and considering the need of the university for the building, the delay upon it has been outrageous.

The board decided to grant free tuition to the amount of $25 to volunteers of the Spanish-American war in the professional departments.

The board left the selection of a dean of the college of law to the president and law committee, the salary not to exceed $4,000.

PRESIDENT IS PLEASED.

Regards the Russian Attitude as Entirely Satisfactory.

Iowa City, April 8.—The Carrie Nation craze has struck Iowa City. Mrs William Yarvosky was passing Senner's saloon and seeing her husband therein rushed in and grabbing from his hand a schooner of beer, threw the glass and contents straight towards the big glass mirror at the back of the bar. The bartender ducked and the heavy glass struck the cash register, smashing it badly. After threatening to clean the house out if any more liquor was sold to her husband, the woman left, leaving the saloon man badly scared. In the melee the woman's husband left and went home.

Attempt to Dynamite a Building.

Dubuque, April 4—Rev. Mr. Hodgeman, leader of the religious organization known as "God's Worship Army," in this city, found a stick of dynamite on his hall floor. It was evidently intended to blow up the building. The old gentleman says he has not an enemy in the world that he knows of, and can't conceive of any reason why this attempt on his life was made. The police are making a thorough investigation.

Mrs. Foster Given Three Years.

Mason City, April 8.—Mrs. Foster, convicted of complicity in the attempted murder of her husband at Algona, was sentenced by Judge Bailie to three years in the penitentiary at hard labor.

Loved the Same Girl.

Cherokee, April 4.—Robert Goff, a young man of this city, shot Charles Lauer. The bullet entered the victim's body over the heart, inflicting what may be a fatal wound. Lauer's home is in the country near here.

The tragedy is the outgrowth of a quarrel over a girl. Goff was with her on the outskirts of town at 10 o'clock p. m., when Lauer and companions drove by. They drove back and Lauer got out and attacked Goff and was shot. Lauer's companions say he was shot while in the buggy. Goff is about 20 and Lauer 25 years old. Neither has the best of reputations.

STORIETTES.

Winston Churchill, who recently made his maiden speeech in parliament, describes a political candidate as "a man who is asked to stand, wants to sit and is expected to lie."

One day at Burlington House, Tennyson is said to have asked the guests a conundrum which he had just made: "Who are the greatest women in the world?" The answer was: "Miss Ouri, the Misses Ippi and Sara Gossa."

Arthur Simmons, the venerable negro attendant at the white house, was dozing in his chair the other day, when an usher rushed upstairs and said: "Man down here wants to see Mr. Cortelyou." "Can't see him," replied Arthur, with dignity. "But this man says he's got to see him." "Don't care nothin' about that," said Arthur, preparing to resume his doze; "nobody can see Secretary Cortelyou; he's gone into his sanctum sanitarium."

Congressman Brick of Indiana has a constituent who thinks he should have a pension because he sent a substitute to the civil war. "I am old and feeble," he wrote to Mr. Brick, "and I don't suppose I shall live a great while, but I need money while I do live. I think the government owes me something. I paid a man three hundred dollars to take my place in the war when I was drafted, and he was killed in action. Now, I think I am entitled to a pension or should get the three hundred dollars back. Will you please see that I do?"

Embassador Choate is fond of telling of how the late William M. Evarts replied to an impossible toast at a Harvard dinner which he (Choate) presided over. Instead of asking the men who were down for speeches to respond to the regulation toasts, Mr. Choate read off a question to each from one of the college examination papers, and then called up his victim. The query which fell to Mr. Evarts was this: "Why is it that the stomach, which continually digests food, is never itself digested?" Evarts, in response, said: "I have attended a good many Harvard dinners before this, and long ago, as a result of my experience with them, before setting out from New York to attend one of these feasts, I always divest myself of the coats of my stomach and hang them up in my wardrobe."

DEERING AT PARIS IN 1900.

The Famous Chicago Harvester Company Received More and Greater Honors than Were Ever Before Accorded an American Exhibitor in the History of Expositions.

America may well feel proud of the interest which her citizens took in the Paris Exposition and the elaborate exhibits which were prepared with consummate skill and displayed in a manner not excelled by any other country. Those of Harvesting Machinery in particular were most complete and interesting. The Deering Harvester Company, of Chicago, America's foremost manufacturer of this line of goods, was accorded the position of honor, having contributed more to the advancement of the art of harvesting than any other manufacturer, living or dead, and with a greater array of important inventions to its credit than any other company in the world.

Visitors to the Exposition were prompt to accord the Deering exhibits supreme honors, and it only remained for official mandate to ratify the popular verdict, which was done in a manner as substantial as it was well-merited. Each one of the seven Deering exhibits secured the highest award in its class.

In addition to four high decorations, the Deering Harvester Company received twenty-five awards, or twenty-nine in all, as follows: Decoration of Officer of the Legion of Honor, Decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Two Decorations of Officer of Merite Agricole, a Special Certificate of Honor, The Grand Prize, Six Gold Medals, Six Silver Medals and Eleven Bronze Medals, including Deering Collaborator Medals.

The Decoration of the Legion of Honor was instituted by Napoleon Bonoparte when First Consul in 1802, and is only conferred in recognition of distinguished military or civil achievements. It is the highest distinction in the gift of the French Republic.

The Decoration of the Merite Agricole is an honor of but slightly less importance, which is conferred upon those who have contributed greatly to the advancement of agriculture.

An Official Certificate of Honor was accorded the Deering Retrospective Exhibit, which showed the improvements in harvesting machinery during the past century, and excited the highest praise of the French Government Officials who had entrusted to the Deering Harvester Company the preparation of this most important exhibit. By special request this exhibit has been presented to the National Museum of Arts and Sciences at Paris, where it has become a permanent feature of that world-famed institution.

The Deering Twine Exhibit and Corn Harvester Exhibit, both of which received the highest awards, have by request of the French Government been presented to the National Agricultural College of France.

There was no field trial, either official or otherwise, in connection with the Paris Exposition, but the most important foreign contest the past season was held under the auspices of the Russian Expert Commission at the Governmental Farm of Tomsk, Siberia, August 14th to 18th. All the leading American and European machines participated and were subjected to the most difficult tests by the Government Agriculturist. The Expert Commission awarded the Deering Harvester Company the Grand Silver Medal of the Minister of Agriculture and Domain, which was the highest award.

The Deering Harvester Works are the largest of their kind in the world, covering eighty-five acres and employing 9,000 people. They are equipped with modern automatic machines, many of which perform the labor of from five to fifteen hands.

This Company is also the largest manufacturer of Binder Twine in the world, having been first to produce single-strand binder twine, such as is in general use today, making over a third of the product of the entire world. The output of its factory for a single day would tie a band around the earth at the equator, with several thousand miles to spare. The annual production would fill a freight train twenty miles long. Made into a mat two feet wide, it would reach across the American continent from ocean to ocean.

Deering machines are known as LIGHT DRAFT IDEALS, consisting of Binders, Mowers, Reapers, Corn Harvesters, Shredders and Rakes.

This company exhibited at the Paris Exposition an Automobile Mower, which attracted much attention, and exhibitions were given with one of these machines in the vicinity of Paris throughout the season.

If you can't tell twins apart wait until they are together and tell them.

AGUINALDO TAKES OATH

But He Will Be Held a Prisoner for an Indefinite Period.

Washington, April 3.—Secretary Root has just made public the following cablegram:

"Manila.—Adjutant General, Washington: Since arrival at Manila Aguinaldo has been at Malacanan investigating conditions in the archipelago. He has relied almost entirely upon the instructive advice of Chief Justice Arellano. As a result today he subscribed and swore to the declaration on page 11 of my annual report. MacArthur."

The oath referred to is as follows:

"I hereby renounce all allegiance to any and all so-called revolutionary governments in the Philippine islands and recognize and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America therein; I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to that government; that I will at all times conduct myself as a faithful and law-abiding citizen of the said islands, and will not either directly or indirectly hold correspondence with or give intelligence to an enemy of the United States, nor will I aget, harbor or protect such enemy; that I impose upon myself these voluntary obligations without any mental reservations for purpose or evasion, so help me God."

Four asterisks in the cablegram mark a passage withheld from publication, about which the officials will say nothing.

Washington, April 3.—Notwithstanding the taking of the oath by Aguinaldo he still will be held as a prisoner by General MacArthur. It is possible he may be granted more liberty of action but we will not be afforded complete freedom for the present. The action of Aguinaldo in taking the oath, it is believed at the war department, will have a far-reaching effect in the pacification of the islands.

$335,000 MORE FOR THE KING.

Committee Recommends a Big Increase in the Civil List.

London, April 5.—The report of the committee appointed to consider changes in the civil list recommends that the new civil list be fixed at about 470,000 pounds as follows:

Privy purse, 110,000 pounds; salaries of household and retired allowances, 125,000 pounds; expenses of household, 193,000 pounds; works, 20,000 pounds; royal bounty, alms and special services, 13,000 pounds, and sundries 8,000 pounds. The report recommends an annuity of 20,000 pounds to the Duke of Cornwall and York, 10,000 pounds to the Duchess of Cornwall and York, and 6,000 pounds to each of the king's daughters. The queen's annuity in the event of her surviving the king is increased to 70,000 pounds, and an annuity of 30,000 pounds is provided for the Duchess of Cornwall and York in the event of her surviving the duke. The proposals for the civil list show a net increase of 67,000 pounds. Mr. Labouchere, the sole signatory of the minority report, thinks that no increase is necessary.

PHILLIPS PAYS $140,000.

Takes That Much to Cover His Losses in the Chicago Wheat Pit.

Chicago, April 4.—George H. Phillips, whose daring operations in grain have made him the cynosure of all speculative eyes interested in the cereal markets, passed a crisis in his career on the board of trade yesterday. He was driven from the wheat pit, the weakest of his defenses, but stood firm behind the breastworks of corn and oats he has thrown up during the past few weeks.

Monday a call for additional margins was made and the young speculator put up $220,000. Tuesday it was reported that an additional call would be made yesterday and that tremendous onslaught, calculated to force him to the wall, would be made by big operators. At the tap of the opening gong yesterday the attack came. Phillips produced $200,000 additional margin money in response to the second call. Severely pressed, he retreated from the wheat pit, after selling 1,500,000 bushels of May wheat at a loss which will probably average 1½ cents per bushel.

IRREGULARITIES ARE NOT GRAVE.

General MacArthur's Statement Regarding Reported Frauds.

Washington, April 4.—The following cablegram was received today at the war department from General MacArthur at Manila:

"Brigadier General Robert P. Hughes reports surrender at Banga, northwest Panay, March 31, thirty officers, 185 men, 105 rifles. General Kobbe reports twenty-one men and twenty-three guns surrendered March 31, northern Mindanao.

"Commissary frauds being investigated; not sufficient gravity to cause concern; apparent due irregularities sales savings. Press reports inexact and misleading.

"MacArthur."

PEACE PLANS REJECTED.

Important Proposals Made by Aguinaldo Are Refused.

New York, April 4.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

Important proposals relative to the surrender of all the insurgents in the Philippines have been made by Aguinaldo through General MacArthur to the United States.

The proposals were brought before the cabinet meeting and at its conclusion instructions in reply to them were sent by Secretary Root. The president will not bargain with Aguinaldo, but if the prisoner will use his influence the United States will welcome his aid and will consider his conduct when determining the future of the prisoner.

KNOX ACCEPTS THE JOB.

Will Become Attorney General Within a Short Time.

Washington, April 6.—When the cabinet met yesterday President McKinley announced to the members that Mr. P. C. Knox, of Pittsburg, Pa., has accepted the attorney generalship, which was offered to him last week.

Stabbing Proves Fatal.

Mt. Vernon, April 3.—Charles McFarland, a young man of Lisbon, died at his home as the result of being accidentally stabbed. McFarland and a friend, Will Albright, were scuffling in the blacksmith shop of the latter's brother, the former with a pair of pliers and the latter with a large knife in his hand. In the scuffle McFarland made a lunge at Albright, catching the knife squarely in the left side. The left lung was punctured. McFarland was carried to a physician's office and later taken home. He grew worse steadily until death ensued. The coroner will investigate.

Losses in War Continue High.

London, April 6.—The British casualties in South Africa continue high. The totals for the month of March are: Killed, 9 officers and 103 men; wounded, 26 officers and 270 men.

Russia Must Act.

Peking, April 6.—On one subject the members of the Russian legation claim to know nothing, and that is the Manchurian question. The feeling at the other legations is that Russia is bound to do something or lose prestige with the Chinese. The members of the British legation in particular are satisfied that in spite of China's refusal to sign the Manchurian agreement, she will soon sign something similar in order to protect her own interests and have even nominal control of Manchuria, which is now practically Russian territory.

If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

Men and women everywhere are praising Peruna as follows:

A First Class Tonic.

Wm. A. Collier, Assistant Paymaster U. S. N., writes: "I have taken Peruna and recommend it to those needing a first-class tonic."

A Great Tonic.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator and Ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes from Edgefield, S. C.: "I have been using Peruna for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine and besides a great tonic."

Splendid for the Nerves.

Robert B. Mantell, the famous actor, writes from New York City: "Peruna is splendid and most invigorating—refreshing to the nerves and brain."

For General Debility.

Hon. Jno. V. Wright, of the Law Department, General Land Office of Tennessee, writes: "I wish everyone who is suffering with general debility or prostration could know of Peruna."

A Spring Tonic.

Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va., says: "There is no better spring tonic than Peruna, and I have used about all of them."

A Good Tonic.

Captain Percy W. Moss, Second Arkansas Volunteers, writes from Pargould, Ark.: "I find Peruna a very good spring tonic, and will readily recommend it at any time."

Builds Up the Entire System.

Miss Jennie Johnson, 3118 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, Ill., is Vice President of Chicago Teachers' Federation. She writes: "Peruna restores the functions of nature, induces sleep and builds up the entire system."

Makes Steady Nerves.

D. L. Wallace, Charter Member International Barbers' Union, 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, writes: "I now feel splendid. My head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy my food and rest well."

The Best of Tonics.

Hon. W. C. Chambers, Chief Justice of Samoa, says: "I have tried one bottle of Peruna and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used."

A Grand Tonic.

Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, of the "Olympia," writes: "I used Peruna and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic."

For Overwork.

Mr. Tefft Johnson, a prominent actor of Washington, D. C., writes from Fourteenth and "I" streets: "In the effort to improve a condition impaired by overwork, I have found nothing that has done as much good as Peruna."

For a Worn-out System.

Mrs. Catherine Toll, President "Valkyrien Association," 5649 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I often advise Peruna in cases of a worn-out system and a broken down constitution."

Hollow Ash... Hall

BY MARGARET BLOUNT.

CHAPTER I.

It was a wild, raw November afternoon. The sky was dark and lowering; the wind swept down from the hills with a mournful, wailing sound, and beneath the tall trees, that bent before the gale, lay heaps of faded yellow leaves, trodden out of all shape and beauty by the feet that were continually traversing the narrow village paths.

Upon the hills, and out on the broad highway, the scene was dreary enough. But the little village of Banley, with its red-tiled roofs and latticed windows, all aglow with the blaze of firelight, wore a look of cheerful comfort, which the wintry aspect of the day rather heightened than diminished.

Banley, lying far inland, was one of those primitive little places where the sound of the railway whistle had never come. There was a branch line, it is true, some twelve miles away, but few of its passengers ever found their way across the hills, and few of the inhabitants of Banley had seen the station, or tested the capabilities of the wondrous iron horse. Those who had done so, having returned in safety, became oracles among their neighbors, as people of deep experience, and one word of theirs outweighed a score from others, who had not seen the world."

The village, like most of the kind, consisted of a straggling street of cottages, with gay flower gardens in front and an enclosure or kitchen, vegetables and a few fruit trees, at the back. There was a church and a parsonage, it is true, but the vicar was non-resident, being more deeply interested in the conversion of Irish Catholics than in the religious state of English Protestants, albeit they were of his own flock. Consequently the vicarage was shut up, and a consumptive curate with a sickly wife and a family of seven children, living in a cottage at the upper end of the village, keeping up appearances—by means known only to curates and their wives on the pittance salary of one hundred pounds a year.

Anxious and careworn enough the pair often looked, but they loved each other dearly, and were beloved by every one around, so it may be that their fate was not a hard one, after all.

The curate and his wife, poor though they might be, were the only people in the village who could properly be designated "gentlefolks." The Lord of the Manor was non-resident, the Manor House itself being anything but a desirable home. If all was true that was told of the sights and sounds that had been seen and heard there at different times by different people the poor man was very wise in not coming to look after his property in person.

Hollow Ash Hall was a haunted house.

It stood at some distance from the village, upon a green and fertile eminence, shut out from the common approach, though not from common view, by a high stone wall and a lofty pair of iron gates. There were a porter's lodge, untenanted, of course, and a small cottage within the grounds, which had once been occupied by some humble dependent of the family, in the day when that family was numerous and happy, and strongly united by the thousand sweet ties that bind a loving heart to home.

Seen from the public road, the Hall was simply a square, brick-fronted English mansion, of the ordinary type, comfortably and conveniently built, with stables, green houses, gardens and conservatories, enough to satisfy all the requirements of modern polite society. The yew trees at the back, and the long, bare lawn in front, gave it a melancholy appearance; but no one would have dreamed of calling it a haunted house had they not been told that it had an undoubted right to the name. There was not even a hollow ash tree in view, to account for its unusable title. But the villagers, when questioned upon the subject, would look wise, and lead you to the top of a narrow, damp lane, where grew a solitary tree, that had been touched by the scathing finger of the lightning on its mission of destruction and death. That was "Hollow Ash," and that was the "Burnt Ash Lane;" down which lane, as a sort of "short cut" to the scene of their uncanny revels, it may be, strange figures were said to flit as soon as the clock from the neighboring church had tolled the hour of twelve.

Not only one ghost haunted the place—there were at least three or four; and their names were more familiar to the persons who owned the manor than to any curious stranger who sought to pry into its secrets. But it must have been a bold man or woman who would have dared to ask a Vernon a question. They were a silent, haughty, reserved race, by no means addicted to the foolish practice of "wearing their hearts upon their sleeves." And if there was one subject upon which they were more silent and reserved than another, it was that of the haunted manor. They left it; they could not bear to talk of it; and so the mystery grew by feeding upon itself, till stories were told of the place that would have made the hair of the bravest and wisest listeners stand upon end with horror.

It may easily be imagined what a commotion Banley was in, one day, when the tidings spread abroad that a gentleman direct from London was about to rent the Hall. People stared at their neighbors and shook their heads. It could not be; unless the newcomers hailed from Colney Hatch or Hanwell, he could not, for a moment, be thinking of such a thing.

But the news was confirmed in the afternoon by no less a person than the landlord of the "Vernon Arms," who recited to a group of eager and thirsty listeners his wondrous tale. The family from London were, at that moment, beneath his roof. So far from being denizens of a lunatic asylum, they were most respectable people a city banker, his wife and two daughters, who came down for a change of air, and seeing a fine house standing empty, naturally enough concluded that it was to let. So, at the "Vernon Arms," in an after-dinner chat with their host, they managed to ask numerous questions about the mansion on the hill. He answered them truthfully; but he added, with a shake of the head, as expressive as Lord Burleigh's, "He wished no harm might come of it," for they laughed at the idea of ghosts, and one of the young ladies begged so hard to live in a real haunted house that her papa had actually sent for the agent.

The landlord laughed, drew a long breath, and solaced himself with a great draught of his own ale.

At that moment the agent himself was seen descending the stairs; the landlord, hurrying from behind the bar, threw the door wide open, with a low bow. But Mr. Grant declined the polite invitation, beckoned him out into the pasage, and closed the door upon the gaping and disappointed rustics.

"I want to speak to you a moment, Grimes," he said, impatiently. "Is there no private place in this house?"

"To be sure—to be sure, sir," replied the host. "Step this way, if you please. Becky, my love, pray go and mind the bar a little while. We want the parlor to ourselves just now."

Becky, who was the meek-faced mistress of the establishment, being thus addressed, took up the stocking she was mending and went out without a murmur. The landlord closed the door behind her, and the agent nodded approvingly.

"Capital training you have her in, Mr. Grimes."

"Well, sir, one's obliged to keep the whiphand or there's no end of kicking over traces, you know. Now Becky, there, is the best woman in England, though I say it as shouldn't. But I should never dream of telling her so. The house would not hold the two of us together ten minutes afterwards."

"Quite right, Grimes. The less you praise a woman the better she behaves, as a general rule, I think. But now let us go to business. I'm very much bothered in my own mind, Grimes, and I want some advice."

Grimes, who had been busy over the fire with some mysterious preparation, which the agent affected not to see, now returned to the table, bearing two steaming tumblers of rum-punch, which he put down with an air of triumphant self-satisfaction.

"I do believe, the very best I ever made yet, Mr. Grant," he observed, as he placed one cosy arm-chair before the fire for his visitor, and ensconced his own plump person comfortably within the depths of another.

"Good it must be, then, to a dead certainty," replied the agent, taking a long, delicious draught. "Enough to make a man forget one-half his troubles and snap his finger at the rest."

"I hope it will make you forget yours, then, sir," replied the landlord, who was dying with curiosity to know why he had been summoned to this particular conference.

"Ah, no such luck as that! The trouble tonight is not exactly a trouble, after all. I am bewildered and bothered. I want to do a thing, and yet I cannot tell if I ought. Grimes, you know the old Hall?"

The host nodded his head.

"I should think I did, sir!'"

"And you know what stories people tell about the place?"

"That I do. Old John Jones, the gardener, has made my flesh creep many a time with his tales of the turret-chamber, and the butler's pantry, and the secret room where the priests used to hide away many, many years ago."

"John Jones is an idiot!" said the agent, impatiently. "Upon my word, I believe the house is as quiet and peaceable as this old inn of yours."

Mr. Grimes took a sip of rum-punch, and said nothing.

"I have been through the place a hundred times—I dare say more—and I never saw anything there, nor heard anything either, for the matter of that."

"Did you ever go there at night, sir?" asked Mr. Grimes, with a significant smile.

"No, I can't say that I ever did." And the agent smiled, too. "But you don't mean to say that you—a sensible, clear-headed man—really believe the rubbish they tell about the place—now, do you?"

"Do you, sir?"

"Of course not."

"Well, I should be sorry to have to sleep there myself, that is all I know about it."

"Now, Grimes, tell me plainly what you think you should see?"

"Well, there's a lot of ghosts to choose from up there," said the landlord, meditatively. "You pays your money and you takes your choice. you can have a Jesuit priest, reading his mass-book; or old Vernon, counting his money-bags; or a young man seated by a table in a room fixed up in grand style, with a woman old enough to be his mother, sitting on a sofa with an ugly look upon her face, and another woman peering through a window back of her, looking uglier, if possible, than she; or you can have good Queen Bess looking after the farthing she dropped——"

"Pshaw! When was Queen Bess at Banley, I should like to know? Why, it was not built till she had been dead more than fifty years. What do they want with her ghosts there?"

"Can't say, sir. But most old houses have a story about her and that blessed farthing. I wonder that she didn't take better care of it when she was alive. It has given her trouble enough since."

"Well, let her be where she may, I don't believe she is at Hollow Ash Hall."

"No more do I sir.'"

"I knew it! You are a sensible man, Mr. Grimes."

"I don't believe in Queen Bess, nor in old Vernon, nor yet in the priest. There is one thing there I do believe in, though."

"And what is that?"

"The last ghost. It's not yet more than twenty-five years old, you know. The ghost of the butler's pantry. You know what I mean, sir?"

"Pshaw!" said the guest, turning red.

"From things which came to my knowledge when I was a younger man than I am now, I shouldn't wonder if there was something in that. No wonder that Vernon could not live there."

"Hush, Grimes!" said the agent, looking nervously towards the door. "There are some things in this world that are not to be spoken of."

"Exactly. And I never have spoken of that to any one before for many years. But it's my opinion the gentleman from London will pretty soon get sick of his bargain."

"That is what I wanted to see you about, Grimes."

"The bargain?"

"Yes."

"What ails it, sir?"

"Nothing at all."

"Is the gentleman willing to make it?"

"Perfectly."

"Liberal in his notions?"

"Very. He told me that he would pay just as much for the use of the place as if there had never been any story about it."

"Very handsome of him. People generally expect to get a haunted house for nothing per year."

"Ah, but he laughs at the idea, pays the actual rent of the place just to prove that he has no faith in ghosts."

"Well, I wish him joy of his new home, that is all."

"And so do I. However, if he has a fancy it is no business of mine. But here comes the rub."

"I don't see it."

"Have I a right to let the house?" Mr. Grimes started.

"Why, you are agent."

"Yes."

"Then who has a better right?"

"No one. But, you see, I don't know what Mr. Vernon would say."

"Of course he would be pleased."

"Do you think so?"

"I am sure of it."

"I wish I was. Mr. Vernon is a very strange man."

CHEAP AND EFFECTIV.

Workman at Mannheim, Germany Solves Artificial Coal Problem.

A workman of Manheim, Germany, thinks he has solved the problem of artificial coal. By his process he says he can make a substitute for coal at a cost of twenty-five cents for 220 pounds. Peat is the basis of his compound, and with the peat are mixed certain chemicals. People who have seen the product burn say that it gives a great heat, burns with a bright flame and leaves no slag and only a small quantity of white ash. The inventor's name is Montag, and capitalists already have offered to him a salary of $4,000 a year and 2 per cent. of the profits if he will turn over to them his invention. He has refused, however, and has formed a partnership with a man who has agreed to furnish enough funds to start the manufacture of the coal substitute. They have bought twenty-five acres of peat land and have bonded 125 more in the neighborhood of Hockenheim, where they will establish a plant large enough to keep several hundred men at work. It is figured that the daily output will be sixty tons. It is said that the peat is thoroughly dried, ground by machinery, mixed with chemicals and pressed into bricks. Artificial coal is no new thing, but heretofore the expense of making it has been the chief drawback. If a good and a cheap artificial coal could be manufactured it would have a decided effect upon the world's industries, and also upon the "coal barons" and the "coal roads."

ONE DAY OF GLORY.

Child of Luxury Satisfactory Satisfied with a Rag Baby.

Poverty touches wealth closely and in sharp contrast in Bryant Park, at Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, a favorite playground for the children of the Murray Hill section, as well as for the less-favored little ones from the run-down flats hard by on either side, says the New York Press.

One day last week a white-aproned nurse wheeled a richly dressed little girl into the park. Several expensive toys were in the child's carriage, and she held a fine French doll, but she was fretting and pouting. Not so, however, the little tenement dweller, whose face beamed as she ran along hugging home-made doll—a rag affair with a head made of muslin stuffed with cotton, and with ferocious eyes of ink and a great blot of a mouth. "Pretty baby," said the little lady from her chariot as the poorer child stopped and gazed at the exquisite wax doll. "Mother made her," replied the tenement child with pride as she held the rag doll up for inspection and then clasped it fondly to her breast. The wax doll lay neglected in the carriage while disparity in worldly goods gave way before a community of childish interests. The frown left the face of the spoiled child of luxury as she took the rag baby on a ride about the park, the child of the tenements tripping gayly alongside the carriage. The gift that a poverty-stricken mother's love had contrived gave a morning's happiness to the child of wealth, as well as to her own shabbily clad but blithesome little daughter.

Robberies of English Relics.

Of all curious robberies the stealing of wax figures of kings and heroes from Westminster Abbey would seem as remarkable as any. These august effigies are kept in a certain part of the abbey and were once much more numerous than they are now. At least a dozen have disappeared mysteriously and who stole them and how they got away with them are still mysteries. Among the effigies purloined was that of Nelson, which disappeared about half a century ago. There was such a popular outcry over this that a new one was made and set up, and it is this new one which is now shown to visitors. Another tantalizing robbery has made poorer the Sloane Museum in Lincoln's Inn Fields, London. At the death of Sir John Sloane he left his money to the museum, which he had founded. Two cupboards were found carefully locked and in Sir John's will it was directed that one should be opened in 1887 and the other in 1912. There money was to be found for the enlargement of the museum. When the first cupboard was opened it was found empty and bore every evidence of having been robbed. Will the second cupboard be found also to have been tampered with?

Tenant Swindled Children.

A man living in a tenement in Battersea, London, told the children of the neighborhood that the penny-in-the-slot gas meter was a new and resplendent bright red money box, specially designed to accommodate the savings of economical youngsters. On this assumption they cheerfully dropped their copper savings into the slot, and the ingenious deceiver burned the gas which cost him nothing. When the collector came and cleared away all the pennies the chagrin of the children was intense.

Five Sons in British Navy.

Recently Sir Fleetwood Edwards, keeper of his majesty's privy purse, sent to the mayor of Lyme Regis a postoffice order for £3 to be handed to Mr. J. Warren, a naval pensioner of that town, who has at present five sons in the royal navy, "as a mark of the king's appreciation of this interesting record." Mr. Warren is himself the son of a naval pensioner.

California's presidential electors cast their vote in the largest hall in Sacramento in the presence of an immense assemblage, including the pupils of the public schools.

When he departed for a short vacation, a Missouri editor left a minister in charge of his paper. He had been superintending things but a few days when a letter came from a "way-back" subscriber, which read: "You know d—— well I paid my subscription the last time I was in Lexington. If I get any more such letters I will come down and maul h—— out of you." The minister answered: "I have been trying to maul that thing out of the editor for ten years, and if you really come down and maul it out of him, then, my dear sir, I have twenty members of my church you can operate on."

An old Scotch farmer once went to have a troublesome tooth extracted. Said the dentist, after looking at the offending molar: "It is a very ugly one. I would advise you to have it out by the painless system. It is only a shilling extra." He showed the farmer the apparatus for administering gas, remarking that it would cause him to fall asleep for a minute and before he awoke the tooth would be out. After a slight resistance the sufferer consented, proceeding to open his purse. "Oh, never mind paying just now!" said the dentist, kindly. "Hoots!" answered the cautious old Scot, "A' wasn't thinking o' that; but if A'm ga'en ta sleep A' thocht A' wad like ta count ma siller fust."

A WOMAN'S HEART.

Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer Tells a Harrowing Tale of Suffering.

M'Carron, Mich., April 8.—(Special.)—Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer of this place has given the following interesting letter for publication:

"For years I suffered intense pain in the region of the heart. I doctored with the best physicians. Some of them would relieve me for a short time, but the pain always returned. My heart was so bad that I would have to sit up in bed for hours, to get relief. I would lie awake almost all night. I am 62 years of age, and no one can understand how much I suffered with this Heart Trouble.

"About a year ago I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and commenced to use them. From the first my condition improved. The pain in my heart gradually grew less, and my general health much better, and now I can say positively that I am entirely cured. I can sleep all night, and enjoy almost perfect health. I thank God for the cure that has come to me through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have thought long over the matter of giving this letter for publication, and am doing so now without any solicitation whatever, and simply because I feel it to be my duty to express the profound gratitude I feel for my recovery, and to let others who may be suffering as I was know how they may find a cure. I know that nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, because I have taken no other medicine for over a year. I feel better now than I have for many years, and it is all due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Mrs. Dyer's case and its cure has attracted a great deal of attention, and her letter is a splendid tribute to the curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

W. S. Gilbert, of Gilbert and Sullivan opera fame, was one day standing on the steps of his club house in London, when a stranger approached and asked: "Does a man belong to your club with one eye named Walker?" "I don't know," was the answer; "what's the name of his other eye?"

THE BEST HE EVER SAW.

A Missourian Pronounces on the Farming Possibilities of Western Canada.

Just at present considerable interest is being aroused in the fact that a few new districts (of limited acreage) are being opened out by the Canadian government in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia (western Canada), and any information concerning this country is eagerly sought. Mr. W. R. Corser, of Higginsville, Lafayette Co., Mo., was a delegate there during last summer, and writing of his impressions he says:

"I found surprising yields of grain of all descriptions. One farmer I visited threshed of 175 acres:

"600 bushels of wheat from fifteen acres, 40 bushels to acre.

"The samples were all No. 1.

"I also saw a considerable number of stock. Swine do well and there is no disease amongst them. They are a good source of income to the farmer. The cattle on the range beat anything I ever saw. Fat and ready for beef, fully matured and ripened on the nutritious grasses of the prairie. I am firmly convinced that this country offers better facilities for a poor man than any I have ever seen."

Information concerning these lands can be had from any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this paper.

OYSTERS IN WEST INDIES.

Visitors Find Some Half Out of Their Shells.

"In the West Indies," says a man who has traveled much in out-of-the-way places, "the fish is the most delicious in the world. It has a flavor infinitely superior to that caught in northern waters, or, at least, to the fish which finds its way to city tables. But there is lacking one good gift, and sometimes the stranger thinks that the deficiency counterbalances all the advantages. There are no oysters to be had, except as they come to some large towns in the New York steamer. My business took me far away from civilization on one of my journeys to the islands, and I was thoroughly sick of fish and canned food, when one of the negroes remarked that there was a lot of oysters in a creek not far away. I went after them with all haste, picturing the treat in store for me. The negro explained that as an experiment the government had stocked the creek with oysters several years before—he could not say how many, but I gathered it must have been at least twenty. We got to the creek and found any quantity of oysters. But they were of a sort never dreamed of at after-theater supper places in New York. One could recognize the fact that they were oysters, or had been, but they had acquired a peculiar and unpleasant flavor, while their outward appearance was curiously changed. The shells had grown flat and the oysters were nearly squeezed out. They were plentiful enough and seemed to multiply, so that they are not likely to cease changing, and I have often wondered if, in the course of a few more years, the oyster would not be squeezed entirely out of the shell, affording a parallel to the American cherry, which had squeezed out the stone so that it is now on the outside. An oyster with the shell on its back would be a sight to open the eyes of a Waldorf chef; but if the thing has happened in the case of a cherry why not in the case of the oyster also? And I am certain that I saw the beginning of the process."—New York Tribune.

Mexican Dollars in the East.

The Mexican Herald does not believe that the Mexican dollar can be driven out of the East. "The big business houses of the far East," says, "and the Chinese compradores, always accustomed to the Mexican dollar, give it the preference. Few other coins have been better received in any part of the world. And anyone who knows the intense conservatism of the Chinese may well doubt if, even in the Philippines (where there are not a few Chinese traders), a new dollar can wholly drive out the time-honored Mexican coin. On the mainland the Mexican dollar is a standard of value, and the Chinese are marvelously well acquainted with every feature of it, and can detect a counterfeit in the dark!"

DO YOU FEEL LIKE THIS?

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. JOHN WILLIAMS.

No other medicine has such a record for absolute cures, and no other medicine is "just as good." Women who want a cure should insist upon getting Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when they ask for it at a store. Anyway, write a letter to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all your troubles. Her advice is free.

Considerable has been said at various times about booms, and boomers, and boomerangs but Klemme has the genuine article. The boom laid out for Klemme this year does not stop at the work of building a new school house. Several new buildings in the way of private dwelling are now under construction, and there are more to follow. The question of a new opera house has been agitated not a little and ere the snow flies again we expect to see a large brick block with ample capacity to furnish the town with an excellant opera house adorn main street. The Chicago Great Western coming through here will bring to town a great many new people to reside permanently and things will flurish without conjecture. Hurrah for Klemme, the Great Western and the city council.

As a rule one person does not care how much noise another makes, but when it comes to creating a disturbance and making a lot of unnecessary noise by giggling, laughing, shuffling of feet and talking at a public entertainment, where people go and pay their money expecting to hear and see something it is quite another thing. it seems that some of the present day young folks don't know that there is a difference between stillness and steam whistle blasts if they do, they never show it. Anyone who will go to a public entertainment and keep others from enjoying themselves had ought to be ostricised, he don't show appreciation for a good thing when he sees it, and what in the name of common sense does he want there. Noise is alright on a ball ground or race track but it wont do at a public entertainment.

The attached clipping from the Garner Signal will serve handsomely to carry out our argument:

"In an eminently dignified way the "worthy doctor" in last week's issue of his democrat reads his young friend Ell of the Klemme Times a lecture on the serious wickedness of harboring envious feelings. We can in our mind's eye see the worthy doctor nibbling the point of his editorial pencil and casting his eyes skyward through his spectacles in the effort to find proper words to express his displeasure. "Whar de hen scratches" is when he says he has not the least objection to "Bro. Ell's" newspaper style and that all his—the "worthy doctor's"—time is taken up managing his own very extensive business, and goes on to say that he will not say anything derogatory about "Bro. Ell's" way of managing HIS business, and then goes ahead and says it. The fact of the matter is in the "worthy doctor" has been for some time poaching upon Bro. Ell's rightful territory and is simply trying to excuse himself before the public by descrying the latter's method of running a model journal of civilization. Only this and nothing more."

We've taken our place and are ready to throw something at the first peason who lisps a word against the Klemme schools or their teachers, and all attending the school entertainment on last Thursday evening will attest to to what is said here and fall in line. With forty-seven numbers on the program it was sufficiently long to furnish three hours of entertainment, and good, sound, solid amusement at that, The teachers done themselves proud in getting up so lengthy an arrangement; the scholars with no exceptions. both old and young large and small, did their respective parts as perfectly as could possibly be expected; and the town, well it just done the teachers' souls good to have their long and extended labors greeted thus with a packed hall. The house was filled to overflowing the S. R. O. mark looming up long before the program began. The true and full meaning of the word 'good' will imply all that can be said and no mistake County Superintendent Schell was in attendance and pronounced it a genuine success, saying it was as fine as he has attend in the county, He gave a ten minutes talk on libraries which was right to the point and was very much appreciated. If there is anything that will do a school and it's scholars good it is an assortment of good literature in book form, otherwise known as library and our schools have made a good start in this the "time honored" right direction.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper and the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.

We call the attention of the Hustler readers to the candidacy of our townsman, W. L. Mitchell for the office of treasurer of Hancock county. Mr. Mitchell has been a business man in our community for a number of years, and has made friends of all patrons and acquaintances. He is a fine penman, an excellant scholar, and above all an excellant man. We predict he will receive practically the unanimous support from his home people.—Cor with Hustler.

Mr. Mitchell's card appears in this issue of the Times and our readers are requested to consider the above.

ELL CENTER NEWS

Miss Freda Frei visited the Braund girls Sunday.

Some of the hustling farmers have finished seeding.

Miss Tillie Cramer commenced her school in the Gilbert district last Monday.

J. W. Allen returned from Hampton Monday where he has been on business.

Miss Minnie Cramer has resumed her duties as teacher in the center school after a short but pleasant vacation.

The Bock boys have completed their seeding and it was done in a workmanlike order which speaks well for the boys.

Frank Gallery has his new addition to his house about completed which will be a great convenience to him and his family.

Artel Haskins found a bad place in the road last Wednesday and got his team mired down. The harness and tongue broke thus compelling him to return to town without his load of cream. However the next day he succeeded in getting to town after getting stuck several times He must have the patience of Job to haul cream this muddy weather.

In reference to the trade made two weeks ago by Gruetzmacher Bros. and S. J. Carlson, the Britt Tribune makes the following remark:

"This farm is the old B iley estate at Bailey's Grove where many years of our life were spent on the farm. We are glad to see to see it go into such hands as the Gruetzmachers and hope they will occupy it themselves. There is no better farm than the old Bailey farm and no nicer people or better farmer than the Gruetzmacher boys. They are builders up instead of tearers down." The old farm has been allowed to go to rack and ruin as fast as it could, barn and house unpainted granary broke down, and grove looks as though a cyclone had gone through it. This will all be changed with the Gruetzmacher boys at the helm. They will clean the grove up, paint and repair the buildings, and the old farm will again take on its look of former prosperity instead of the "Arkansas dilapidation" that has pervaded it. The steady rise of land has been the only salvation of the owner to counter act the deterioration and general "run down at the heel" looks of everything that goes to make a farmstead attractive."

We are informed since the advent of the above that the old homestead which bear the Bro's proud non de plum has positively not been pervaded by any such awe striking desolation, destitution and poverty. It is as much the opposite as it can possibly be, taking it for granted when the present occupant took possession the farm and so on was in the best of shape. Since the spring of 1900 Mr. Carlson has expended judiciously the sum of $2,000 in improvements. The house has received an addition, besides being remodeled, repaired and repainted, the granary will still hold timothy, blue grass seed and talcum powder.

Mr. Carlson purchased two carloads of post and has done away with the Bro's style of pasturing cattle with dogs, etc. and the grove, it has been pruned and twigged and cleaned up, and an elegant flowing well has been discovered and put into practical use; the earth will grow just as many oats as ever and the water in the river has more clearness, the pastures are now alive with budding, sprouting grass blades, the frog croaks as heartily as ever and the nice brown thrush has great delight in it's flight among the branches to warble 'I'm glad that Bailey is gone' and the gophers stand on their hind legs trilling the chorus 'I hope he'll never come back.

Drew the Line at Frying the Baby Eggs.

Elsa is the name of the new nursemaid who has been installed as custodian of a certain infant of my acquaintance. She is a flaxen-haired young person of dumpy figure, given to wearing hideous pink and blue ribbons about her throat and inclined to a view of life which is serious, to put it mildly. A day or so ago the baby's mother was obliged to be away from the house for several hours, and by invitation Elsa and her charge became guests of a neighbor who had agreed to keep a kindly eye on the two. When luncheon was served the neighbor was worried over a suitable meal for the baby and appealed to Elsa.

"Vat does he eat?" repeated the nursemaid, phlegmatically; "a little milk would be good, and a little bread, perhaps."

"Why not a soft-boiled egg?" urged the hospitable hostess; "bread and milk seem such slim fare even for a baby. Couldn't she have an egg, Elsa?"

Elsa considered the problem.

"Perhaps," she assented, at last, "a little egg with some salt. But," anxiously and with an air of imparting profound knowledge, "she must not eat the shell."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Powers of London's Mayor.

The city of London invests its chief magistrate with the most extraordinary powers and prerogatives. He is not only chief criminal and civil judge of the city, but likewise generalissimo of the city militia and admiral of the port of London. But before entering upon his 12 months' term of office, it compels him to sign a bond of $1,000,000 for the safekeeping of the jewels, forming part of his insignia of office.

A Curious Exception.

All metals expand when heated contract when cooling. If care is not taken to allow the air to escape from the mold this expansive force will burst the flask or blow the casting. This expansion by heat and contraction by cold applies to all liquids except water, which in freezing contracts until the mercury reaches 39½ degrees—which is seven degrees above freezing. Below 39½ degrees it slowly expands in proportion to the intensity of the cold. It is this expansion which causes pipes to burst, and it is almost irresistible.

BACTERIAL COMMERCE.

Injures Dignity of Medical Science According to an English Writer.

I may observe, says a writer in the Contemporary Review, the pursuit of bacterial antidotes seems to be stimulated by a circumstance which has had an unfortunate influence upon the dignity and fair fame of medical science. I mean the fact that when successful they possess a high commercial value, which redounds to the advantage of those who discover and prepare them. Every important bacteriological institute has become not merely a temple of knowledge, but a manufactory of drugs for sale, and under the cover of an honorable rivalry in the advancement of science an unedifying scramble for possession of the market is going on. Let me give an illustration: When plague made its appearance in Oporto last autumn, bacteriologists hastened to the spot from various continental laboratories, no doubt to study the disease at first hand, but also for something else. They came from Rrance, Germany, Italy, Spain, Russia and Norway. I was there myself, and witnessed the game in the character of an amused spectator. Most of them had some serum or other in their portmanteaus or up their sleeves. They were, in fact, commercial travelers thinly disguised, and naturally the most pushing agent did most business. This gentleman, who represented a very famous institution, did his errand in a masterly style, and displayed a command of all the resources of modern advertisement that defied competition. It rained paragraphs and interviews in the local press; ladies' sympathetic visits to the hospital; presents of money to the sick; complimentary dinners; public ceremonies; free inoculation, etc.—all revolving round the person of the distinguished savant and trumpeting the fame of his infallible cure.

NIGHT LIFE IN NEW YORK.

Dogs Are Scarce But Cats Numerous on the Streets.

Recently from a small interior city, a newcomer to New York whose business requires him to be out at hours when most people are abed, being asked what feature of the night life of town struck him as most peculiar, answered, "the absence of dogs. Employed, as I was, on a morning paper, which did not go to press until about four o'clock in the morning, I found in the constant chorus of the barking dogs which assailed me on the way home in my little city a sort of companionship. Now I live well away from the center of the business district, but on my way home in the hours between darkness and dusk I never, or very rarely, hear a dog. Naturally, I miss what was to me, when at home, a welcome sound. But instead of dogs, I find the streets overrun with cats. There are anywhere from one to a half dozen at every street corner on the upper West side where I live, several blocks from the nearest 'L' station, and there is a never-ending concert by the tabbies. Cats we had in the country, of course, but the streets were not infested with them as are the streets of New York city. Dogs do not rush out and bark at one on his way home here, but I find myself dodging the cats that scamper about the sidewalks between the blocks to keep appointments at the street corners. Of course, the absence of dogs accounts for the presence of cats, for the latter keep in the background in the country, where the ever present watch dog is ready to pounce upon and drive them to the back yards. I think the superabundance of cats was the first novelty to attract my attention when I came to make New York my home."—N. Y. Times.

Some Interesting Figures.

New statistics regarding the greatness of Greater New York have just been made public. A student of municipal machinery says it is costing every man, woman and child $23.92 a year to keep things moving. The police department alone costs $3.61 per dozen, while the average debt per head is $73.21. On the other hand, the per capita valuation of every resident is $1,611.97.

A New Electric Bell

A new electric automobile bell has been devised. The magnet incloses a coil, and the hammer is a steel rod, which has a reciprocating motion through the axis of the magnet. The latter is inclined at a slight angle, which causes one end of the rod to strike one peal, the other end on its return striking the opposite bell. As they are differently tuned, the tone produced is harmonious.

...ES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 15, 1901.

"A wonderful improvement has been made in the condition of the county asylums where the insane are kept in the past year," said Judge Robinson, of the board of control. "Under the recent order of the board, the inspection of the county asylums has been begun by the physicians from the state hospitals. The board has received no formal report so far. In fact, the physicians making the inspection have until July 1 to complete their report. But we learn the county hospitals thus far visited are making an earnest effort to comply with the board's rules and inspectors have found little to criticise."

Since the board of control issued the rules for the government of county hospitals, patients have been transferred from the institutions in Davis, Monroe, Warren and Madison counties, and the institutions closed so far as the keeping of insane is concerned. The patients from Davis and Monroe counties have been sent to Mt. Pleasant. Those from Warren and Madison counties have been sent to Clarinda.

On the other hand, the board is transferring patients to the Dallas county asylum from Clarinda and to the Fayette and Linn county asylums from Independence. Steps have also been taken to transfer patients to Hanceck and Winneshiek asylums from the institution at Independence. The latter hospital is the only one of the state hospitals that is now in an overcrowded condition. It has 100 more patients than it should have. Not all of the overplus can be distributed to the county hospitals that have applied, and Independence will still be crowded when the board of control gets through sending state patients to the county hospitals already mentioned.

A rate of three dollars for the round trip from Des Moines to Council Bluffs on account of the return of Conger has been granted the C., R. I. & P. railroad and it is expected that in addition to the reception committee appointed to meet the Chinese minister that there will be a large number of friends who reside in Des Moines that will also accompany the party. The G. A. R. post will be uniformed and will carry side arms and banners. A brass band will also accompany the excursion. The other committees are making arrangements to give Conger a hearty welcome.

A decrease of 150 in the number of convicts in the state penitentiaries in the past two years has been noted by the state board of control. Since last March the number has fallen from 998 to 903. There was a decrease in March alone of twenty-one. The board of control has decided upon an alteration in the penitentiary districts. Hereafter the convicts sentenced to the penitentiaries from Cedar, Clinton, Iowa, Jackson, Johnson and Scott counties will be sent to Fort Madison instead of to Anamosa. Fort Madison has so run down that the contractors who employ prison labor are not able to get enough men to supply their shops.

Governor Shaw and the other Des Moines men interested in the ownership of 3,400 acres of rice farm lands ten miles from Beaumont, Texas, have received an offer of about $225,000 for the land. The offer was made through the foreman employed on the ground to look after the Des Moines capitalists' interests. It will not be accepted, probably. T. M. Walker, Isaac Lang and Hardy C. Harris are partners with Governor Shaw in the ownership of the Texas land. For some time Messrs. Walker, Lang and Harris, with Governor Shaw, have been considering the erection of an oil drilling plant of their own, and the beginning of the extensive prospecting on their land. A proposition has been submitted by one of the owners looking to the organization of a stock company for the purpose of making a thorough investigation into the oil bearing qualities of the land. Governor Shaw owns half of the 3,400 acres, Mr. Lang one-fourth, Mr. Walker three-sixteenths and Mr. Harris one-sixteenth.

The State university has been refused payment of three unpaid appropriations by Auditor Merriam. It is expected the outcome of the refusal will be an action of mandamus begun by the regents to compel payment of the amount asked. The requisitions which were sent in by Lovell Swisher, treasurer of the board of regents, and which the auditor refused to honor, called for three unpaid appropriations made by general assemblies before the new code went into effect. The question of law involved is whether the acts making the appropriations were repealed when the new code went into effect. The regents made requisition for $5,000 due the last quarter of 1897 in accordance with an act providing for the endowment and support of the university, passed in 1878; for $2,083.33, being a part of the annual appropriation for endowment and support made by the Twenty-and support made by an act of the Twenty-fifth general assembly; and for $1,041.67, a part of the annual appropriation for endowment and support made by the Twenty-sixth general assembly. The total amount asked for is $8,125. All these sums were due in the last quarter of 1897, according to the old acts in force prior to the new code. They could not be drawn before October 1, 1897, the time the new code went into effect, however, under the old acts. After the new code went into effect the old acts were superceded by section 2643 of the code, which provides for the endowment and support of the university. The regents were then shut out from claiming anything under the old appropriation measures. The view taken of the requisitions of the regents in the auditor's office, is that the board is seeking to extract double what is due from the state. The appropriations made in section 2643 of the code

State Architect Liebbe has commenced work on preliminary sketches for a new medical building to cost $100,000 for the State university to replace the building recently burned. It is expected that work on similar sketches for a main building for the Agricultural college, to cost $300,000, will be commenced shortly. The purpose is to have the plans ready to submit to the legislature next winter in order to get appropriations for their erection.

Plague Ravages in China.

Peking, April 12.—Robert M. McWade, United States consul at Canton, China, reports that 1,000 deaths from the plague have occurred there during the past six weeks, and that there are thirteen cases of smallpox on board the United States monitor Monterey. Only one death has resulted on the Monterey, and the other cases of smallpox are progressing favorably. The meetings of the foreign ministers in Peking have been postponed at the request of M de Giers on account of the Eastern holidays.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

EASTON MUST GO TO THE PEN.

Supreme Court Refuses Relief to the Decorah Banker.

Des Moines, April 13.—Unless some federal question can be made to intervene, James H. Easton, a wealthy banker of Decorah, must serve five years in the state penitentiary on a charge of fraudulent banking. The supreme court of Iowa has affirmed the decision of the Fayette county court, which sentenced Easton to the term stated.

Easton was president of the First National bank of Decorah and for several years had been a wealthy man of that city. August 21, 1896, he received a deposit of $100. Afterward, on November 10 of the same year, a receiver was appointed for the bank, and because of the $100 deposit he was indicted upon the charge of having received the deposit after the bank was known to be insolvent. He was convicted on the charge and appealed the case.

It was claimed in the appeal that the law relating to Easton's crime does not apply to national banks, which are organized under national laws, and that Easton's bank was not amenable to the state laws; and further that if held to be so the act was unconstitutional.

The supreme court has decided that the banking law under which Easton was convicted clearly applies to national banks. On the question as to whether the law is constitutional the supreme court follows the rulings as laid down by the United States supreme court. However, in the ruling filed today the statement is made that the United States supreme court has never squarely decided the point in question and until it has done so the supreme court of Iowa prefers to follow the customary rulings.

RURAL TEACHERS SCARCE.

Difficulty Found in Supplying the Schools of the State.

Des Moines, April 10.—Rural Iowa is suffering badly from a scarcity of school teachers. An investigation into the condition shows that in nearly every county in the state superintendents are spending a large part of their time these days trying to fill vacancies. Things have reached such a point they are appealing to each other for aid, not fully realizing the scarcity in general. Superintendent J. M. Brenton of Polk county received a letter from Miss Libbie Dean, superintendent of Jasper county schools, asking if she could not secure three teachers immediately from the waiting list of this county. Mr. Brenton has but four names on a supply list that formerly contained about 200, and doubts very much if he will be able to fill the orders, as there are two or three vacancies in the northern part of Polk county he is unable to fill. He has inquired of other superintendents in various parts of Iowa and finds all are having trouble to secure enough teachers.

State Superintendent R. C. Barrett has also noticed evidences of the scarcity. At the meeting of the Southwestern Teachers' association in Grinnell a few days ago he says all the county superintendents present, including about twenty from southern and eastern Iowa, complained of the scarcity of teachers. Educational people of the city attribute the condition to the fact that heretofore rural teachers have been very poorly paid and that as there has recently been opened work in other lines which is more remunerative they are gradually forsaking the profession.

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT OSKALOOSA.

John McKinsey and Ike Burrell Shot by Will Miller.

Oskaloosa, April 11.—John McKinsey, colored, was shot and severely wounded by Will Miller, also colored. McKinsey was hit twice, but neither wound will prove fatal. Another colored man named Ike Burrell was slightly wounded by a third shot, the ball just grazing the skin.

The trouble occurred in a resort for colored gamesters. McKinsey went into the rooms and found Ike Burrell and Will Miller in one of the rooms. He immediately opened up on Miller and after a few words had passed he indulged in abusive language and threatened to kill Miller. Miller asked him to repeat what he had said. McKinsey did so and the words were scarcely from his mouth when Miller pulled a revolver and began shooting at McKinsey as rapidly as the weapon could be worked.

The inmates of the rooms could not get out of the place fast enough and all but fell over each other in their efforts to get out of range of the gun. Several fell over chairs and tables, were stepped on by others and were worse hurt at the time than the man who was shot.

Miller escaped from the room, but was subsequently captured.

BOY'S HEROIC ACT.

Runs Onto a Bridge in Face of Approaching Train to Save a Child.

Waterloo, April 12.—The bridge of the Illinois Central belt line was the scene of an act of heroism on the part of an 8-year-old boy that saved the life of a little playmate. The two boys had been playing on the tracks and the younger of the two walked out on the bridge just as the west bound passenger train swung around the curve near by. It was too late to retreat or reach the other end of the bridge, and the older lad ran out, seized the boy and jumped to the ground twelve feet below, just as the engine struck the bridge. The boys were uninjured.

STORMS CASE AFFIRMED.

Must Serve a Life Sentence for the Rathbun Murder.

Des Moines, April 13.—The supreme court has filed an opinion affirming the decision of the district court of Louisa county in the A. D. Storms murder case. The defendant was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Fannit Rathbun and a daughter, January 23, 1898, at Burlington. He confessed to the crime to Chief of Police Griener, which confession was admitted as evidence and resulted in a conviction. The appeal of the case was on the grounds that the confession was procured from Storms under duress by frightening him with threats. The supreme court holds that the confession was voluntary.

Awful Crime Unearthed.

Creston, April 12.—What is thought to be the disclosure of a terrible crime was made by the Creston police. The body of an infant was discovered buried in the debris of a coal shed on a deserted property on the south side. They are seeking evidence.

Fatal Quarrel by Gamblers.

Joseph Underwood, a Baptist colored preacher, now occupying the pulpit at Fraser, is now principal in the most interesting divorce case ever taken up in court. Ida G. Underwood of St. Paul has commenced proceedings against him charging him with having married three white women and two colored ones. He is charged with having married two white women in St. Paul, one in Adrian, Mich., and three in Fraser. Underwood stands high in colored church circles.

MRS. HOSSACK IS GUILTY

Jury Says She Is the Slayer of Her Aged Husband.

Indianola, April 12.—Mrs. Margaret Hossack must pay the penalty for the murder of her husband. The jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment and Judge Gamble will pronounce sentence in a few days. The court room was packed when it was reported the jury had reached a conclusion and was ready to make known the fate of Margaret Hossack. The latter sat calmly in her seat, the rigid expression which she had carried all through the trial changing to that of earnest expectation of either good or evil news. Slowly the twelve men filed to their seats in the jury box. The foreman delivered the verdict to the bailiff, who handed it to the clerk. The latter stood erect. A death-like silence pervaded the room.

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Mrs. Margaret Hossack, guilty as charged in the indictment," he read.

The silence continued several seconds, giving way to a low murmur plainly audible around the court room.

The aged prisoner sat looking helpless and in a sort of dazed condition at the clerk. Then, suddenly seeming to realize the meaning of the verdict, she sank back in her chair and for the first time during the long and trying ordeal gave completely away to her feelings.

She was surrounded by her friends, whose sobbing could be heard through the hall and into the open court yard, continuing until Sheriff Hodson led the prisoner back to the jail, awaiting final judgment. Senator Berry announced that he would move for a new trial.

RAID SALOONS WITH HATCHETS.

Women Enter Centerville Joints and Destroy Property.

Centerville, April 14.—Another successful raid was made Friday evening against the liquor joints in South Centerville. There were fifteen women with hatchets in this raid and they were assisted by some men. Four buildings were visited and wrecked, the furniture as well as considerable beer and whisky and empty Excitement was intense and there were several disturbances that threatened to develop into riots. The band of women also visited the residences of two liquor agents and strove hard to effect an entrance, but finally desisted, as the agents and their friends held the crowd back until the officers came and asked the women to go away, which they did, repairing to a restaurant, where it is said liquors are sold, and also to the drug stores located in that part of the city. At none of these places was any smashing done, however. Afterwards the women went to the public square a mile and a half north of the scene of the smashing, which occurred near the Keokuk & Western depot, went into Carl Week's Red Cross drug store, where one woman bought some cough drops, and then called on the mayor before going to their homes. Their mission uptown was a peaceful one. They urged Mayor Callen to punish the liquor sellers as far as lay in his power.

Davenport Business Man Suicides.

Davenport, April 11.—Tired of life, William Meier, a veteran grain broker and a prominent citizen of Davenport, hanged himself with a clothes line to the rafters of the wood shed in the rear of his Scott stret residence yesterday. He left home as usual yesterday morning, stating to his wife that he "was going away." Mrs. Meier placed no significance in the remark, as he had been acting rather queerly recently. When found he had been dead for about two hours. He was 59 years of age, and has been prominent in business circles of this city for more than a score of years. His wife and nine children survive him. The funeral will be held Thursday.

His lower limbs are paralyzed. The broken vertebrae are being held in place by straps and bandages. He was sliding to third base in the ninth inning and struck his head against the leg of Harry Jandl, who was guarding third base for Sioux City.

Heavy Liabilities of Stockholders.

Sioux City, April 13.—The dismissal by the Iowa supreme court of the appeal of the suit of the state against the defunct Fidelity Loan and Trust company of Sioux City means that the stockholders in the concern will be subject to a double liability. The capital stock was $500,000, and if the stockholders are responsible that sum can be collected by the law, and applied to creditors' claims. Stockholders are mostly eastern people.

Short in His Accounts.

Iowa City, April 14.—W. J. Hotz, exclerk of the district court of Johnson county, died at his home in this city Saturday. Mr. Hotz retired from the county clerk's office in January last and since that time expert accountants have brought to light the fact that in the last two years of his term $1,800 of the funds belonging to the county have disappeared and are not accounted for. Worry caused his death.

Whole Town Chases Burglars.

Clinton, April 14.—On entering the general store of Freund & Co., at Dowden, where he sleeps, H. Anderson, a clerk, found two burglars at work. He immediately drew his gun and commenced shooting. A fire alarm was turned in and the whole town was aroused and joined in the chase. The burglars escaped in the darkness with a large amount of watches and jewelry.

Dogs Mangle a Boy.

Hawarden, April 12.—A bull dog belonging to a neighbor pounced upon the 5-year-old son of G. W. McCormick and began chewing its arms and legs. Two grey hounds then pounced upon the helpless child and helped in the mangling. The mother of the child chanced to see the affair, but had considerable trouble beating the dogs away. The child was seriously injured.

TELLER FOUND $4,000 SHORT.

Des Moines, April 11.—Testimony in the coroner's inquest over the remains of Benjamin F. Grayson, paying teller of the Iowa Loan and Trust company, revealed the fact that he was short $4,000 in his accounts, and this is believed to have caused him to commit suicide by taking morphine.

He was found in his own barn by his wife and died a few hours afterward. Considerable mystery surrounds the case and the relatives have maintained that he was murdered. The investigation is still on.

The best way to teach a virtue is to live it.—Paul Lawrence Frothingham.

Rudeness, impetuosity, ill-temper and violence are traits of Andrew Proski, who drives a coal wagon in Wilkesbarre, Pa. He left a ton of coal at the house of Miss Mary Martel, in Rector street, and, while she was signing the delivery receipt, he admired her so much that he at once proposed marriage. She spurned at the offer, deeming it unwise to wed a man unless she had known him for at least an hour. Maddened by his repulse, Andrew amused himself my wrecking Miss Marvel's furniture.

An amateur magician in a Third avenue bar room in this city performed several tricks before the thirsty patrons. Then he determined to have some fun with an Irishman who had a bundle under his arm. It contained a thirty-nine-cent shirt he had just purchased. The magician declared that the shirt had money concealed in it. He opened the package, and, rolled in the cuff of the shirt, he pretended to find a five-dollar bill. The Irishman tossed the bill to the bartender, ordered drinks for the house, and received three dollars and sixty cents in change. With this in his pocket he left the saloon, the magician vainly pleading for his money.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

The Wife and Mother-in-Law of Mr. Charles Keys.

CLARISSA, Minn., April 15, (Special.)—No family in this vicinity is better known or more universally respected, than Mr. Charles Keys, the local School Teacher, and his estimable wife, and mother-in-law. For a long time, Mrs. Keys has been in ill health. Recently, however, she has found a cure for her ailments in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I cannot speak too highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills, or of what they have done for me," said Mrs. Keys.

"My life was miserable, my back always ached, also my head. I was troubled with Neuralgia in the head and face and suffered extreme pain but thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills, all those aches and pains have vanished like the morning dew, and it now seems that life is worth living. I consider Dodd's Kidney Pills a God-send to suffering humanity. They may rightly be named the Elixir of Youth.

"While speaking of my own case and the wonderful benefit I have received, I might also add, that my mother, who is now an old lady of 74 years and who lives with me, has been troubled more or less, with aches and pains, as is natural with one of her advanced age. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for me, she commenced to use them herself, and she says that they have done her more good than any other medicine she has ever tried.

"This testimony is given in the hope that others who may be afflicted as we were, may see and read it, and be benefited by it."

What Mrs. Keys states in her letter can be verified by reference to any other many friends in this neighborhood. Dodd's Kidney Pills have already a wonderful reputation in Todd County.

Nothing has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy but Dodd's Kidney Pills.

NEWS IN GENERAL

RECOVERS HIS KINGDOM.

Ibu Rashid Is Once More Master of Central Arabia.

Bombay, April 13.—Ibu Rashid has recovered the kingdom of Nejd, central Arabia, after defeating Mabaronk, sheik of Koweyt, who recently seized the city of Nejd and deposed Ibu Rashid after a pitched battle. The army of Marabonk was lured into a narrow gorge where the hordes of Ibu Rashid swooped down from the mountains and overwhelmed their enemies. The fugitives who have reached the gulf ports declare that 5,000 men were killed. The fate of Maoaronk is not known.

It was announced in a dispatch from Bombay, March 8, to the Associated Press, that Marabonk, the sheik of Koweyt, was then master of central Arabia, according to dispatches received by the Times of India, Mabaronk having followed up his previous victory over the army of Ibu Rashid by driving the defeated troops clear across central Arabia, seizing the city Nejd and deposing Ibu Rashid. The latter appealed to the sultan of Turkey to send troops from Bussorah, a frontier city of Asiatic Turkey, to his assistance, threatening to stop the overland pilgrimages to Mecca if he was not helped by Turkey.

NOT A SLAP AT AMERICA.

England Says Retaliation for the Mule Deal Was Not Thought Of.

London, April 13.—The director of contracts, a major, said to a representative of the Associated Press, regarding the determination of Great Britain to use only home grown beef:

"The new rule applies only to refrigerator beef hitherto bought in the open market in London. It will not seriously affect the American trade, as the total weekly supply for the army is only 200,000 pounds, which is barely 2 per cent of the weekly imports of refrigerated beef into England from the United States. Mr. Roderick's action was taken long before the New Orleans proceedings. It is quite absurd to suppose that any idea of retaliation prompted the order, which was due to a natural desire to help some of the home industries. You must not suppose that we now use no home grown beef. Aldershot and some of our other camps are almost entirely supplied with home grown beef. We have no prejudice against American firms and we do not believe they will miss this trade to any extent, even if it is decided to continue the experiment."

HAY REVERSES METHODS

Preparing a Treaty With England on the Canal Question

New Orleans, April 15.—Judge Parlange in the United States circuit court has handed down a decision dismissing the suit brought by the Boer representatives here to prevent the shipment of mules and horses out of New Orleans to the British army in South Africa. The decision is a lengthy one.

Judge Parlange holds that the transactions between citizens of the United States and the British government were conducted under the order of private citizenship and that the courts had absolutely no jurisdiction to interfere. The horses and mules, the court said, were bought in a neutral territory. Judge Parlange continues:

"If the complainants could be heard to assert here rights personal to themselves in the treaty invaded and if the mules and horses involved in this cause are munitions of war, all of which is disputed by the defendants, it would become necessary to determine whether the United States intended by the declaration of the treaty (of Washington, May 8, 1871), to subvert the well established principle of international law that the private citizens of a neutral nation can lawfully sell supplies to belligerents.

"It is almost impossible to suppose a priori, that the United States would have done so and would have thus provided for the most serious and extensive derangement of and injury to the commerce of our citizens, whether two or more foreign nations should go to war; and it would seem that there was nothing in the treaty, especially when its history and purposes are considered, which would warrant the belief that the United States insisted upon inserting therein a new principle of international law from which the greatest damage might result to the commerce of this country and which the government of this country has heretofore strenuously and invariably followed. The principle that neutral citizens may lawfully sell to belligerents has long since been settled in this country by the highest judicial authority."

LOOMIS IN PORTO RICO.

Sees No Reason Why a Squadron Should Be Sent to Venezuela.

San Juan, P. R., April 12.—The United States auxiliary cruiser Scorpion arrived here from La Guayra, Venezuela, having on board Francis B. Loomis, the United States minister to Venezuela. Minister Loomis will sail for New York today on board the Red Line steamer Caracas. He was non-committal as to the exact situation, saying he was not recalled, but was simply on leave of absence.

Continuing, Mr. Loomis said there was no probability of the United States severing diplomatic relations with Venezuela.

Mr. Loomis will not report at Washington from here by cable. He left Mr. William R. Russell, the secretary of legation, in charge at Caracas.

Answering a question on the subject, Mr. Loomis said he saw no necessity for sending the United States squadron to Venezuelan waters, though he admitted that it was possible this might be done. Venezuela is now quiet and there is no immediate apprehension of a revolution. The minister said he believed President Castro is capable of handling the situation. He made no direct statement regarding the possibility of trouble between the United States and Venezuela, remarking that he could not talk on the subject before reaching Washington, but so far as he knew the entire misunderstanding was due to the asphalt controversy and that in his opinion months will elapse before it is settled in the courts. He refused to deny that a certain anti-American ring would be glad to see him recalled. Mr. Loomis thought there was nothing serious in the situation.

Arbitration Court Organized.

The Hague, April 15.—Dr. W. H. De Beaufort, president of the administrative council of the permanent court of arbitration, has notified all the powers concerned that the court is now constituted. This notification is intended to take the place of a formal installation. The convention has not yet been signed by China, Luxemburg, Mexico or Turkey.

Wreckage Washed Ashore.

London, April 15.—Special dispatches from Brest report that quantities of wreckage have been washed ashore at Ushant, together with barrels of petroleum, cases of candles and a life buoy marked "Cyclope-Rouen." The indications are that the wreckage belonged to a steamer and a sailor. The maritime registers available do not contain a record of a vessel named "Cyclope" hailing from Rouen or any other port. It is possible that the "Cyclope" is a small vessel belonging to Rouen and not of sufficient importance to be on the registers.

IOWA MEN ARE APPOINTED.

Five Get Commissions in Signal Corps of the Regular Army.

Washington, April 15.—The following appointments, among others, have been made in the signal corps, regular army, subject to physical examination:

To be captains—O. Fechet of Michigan; Charles McKay Saltzman of Des Moines, Iowa; Charles L. Wallace, Illinois; Charles B. Hepburn of Clarinda, Iowa.

To be first lieutenants—Frank E. Lyman, Jr., of Des Moines, Iowa; Charles S. Wallace, Illinois; Walter Clark; George S. Gibbs of Harlan, Iowa; Richard O. Rickard, Illinois; Mack K. Cunningham of Iowa.

The majority of the officers appointed are now serving in the volunteer signal corps abroad and every officer but three have had extended foreign service.

MULE SUIT KNOCKED OUT

Judge at New Orleans Decides Against the Boers.

Washington, April 14.—There is authority for the following statement of the status of the Panama negotiations:

After the adjournment of the senate and the lapse of the pending Hay-Pauncefote treaty, Secretary Hay decided to pursue the subject further. But to avoid the possibility of another failure for the same reasons as brought about the loss of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the secretary determined to reverse the usual method of procedure in framing treaties. He therefore concluded to first consult the ratifying power, the United States to ascertain if it was possible for the senators to agree upon the basis of a treaty, which should be at the same time acceptable to the executive branch of the government and to Great Britain. It was realized that unless two-thirds at least of the senate could be brought into agreement in advance upon the basis of the treaty it would be perfectly useless for the executive to embark in negotiations with Great Britain for the information of another convention.

Secretary Hay is devoting himself now to the ascertainment of the feelings and desires of the senators and consequently not having completed this work, has not begun negotiations with Great Britain for a new treaty. It is not an easy undertaking to test the senate in this fashion, not only because of the number of senators who must be sounded, but also of the indecision of some of the men who rank as leaders. It is not even possible to predict now, because the results obtained are so inconclusive that the state department will not be able to acquaint Lord Pauncefote with the basis upon which it is willing to negotiate for a treaty before the ambassador sails for London next June. It is even possible that Lord Pauncefote may feel it incumbent upon him to delay his departure for a time, or even to omit his leave altogether if by so doing he can better ascertain the senatorial conditions, for the ambassador is naturally desirous to assure himself of success before he again undertakes to frame a treaty which shall bear his name. It follows, negotiations not having been started, that nothing has passed between the governments of the United States and Great Britain respecting a quid pro quo to be demanded by Great Britain in consideration of the release of the United States from the restrictions imposed by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

BRADLEY'S STARTLING STORY.

Declares Taylor Told Him Goebel Would Not Live Twenty-four Hours.

Frankfort, Ky., April 11.—Ex-Governor W. O. Bradley, who was chief counsel for Ex-Governor W. S. Taylor in the gubernatorial contest, before the legislature last year, gave sensational testimony in the trial of Captain Garnett Ripley, who is charged with conspiracy with others, to bring about the murder of William Goebel. Mr. Bradley detailed a conversation which he said he had with Captain Ripley, while the latter was in charge of his military company during the occupancy of the state capitol by the Taylor troops last spring, in which Ripley told him of frequent conferences with Governor Taylor prior to the assassination. The witness said that Ripley told him he was in the executive office the day before the shooting, and complained to Taylor because he had not called out his (Ripley's) company, and told him when he did he would have the company ready. Taylor replied: "My God, haven't you brought them yet? Goebel will not live twenty-four hours," or "cannot live twenty-four hours, I have forgotten which," declared the witness.

Judge W. H. Yost, assistant counsel with Bradley in the contest here, according to the witness, was present, and heard the conversation. In response to a question as to whether he (witness) heard of any conspiracy to kill Mr. Goebel, the witness stated that on January 5, the day the train load of mountaineers arrived, some one, he could not now recall who, told him that parties in the crowd were waiting in front of the state house to kill Goebel.

The defense asked witness if he knew anything of any connection to Ripley with these occurrences. Governor Bradley said he had not, so far as he knew. He said that Ripley's company was disbanded about that time.

JAPANESE GOVERNMENT SATISFIED.

Russia's Latest Utterance Accepted Just as United States Accepted It.

Washington, April 11.—The Japanese minister, Mr. Takahira, has received official advices from the foreign office at Tokyo, entirely dispelling the alarming reports as to a Russio-Japanese rupture, and showing that the Japanese government accepted the latest declaration of Russia on Manchuria with the same sense of satisfaction that it had been received in the United States. Mr. Takahira called at the state department and informed Secretary Hay of the gratifying turn of events.

The position of Japan, as now defined in the highest official quarters, is practically the same as that of the United States.

"Africa for the Africans."

London, April 13.—"A serious seditious movement," says the Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, "is spreading among the natives. It is headed by native ministers, who preach the doctrine of 'Africa for Africans,' and incite the natives to throw off European control. The authorities are carefully watching the propaganda, but are reluctant to interfere through fear of making martyrs of the ringleaders."

Will Send No More Men.

London, April 13.—The Daily Express this morning says it understands that the government has decided to cease sending reinforcements to South Africa.

For Another Polar Expedition.

London, April 15.—Walter Wellman sailed for New York from Southampton on board the American line steamer St. Louis, after a visit to Norway, where he inspected the steamer Magdalena, now being refitted at the yards where Dr. Nansen's Fram was built. Mr. Wellman said the Magdelena will sail for the Arctic regions this year or next. "but," he said, "I do not know whether I shall command her or not." Mr. Wellman says there is no truth in the report that Dr. Nansen and the Duke of Abruzzi are going on an expedition together.

CATTLE INDUSTRY IS HIT

British Army to Be Fed Home-Grown Beef.

Washington, April 12.—The department of agriculture has received a dispatch from a prominent packing company of Chicago, announcing that they have just been advised that the English government has excluded all beef except home bred from the British army contracts. This, it is stated, is to be effective June 1 next.

The Chicago concern has asked the agricultural department for any assistance it can render. It is pointed out that the action of the British government is a severe blow to American beef and cattle exporters and producers, and means not alone the loss in government trade, but it is feared it will serve very materially toward inciting a prejudice on the part of Great Britain against the beef and cattle of this country.

No official confirmation of this reported contemplated move has reached the department, according to statements of officials. Steps have been taken, however, looking to acquiring whatever information it is possible to get.

To demonstrate the importance of the move contemplated, it is pointed out that the value of our exports of live animals to Great Britain amounts to $40,000,000, while the total of animal products exported from the United States to Great Britain is stated to be, in round numbers, $200,000,000. It is pointed out here that this proposed embargo may really be a sequel, in greater or less degree, to the proceedings instituted at New Orleans against shipment of horses and mules from that port for use in the South African campaign. While this is, of course, merely conjectural, it is very strongly hinted that the New Orleans incident probably is the direct inspiration for the step. It is pointed out that if the British really decided to take the action reported in the advises just received, they might turn to Australia for their meats. It is claimed, however, that meats cannot be gotten there in as good quality nor as cheap as in the United States.

BUBONIC PLAGUE EPIDEMIC.

Seems to Be Thriving in All Parts of the World.

Washington, April 13.—Thousands of cases of bubonic plague in all parts of the world since November 1 last have been reported to the marine hospital service. At Rio Janeiro from February 1 to 20 there occurred five new cases and three deaths. At Hong Kong, China, three cases, all fatal, occurred during the week ended February 18. The plague is steadily increasing in Cape Colony, according to reports received both in London and Paris. The official report from Cape Colony for the week ended March 2 shows twenty-four new cases, two deaths and four suspects; for the following week, fifty cases, eighteen deaths and eleven suspects Several Europeans have been attacked and a number of natives have been found dead from the disease. The rats are reported to be "treking" from Cape Town in great numbers and at Simontown the rats are reported to be dying from plague. At Mauritius during the two weeks ended March 8 there were in the island eighteen fresh cases of plague and twenty-three deaths. On March 14 two fresh cases of plague are reported to have occurred in Perth, West Australia. The marine hospital surgeon in charge at London has reported that the rumor of the suspected plague at Southampton, published in the Paris papers, probably is unfounded, but extra precautions are being exercised at that port in view of the large number of troops returning from South Africa. The plague at Karakagua, Russia, is stated in the official report from Paris to be on the decrease, the same report saying that thirteen deaths from the cholera occurred at Singapore, Straits settlement, during the last week of January. A report published in a Berlin paper March 11 and forwarded here says the plague at Cape Town is now attacking the well-to-do people. Marine Hospital Surgeon Greene, at Berlin, has just reported that in the Kirgisen reservation, Karskakuk, Russia, thirteen persons have fallen victims to plague; and in the presidency of Bombay, British East India, during the week ended February 8 there occurred 1,770 plague cases and 1,293 deaths, an increase of 519 cases and 314 deaths over the previous week. In Bombay City that week there were 1,056 cases of plague, an increase of 309, and 1,359 deaths ascribed to plague. Up to March 2 fifty plague cases had occurred in Cape Town, of which twelve terminated fatally. In Argentina five plague patients were in the isolation hospital at San Nicholas on February 7 and plague was suspected in the cities of Belleville and Marios Juarez, of Cordoba province.

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send to any woman, and I would recommend it to any one suffering as I was. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The Compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble."
MRS. MABEL GOOKIN.
Box 160. Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhoea very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me." — MRS. J. W. J., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure these women — why not you — you cannot tell until you try it. If you are ill, and really want to get well, commence its use at once, and do not let any drug clerk persuade you that he has something of his own which is better, for that is absurd. Ask him to produce the evidence we do.

PAINFUL PERIODS.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do something in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell people I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it.

"My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured pen cannot describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for five months, and found myself getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

"My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness." — MRS. H. S. BALL, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

Hollow Ash... Hall

BY MARGARET BLOUNT.

CHAPTER I.—(Continued.)

"Queer as Dick's hat-band, no doubt. But I don't see how he could be offended if you let the house. There it is, lying idle—no good to him nor any one else. This gentleman has a fancy for seeing ghosts, and pays Mr. Vernon handsomely for it. What more can a man ask for?"

"I do not know," replied the agent, looking thoughtfully into the fire. "And there is no time to write—that is the worst of it. Mr. Vernon is in the Holy Land, and I don't know how long it would take a letter to reach him. Now, this gentleman wants to go in at once. In fact, I am to give him an answer tomorrow. I'm terribly perplexed about it."

"I don't see why. Say yes, of course, and thank your stars for the chance."

"But if Mr. Vernon should be angry?"

"I don't see how he could be. Even if he was, he would have time to get cool again before he met you. I should take the offer, most decidedly."

"Well, I think I will. But I was quite undecided when I came in here, I assure you. But you are a clever man, Grimes, and one can't go far wrong in taking your advice."

"Thank you, sir. And now that business is well off your mind, let's drink the health of the new-comers, and wish them a happy home at Hollow Ash Hall."

Both laughed as they drank the toast. Then the agent rose, buttoned his coat and turned to the door. The landlord saw him out; and after bidding him good night, stood looking out beyond the town, at the hill, where the lonely house was standing, dark, silent and grim.

"Hollow Ash Hall let!" he murmured as he went back to the bar once more. "Well, that is a go, and no mistake! I wonder how soon it will be empty?"

CHAPTER II.

So the thing was accomplished. The haunted house was let.

The next day all Banley knew the tale by heart. The banker's name was Cowley, and the young lady who wished to see the ghost was Miss Rose Cowley, a pretty, fair, little creature, who looked as if she would shriek and run away if a mouse crossed her path. Her elder sister, Catherine (Miss Cowley) was a tall, dark-haired girl, with a high color and flashing black eyes—by far the most proper person, one would say, to encounter a denizen of the other world. But she did not approve of the project, and shuddered at the very name of the Hall. Mrs. Cowley, fat, fair and forty, took the matter easily, though in her heart she considered it a tempting of Providence. But she said nothing. She was devotedly attached to her stout, good-tempered husband, and had he chosen to walk into the crater of Vesuvius, I think she would have given one sigh to old England, and followed meekly in his wake.

Mr. Cowley, having made himself master of the Hall, was not long in paying it a visit. He took his family with him, and though they went in broad daylight, their carriage was escorted to the very lodge gates by a select troop of rosy-cheeked children, who stared at Rose as if she had been the Dragon of Wantley in person.

Only to the gates, however, did this youthful bodyguard venture. When the driver got down and lifted the rusty bolt from its socket the first creak dispersed the rabble like magic. A dire vision of Queen Bess in ruff and farthingale, coming down the avenue to meet those who sought to enter, affrighted them; and with one accord they set off at full speed toward the village, never daring to look behind them, or to slacken their pace until they were safe once more at their own mothers' sides.

Rose Cowley watched this exodus with laughing eyes; but her mother and sister looked as if they would gladly have followed the example of the children, and taken to their heels as well.

"Mercy preserve us!" said Mrs. Cowley, looking up at the Hall. "Who would have believed it was such a dismal place? Why, yesterday from the road it seemed pleasant!"

"Dismal, mamma!" said Rose, "I think it is anthing but that! Romantic, solitary, lonely, if you will, but surely not dismal!"

"It is only fit for rats and owls to live in," said Catharine, with a look of intense disgust. "What could papa be thinking of when he took it without even paying a visit to the place? However, there is one comfort—he likes snug, warm rooms as well as any of us; and the first glance at the interior of the old shell will be sure to disenchant him. We shall never live here, mamma; so you need not distress yourself at all about it."

"Don't be too certain," remarked Rose. "I was talking with papa this morning about it, and I asked what was to be done if the place should turn out damp and cold. What do you think his answer was?"

"Why, that in such a case we couldn't stop, of course."

"Not a bit of it," replied the mischievous girl. "Papa said that he thought we were all apt to pamper ourselves too much and that it would do us good to miss a few luxuries and comforts for a time."

Mrs. Cowley groaned.

"I shall have rheumatic fever, I know. Mr. Cowley will never be mad enough to live here. The house is like a well."

"Don't fear, mamma," replied Catharine, with an air of composed certainty that was peculiarly provoking to Rose. "By the time papa has had to go without breakfast and dinner once or twice, because the chimney will not draw, he will be ready enough to go away. Men may be stoics and ascetics and philosophers in theory easily enough. But all their fine doctrines go to the wall, I observe, when their stomachs come in question."

As she spoke, they drew up before their new home, and even Rose was obliged to confess in her own heart that it might have been a pleasanter one, when she looked up at the fast-closed door, and the blank range of dusty windows. Mrs. Cowley groaned again. The place was even worse than she thought, and she was wicked enough to pray secretly for a fit of the gout, or a smart twinge of lumbago, which should lay her lord and master flat on his back, and thus enable her to take him to Brighton—to town, even—rather than to this modern "Castle of Udolpho," which shocked her almost more by its outward dirt and discomfort than by the ghostly tenants which it held within.

"Now, my dear, let me help you. Jump out, Rose, and see which of us will find the haunted chamber first," said Mr. Cowley, coming to the door of the fly, his round, red face beaming with delight at the evident trepidation of his wife and eldest daughter. "Jump out and see how you like your future home. You are as good as the lady of the manor now, Mrs. C. What do you think of that? Did you ever expect to attain to such dignity, even in your wildest dreams of the future?"

"I certainly never expected to come to such a place as this," said Mrs. Cowley, piteously, as she left the fly.

"Queer old den, isn't it, my love?"

"Very queer!"

"But I dare say you will like it in time. It is a fine airy place, I can see. Catharine, you will have cheeks like cabbage-roses in no time."

"Papa, you cannot think of living here!" said that young lady in dismay.

"Can't I, my dear? But I do, and for this very reason—the world is getting far too romantic and fanciful to suit me. What with spiritualists and table-turning, and men who float in the air, and men who see things in a crystal, and haunted houses, and seers who make almanacs and all the rest of it, England seems to be going stark mad. I used to give my countrymen a little credit for common sense, but I can scarcely recognize them now, and I hold that any one who makes a firm stand against this new-fangled nonsense is a public benefactor. I mean to do it, and to make you do it too. For this reason I take this house, which the silly idiots about here say is haunted. Not one among them dare come near the place. I'll show them that I'm not afraid to live here. And then, perhaps, they will come to their senses again, and learn that people in the other world are glad enough to get quit of this. Ghosts, indeed, I have no patience with such nonsense!"

"But, papa, if they come?" suggested Rose, with a timid glance at the close shut house.

"If they do, I'll pinch their noses with the tongs!" said Mr. Cowley, solemnly, and Rose burst out laughing.

"But, papa," said Catharine, "the house is so damp!"

"Damp? Nonsense! It is as dry as a bone. Don't you see that it stands on the top of a hill? How could the water get up here, I should like to know?"

"I am sure it does, and you will have lumbago and mamma rheumatism and Rose a sore throat and I a perpetual influenza. Dear papa, do give up this scheme and take us to Brighton instead!"

"Oh, yes, I think I see myself doing it!" was the grim reply. "Take you to Brighton to wear a pork-pie hat on the sands, and show your ankles on the pier! No Brighton for you at present, miss. You will stay here and do your fellow-countrymen a service, if you please, by disabusing their minds of a stupid prejudice, by means of your own experience. Driver, have you got the key to this door?"

"Here it is, sir," said the man. But he fell to the rear after presenting it. He was a lad of nineteen and had heard too much of the place not to keep at a respectful distance during the first moment of investigation.

"This lock has not been oiled since the year 1!" said Mr. Cowley, puffing and blowing as he tried to turn the key. "Hang the thing, how it sticks! Bear a hand here, my good fellow, will you? Hallo!"

The key turned suddenly as he spoke, the lock yielded, and the door flew open with such violence that Mr. Cowley landed on his nose in the hall. Seeing this, his wife forgot her fears and ran to pick him up. Rose and Catharine followed, and so at last they stood together beyond the threshold of the haunted house. While Mrs. Cowley and Catherine were helping the head of the family to his feet, Rose gazed around her with breathless awe, half expecting each moment to see some dim shade approaching to wave them away. But no one came. All was still and quiet. They stood within a small, square hall, very dusty and dirty and lighted only by the fanlight over the door. A worn mat covered the floor, there was a small iron stove in the center of the hall, and, leaning against it a curiously carved walking stick, resembling the wand of a magician rather than the ordinary cane of a gentleman in the nineteenth century. Rose took this in her hand, but quickly laid it down. It did not seem "canny" to hold it, though why she could not say.

Mr. Cowley rubbed his head, felt his nose carefully all over, and pronounced himself quite sound.

"What made me fall, I cannot tell," he remarked. "It really seemed as if the door was jerked from my hand by some person inside. Do you know, my dear, I incline to the opinion that some evil-disposed person has harbored here at some time or another and taken advantage of the popular belief in ghosts to carry out all manner of iniquity in perfect safety. For aught we know, such a person may be within hearing now."

Mrs. Cowley gave a little shriek.

"Then we are all safe to be robbed and murdered! Dear George, do let us leave this place and get home as soon as possible!"

"Nonsense, my dear; don't interrupt me, if you please! Robbed and murdered, indeed! Is that likely while you have me to protect you? I merely made that remark as a warning in case such a person should be concealed here. I recommend that person not to come too near, whoever he may be; and I add, for his further information, that I shall sleep here with a revolver, loaded and capped, by my side, and if he begins any of his tricks upon travelers, I'll give him pepper, by Jove! Now, Mrs. C., come along and look at the rooms."

Trembling and disgusted, the good lady followed her truculent spouse, as he opened door after door within the mansion. The rooms were all dark and dingy, it is true, but they had high ceilings and plenty of windows with pleasant aspects. Soap and water, and afterwards pretty curtains and bright furniture, a piano, and a few pictures would make quite another place of it, as Mr. Cowley said.

CHAPTER III.

Nevertheless, as the party progressed from room to room, a silence fell over them all—a nameless weight seemed to real upon every heart. Mrs. Cowley looked really ill, Catharine was very pale, Rose ceased to laugh and jest, and even Mr. Cowley pursued his investigations in a nervous, fidgety way, as if he was ill at ease.

Did you ever visit an empty house, dear reader, by yourself? A lonely country cottage, for instance, with no evil tale hanging over it like a dark cloud—nothing to mar its beauty—nothing to take from its aspect of home and peaceful repose? Passing from room to room, with the bunch of keys dangling from your hand, did you not begin to feel that something unseen, but not unfelt, was bearing you company—something that opened the doors and looked out of the windows and pointed at the corners of the apartments as if to illustrate a story which you also felt, but did not hear? Did not that unseen companion become almost too real—almost visible at the last, and actually drive you from the place—not frightened—not nervous—oh, no!—only with pale lips and hurried steps and a hand that shook a little as it gave the keys back in the agent's office, and wrote down the direction to which the agent might apply.

All this, and more than this, did the party at the Hall experience. Something—nay, more than one something was beside them. No one spoke of the presence, yet all were conscious of it, though they tried to laugh it off, even in the recesses of their own minds.

HARNESSING THE SUN.

New Solar Motor Develops Most Remarkable Force.

Electricity, it is manifest, is not the only agent in nature the practical adaptation of which to the help of man is to distinguish the inventive progress of the twentieth century. From southern California we have reports of the remarkable success which has attended a new sun motor recently perfected, and now, it is claimed, in successful operation. The solar motor, as the new engine is called, is a large, umbrella-shaped machine, weighing nearly four tons. By means of a multitude of mirrors which line the inner surface of the inverted umbrella-like reflector, the heat of the sun is centered upon the boiler of the engine, and steam in that manner generated without the use of fuel. By ingenious mechanism the reflector is kept in position to receive the sun's rays as the luminary rises in the heavens and descends toward nightfall. The energy developed by one of the motors is sufficient to drive a ten-horse-power engine from an hour and a half after sunrise to within a half-hour of sunset, and this power raises 1,400 gallons of water per minute a height of twelve feet. The field in which the solar motor is expected to do its best work is in irrigation in regions where fuel is scarce and dear, and water only to be found some distance below the surface. In the arid regions of the far west and southwest, the sun shines with sufficient brilliancy to operate the solar motor 70 per cent of the time, and one of these ingenious machines is therefore capable of irrigating 300 acres of ground planted in orange trees, and from 200 to 500 acres of other growths.

BUNKER HILL MONUMENT.

A Public Dance Gave Material Aid in Completing It.

Few people are aware that it was a public dancer who gave material aid in completing the Bunker Hill monument. This aid came from the noted Fanny Elssler, who, as Dr. Holmes puts it, "danced the capstone onto Bunker Hill monument, as Orpheus moved the rocks by music." She danced at a great benefit performance, which realized enough to warrant the managers going on with the obelisk on Breed's Hill, which is the proper name for the historic battlefield of the Revolution, in Charlestown. The monument's corner stone was laid in 1825 by General Lafayette, and on this occasion and at the grand dedication, June 17, 1842, Daniel Webster made two of his greatest orations. The Elssler sisters were two famous dancers, born in Vienna in 1808 and 1811, respectively, of whom the younger, Fanny, became the most celebrated. From 1830 to 1851 the career of Mlle. Fanny was one continuous ovation. While at Paris she is said to have eclipsed even Taglioni by her wonderful dancing of "La Cachucha." After visiting London in 1838, she came to the United States, where her triumphant progress was marked by many advantageous offers of marriage, all of whom she declined. She retired to a villa near Hamburg, Germany, 1851, having amassed an enormous fortune, and died in 1884. Her sister contracted a morganatic marriage in 1851, with Prince Adalbert of Prussia, and was subsequently ennobled.

An Old Viking Ship Dug Up.

A few weeks ago an old viking ship was discovered at Tottenham marshes on the outskirts of London, during some excavations in connection with the new waterworks for the East London company. Recently another equally interesting discovery was made by the unearthing of a dug-out boat in a remarkable state of preservation. Canoes shaped out of a single tree of the same age have been frequently found in Ireland and the estuaries of England and Scotland, while some specimens were also discovered during the excavation of the Manchester ship canal. This dugout boat was found in its natural floating position, not far distant from the spot where the viking ship was unearthed, about eight feet below the surface. The relic will probably be forwarded to the British museum.

Easter in the New Century.

In the century just begun there will be 5,217 Sundays. In that which we have hardly yet learned to speak of as last Easter Sunday has occurred once on its earliest possible date—March 22, 1818—but this will not recur till the twenty-third century. The earliest Easter in the new century will be March 23, 1913. Easter Sunday will fall once on its latest day—April 25, in 1943. This also occurred once in May, but on three occasions in the past century it occurred in June, and in the new century this will happen four times.

How Niagara Is Receding.

The falls of Niagara eat back the cliff at the rate of about one foot a year. In this way a deep cleft has been cut right back from Queenstown for a distance of seven miles to the place where the falls now are. At this rate it has taken more than 35,000 years for the seven-mile channel to be made.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan A. Grosvenor.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna: "As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from the disease."

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy of endorsement I gladly accord it."

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council, No. 165, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2535 Polk St., N. E.:

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms, Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you valuable advice gratis.

Every day you clean the house you live in, to get rid of the dust and dirt. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up with all manner of filth, which should have been removed from day to day. Your body needs daily cleaning inside. If your bowels, your liver, your kidneys are full of putrid filth, and you don't clean them out, you'll be in bad odor with yourself and everybody else.

DON'T USE A HOSE to clean your body inside, but sweet, fragrant, mild but positive and forceful CASCARETS, that WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP, prepare all the filth collected in your body for removal, and drive it off softly, gently, but none the less surely, leaving your blood pure and nourishing, your stomach and bowels clean and lively, and your liver and kidneys healthy and active. Get a 50-cent box today, a whole month's treatment, and if not satisfied get your money back—but you'll see how the cleaning of your body is

To know what a difference there is in different makes of bicyles All bicycles are not good. We have found this very true in our wholesale buying and have taken great care to pick out the best make every time.

There are many important points to look after—the frame, the quality of material used, the handle bars, the seat, the pedals, the gearing, the general finish, Etc. Our belief in "the best that's made" guides us in our selection and we never accept a single bicycle that does not come up to the highest standard we can set.

We are anxious that you should get good BICYCLES.

We see by our exchanges that that a new fangled coffin screw box is all the rage among the disciples of the weed. Every time the box is opened and a coffin nail is taken out the box grinds out the tune "Nearer my God to Thee" reminding him that he is getting nearer and nearer to the stage of the faded rose and that awful receptacle of the dead. Cigarettes are all right for boys who have no respect for themselves, much less for others, but no American boy should condescend to screw his own coffin together and commit slow torturing suicide.

An Epochal Treatment by which Drunkards are being Cured daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Nokies Doses. No Weakening Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Man.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkeness is a disease and not a weakness. A body filled with poison and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicanting liquors requires antidotes capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by the wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithfull use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the most marvelous transformation of thousands of drunkards into sober industrious and upright men. WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but is a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the CURE administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in tea or coffee and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. Do Not Wait. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "Home Gold Cure" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 to $50. ELL CENTER NEWS.

Special Correspondent.

Ira Derr, of Garner, visited his mother-in-law, Mrs. Holmes, here last Sunday.

Mr. Schroeder set out a nice lot of shade trees on his place east of here last week.

Ray Burman has a new sheep shearing machine and will be prepared to do all kinds of shearing.

Mr. Groves, who lives on the Wm. Guth place, has rented 80 acres of section 20 and put it in small grain.

Ernest Braund has a new carriage capable of carrying two although Ernest says it was but for only the one.

The past week was an ideal one for crops and the farm work was pushed to the utmost and the crop outlook is as good as the average years.

W. N. Hall is doing a thriving business with his iron these days. He shipped a carload of iron last week and is now gathering another car in this and German township. Mr. Hall is a benefactor to the farmers by coming around and gathering up a lot of unsightly old rags, rubber, an iron and paying a good cash price for them.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightfull running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, its the best salve in the world, Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by J. L. Harr.

School Notes.

Elmer Dow is in school again, also May and Jennie Williams.

Mrs. Gibbs, our Intermediate teacher is still on the sick list. Annie Gibbs has assumed her duties until she returns to the school.

We wish to state, (as it was omitted last week) that we have $30.00 deposited in the bank to school's credit for a library fund.

A number of pupils who have had the mumps have returned to school.

We are glad to note that the work is proceeding nicely on the new school house.

The attendance and enrollment is somwhat better than it was a week or two ago.

Harry Gibbs and Johnnie Velau came back to school Monday after a visit with the mumps.

The A class from room I has been transfered to room II.

Mrs. Spooner, Mrs. C Suckow and Mrs. Chas. Gruetzmacher visited the primary room last week, and Mrs. Schoper visited Monday. Mrs. Zook visited us not very long ago. This is encouraging and we hope it will keep right on. It inspires both teacher and pupil to do better work.

The A class in Prof. Suckow's room is getting along finely with Natural Philosophy but would get along better if it had an apparatus with which to perform some experiments.

The classes in the upper room are coming ahead with their studies so that by may they will be through their years work.

FARM FURROWS,

From IOWA HOMESTEAD.

A poor soil well worked will ordinarily produce better crops than a good soil poorly worked. For most satisfactory results the soil should be good and should be well worked.

Breed is all right but it takes feed to show what there is in breed. Breed, and then feed.

I would rather be a farmer than czar of Russia. Uneasy lies his head.

It is better to do without things one can't pay for than it is to pay for things that one can do without

There always has been a tendency to plant corn as soon as the ground is ready. Perhaps there always will be this tendency. The ground is not alway made in as good tilth as it should be for corn. Simply plowing it and giving it a slight harrowing is not good preparation. Get it ready before planting and when the soil is warm enough plant.

If the potato seed is scabby it will pay to treat it before planting. Buyers do not like to buy scabby potatoes any more. People who consume them do not like them, the hired man will not eat them, the hired girl will not peel them. So the grower will have to keep his eyes peeled and treat for the scab.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burneet Mann, of Levanna, O., 'my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble, I was hardly ever free from dull aches or pain in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan, I felt tired, worn out about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate stomach, kidneys, and bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by J. L. Harr. Only 50c.

COURT NOTES.

District court opened for the April term Monday with Hon. Clifford P. Smith presiding judge and F. C. Bush reporter.

This term comes at a time when most of the jurors would prefer to do spring work. However there are few cases for trial and court will not likely be in session more than two weeks.

The grand jury were sworn yesterday to act for this term. The panel consists of C. P. Lewis, foreman, J. Manuel, W. H. Lambert, J. E. Hayslip, Dan Webner J. C Nelson and Chas. Howlet.

There is but one party held to answer before the grand jury from a hearing before justice Ramsey. This is in the case of State of Iowa vs Frank Urick on the charge of assault and battery.—Hancock Signal.

William A. White says: "It is such an easy matter to throw a harpoon into a human heart; not so easy to get it out. The big red damns that slip out of one's mouth are greased; the kind little dou'ts are covered with sand paper. Life is short at least. why waste time trying to think how mean your neighbor is; why not go to an eye doctor for your own motes and beams. If you think the man has wronged you, why don't you go to the man and give him a chance to right you. what's the use of carrying a big sizzling pot of wrath around under your shirt when a ten minutes talk will cool it. The wrath you carry only sews wrinkles in in your own face; it stews the milk of kindness in your own heart down to a sour curdle and makes your own wife and babies wish that daddy would let up on his everlastting perennial grouch Your wrath doesn't hurt your enemy. No man ever 'got even' with any one but himself. It's the canker in your own heart that makes life a hell for you. Perhaps the other fellow doesn't even know it. So what's the use—really and truly what's the use.

A woman who has experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, April 29, 1901.

Governor Shaw has received a proclamation from the governor of Texas containing regulations adopted by the live stock sanitary commission of that state, according to which cattle shipped from Iowa and several other states mentioned in the resolution will not be received in Texas for breeding or dairy purposes unless the cattle and the herd from which they originated have been examined and found free from tuberculosis. A permit or a bill of health must be presented from a veterinarian of the United States bureau of animal industry or a veterinarian under the live stock sanitary board of the state from which the cattle are shipped. The resolution will be of great interest in Iowa, as large shipments of cattle from this state have recently been made to Texas.

The deputy auditor of state has written a letter to the president of the state university stating that a hearing will be granted a committee from the board of regents in regard to the right of the university to the funds for which a requisition was refused by the auditor of state recently. The auditor has made a request for an opinion from Attorney General Mullen and this will largely determine the result of the hearing. The amount in controversy is about $8,000 and it represents the unexpended balance of funds upon which the university draws before the new code went into effect. The auditor holds that the appropriations made under the new code were in lieu of all others and that the treasurer of the regents has no right at this time to what was left of the old fund.

It was decided at a special meeting of the Commercial Exchange directors that Arthur Reynolds, D. B. Lyons, F. R. Conaway, Samuel Strauss and Pleas Mills will go before the state railroad to present the following resolution:

"Whereas, In the opinion of the directory board of the Commercial Exchange, it is detrimental to the business interests of the city of Des Moines to have the decision of the matter of the Vincent stock yards longer withheld; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the railway committee of the Commercial Exchange be instructed to respectfully request the honorable railroad commission of the state of Iowa to render a decision in the said case at the earliest possible moment."

The matter before the railroad commissioners is the demand of J. F. Vincent, owner of the Des Moines stock yards, that the Rock Island railroad be compelled to switch loaded stock cars, consigned to Des Moines from Iowa points, to the tracks of any other railroad that may be designated by the consignor. F. M. Hubbell said after the exchange directors' meeting: "The railroad commissioners, we believe, have held back their decision in this case too long already. The exchange proposes now to see if some sort of an answer can be got from the commissioners. It is true that Des Moines is anxious at this time to get a favor from the commissioners, in the way of an order for a viaduct to the army post, and pushing the Vincent claim at the board may prejudice the commissioners against the city. But what if they do get sore? They are the people's servants. If they won't be reasonable, we will elect some other men to their places. The Rock Island, refusing to switch to the tracks of the other roads, is hurting Des Moines. It is ridiculous for that company to refuse to deliver stock where the consignors want it delivered."

Ben Parker has won the third round in his legal fight with the Mountain Distilling company. Judge Holmes handed down an opinion on the amendment submitted him a few weeks ago holding in effect that Parker is the agent in fact for the company; that the whiskies in dispute were consigned him for the purpose of having him violate the prohibitory laws of the state; that the distilling company, an incorporation doing business under the laws of Illinois, is the real owner of the property and that, therefore, there can be no recovery. The Mountain Distilling company brought action against Parker some time ago asking that a receiver be appointed on the grounds that about $9,000 worth of wines and whiskies consigned to the Des Moines liquor dealer had been sold and no account rendered the home office. Parker resisted, attacking the validity of the contract on the grounds that while operating under the Martin law he was in fact violating the laws of the state, the mulct law being merely a bar to criminal prosecution. He held that a contract made for the purpose of having him violate the laws of the state was invalid and should be held for naught. Judge Holmes sustained the contention of Parker's attorneys, overruled a demurrer to the original petition and ordered an amendment. The amendment embodied the same points as those in the original petition and it was on these points that the court ruled. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

POWERS FROWN UPON VENEZUELA.

That Country Fast Becoming a Pariah Among Nations.

New York, April 25.—Three powers, says a Washington special to the Times, have already signified to Venezuela that they will not respect the decisions of her courts and that certain decrees issued by her executive are null and void. Two other powers are about to issue the same notice to her, if they have not already issued it, and others are expected. In short, Venezuela is fast assuming the place of pariah among the nations. The nations referred to as having already issued notice are the United States, Spain and Germany. Great Britain and Holland are the two nations which are about to issue it. The United States has gone further than the other powers, for in the case of the asphalt dispute she has served notice on Venezuela that she reserves the right to "review" the decisions of that country's courts. The matter which has aroused this action of the nations relates to the asphalt case and to old grievances. The most striking thing about it is that there is absolutely no concert of action; there has not been even a suggestion from one power to another, and yet the five powers named are taking this course spontaneously.

Studying Kansas Grass.

Atchison, Kan., April 5.—The agricultural department at Washington has started an interesting experiment on the Waldon ranch in Harper county with the special purpose in view of discovering what species of grass is best adapted to the soil and climate in western Kansas. Various grasses will be tried and already some encouraging results have been obtained. It is thought that a grass can be found that will have greater vitality than the present prairie grass. Cattlemen are very much interested and are watching the experiments closely.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

UNITE ON STATE ISSUES.

Democrats in Conference Decide to Make a Hard Fight.

Des Moines, April 27.—A vigorous fight for a more equitable method of assessing railroads will be inaugurated by the democratic party in this year's state campaign. A plank on railroad assessments will be inserted in the platform. If the consensus of opinion that developed at yesterday's conference of leading members of the party from all sections of the state is any index, the policy of the democracy in Iowa this year will be radical and outspoken. The railroad commission wil be marked for obliteration as a useless piece of state furniture, out of which the public gets no benefit. A tax on the franchises for public service utilities is advocated, and in general a state policy that will be so sharply defined and aggressive as to compel the attention of those that are dissatisfied with present conditions.

Although yesterday was the date of the meeting of the state central committee, the important developments of the day were in the conference that preceded it. The work of the committee was easily transacted. It was decided to hold the state convention at Des Moines, August 21, two weeks after the republican convention. The temporary officers will be as follows: Temporary chairman, E. M. Sharon of Davenport; temporary secretary, H. A. Nash of Perry; reading secretary, J. H. Gillespie of Burlington; assistant reading secretary, G. L. Caswell of Denison; sergeant-at-arms, S. B. Morrissey of Harlan.

In the conference the policy of the party in Iowa this year was virtually, though not formally, mapped out. Harmony apparently prevailed among the different elements that have heretofore gone to make up the fusion opposition to the republican party. There was no agitation of the silver issue. It was the general sentiment that the party should unite regardless of past factions. It was given out that the sentiment of the populists in many sections of the state was in favor of continuing with the democratic party and instead of maintaining a separate state and

CUMMINS GETS POLK.

Foster Gets One Supervisoral District, But Cummins Claims Solid Delegation.

Des Moines, April 29.—In the republican primaries Saturday Hon. A. B. Cummins, for governor, carried all but eight precincts in the county. In Des Moines he carried all but one precinct, that being the fourth precinct of the Fourth ward, Mr. Foster's home precinct. Mr. Foster carried Beaver, Clay, Franklin and Washington townships in the Fourth supervisoral district, giving him a majority of the votes of the delegates from that district. This, however, according to the claims of Cummins' managers, will not interfere with a solid Cummins delegation of sixty-four to the Cedar Rapids convention from Polk county.

In the Hull-Berryhill congressional convention in this county a precedent was established, which will undoubtedly be followed in the convention this week. In that convention Berryhill had a majority of the delegates from several of the supervisoral districts and wards, but the Hull forces, who controlled the convention, applied the unit rule by the adoption of a resolution authorizing Mr. Hull to name his own delegation to the congressional convention.

RETAIL GROCERS IN A COMBINE.

Dealers in Ida Grove Will Place Their Stock Under One Roof.

Ida Grove, April 28.—Following the general trend toward consolidation, the retail grocers of this place have decided to combine their interests instead of cutting prices and hustling for trade. The four dealers have consolidated under the name of the Iowa Mercantile company, with a large capital. They will move their respective stocks under one roof, thereby saving rent and other expenses, and each of the members will cater to the tastes of his former exclusive patrons. It is thought the combine will be able to make a considerable saving by buying goods in larger quantities and the expense of conducting separate institutions will be greatly reduced.

Wolves Killing Sheep.

Fort Dodge, April 29.—"Never," said King Rutledge of Willowedge farm, have wolves been so numerous and so bold for many years as this summer. They are doing a great amount of damage to both poultry and sheep. Their ravages of the chicken houses have been surprising and their attacks upon sheep astonishingly bold. During the winter they lived upon their raids upon hen houses, coming at times right up to the house to steal chickens. Almost any day, if a person will hang around the farm, he can see the wolves sneaking on the prairies or sitting on a bluff. Monday they killed two lambs; last week they killed three. They do not eat the flesh, but just tear open the throat and suck out the warm blood. We intend to set out a number of scarecrows in a day or two and I think these will keep the wolves away for a while at least. They will keep a good ways off from anything that looks like a man with a gun."

Dragged Under a Plow.

Fort Dodge, April 27.—J. W. Kienast, living on Prospect Hill, had been plowing half a mile east of the city and at 6 o'clock stopped work and started home. He had a team of spirited horses and as he was passing through a high wire gate he stepped in front of his horses. The horses became frightened at some peculiar noise made by the gate, and reared, throwing Mr. Kienast down and passing over his prostrate body, which was caught under the plow and dragged over fifty feet. Parties who saw the accident hastened to the spot and found Mr. Kienast insensible. Mr. Kirchoff brought the injured man to his home on Prospect Hill, where physicians are working over him and say he will ultimately recover, though terribly injured.

His Neck Broken.

Belle Plaine, April 27.—While Andrew Mehan was leaning on the iron coping of the Burley house, about sixteen feet from the sidewalk, the coping gave way and he fell to the brick pavement below, breaking his neck and crushing his skull, causing instantaneous death.

Big Bridge Nearing Completion.

Boone, April 27.—The girders of the last span of the new C. & N. W. bridge have been put in place. The false work will be removed in about three days and in less than a month the tracks will be cleared and ready for use.

Spinney Owes Loan Association.

Des Moines, April 24.—Referee Wilcoxen, appointed by the district court in the case of E. C. Spinney against the Iowa Deposit and Loan company, to investigate the question in controversy and report to the court the amount due to Mr. Spinney, if any, for his services as manager of the company, yesterday filed a sensational report. Instead of finding for Dr. Spinney he reports that the books of the company show that he overdrew the expense account $22,057.71.

The greatest event in a hen's life is made up of an egg and a cackle.

MAJOR CONGER ARRIVES

Has Not Changed His Position of Two Months Ago.

San Francisco, April 26.—Edwin H. Conger, United States minister to China, accompanied by his wife, daughter, Laura, and niece, Mary Pierce, arrived from China yesterday on the steamer Nippon Maru. tions and the necessity of giving Owing to quaarntine regula- personal supervision to the landing of his baggage, Mr. Conger did not reach his hotel until six o'clock in the evening. Mr. Conger's arrival here was awaited with considerable interest, not only on account of his connection with events in China, but from a political standpoint. There was a great desire to know what position Mr. Conger would assume with regard to the coming gubernatorial nomination in Iowa.

To a representative of the Associated Press, Mr. Conger, when asked if he cared to make any expression on the governorship matter, said:

"I do not wish to make any public declaration at this time. I have not yet had time to read the correspondence which has met me here. So far as I am at present advised, I see no reason to change my position as expressed about two months before I left China. I received two telegrams from the United States. One asked me if I were a candidate for governor. I answered: 'I am not.' The other telegram asked whether I would accept the nomination if tendered to me. I replied that I would accept if the nomination came to me, but that I was in no sense a candidate.

"I do not care to, nor will I say anything further in the matter until I reach Des Moines. I do not know what the situation in Iowa is, and do not care to say anything definite until I am fully advised. My present intention and desire is to return to China and finish my work."

Des Moines, April 26.—A Register correspondent at San Francisco quotes Major Conger on the gubernatorial nomination as follows: "I could not refuse it. The people of Iowa, my friends especially, have always given me all I asked and I cannot be insensible to the high honor and compliment contemplated in such a proposition. This is all I care to say at this time."

STOCK YARD YARDS.

Des Moines Yards Will Hereafter Be Controlled by the Agars.

Des Moines, April 25.—J. F. Vincent has leased his stock yards property to the Agar Packing company for a period of years at a stated cash rental. Possession is to be given at once, and the Agar company will immediately put men to work building a runway for stock from the yards to its packing plant.

Neither Mr. Vincent nor the Agars would give out the details of the transaction. Mr. Vincent said: "I still retain title to the property, but have severed my managerial relations. I have leased the property to the Agars, and until that lease expires will have nothing to do with the property but to collect the rents."

It is understood that the future policy of the Agars with reference to the conduct of the yards will depend entirely upon the decision of the railroad commissioners in the case brought by Mr. Vincent against the Rock Island to compel it to deliver stock consigned to the yard to the Des Moines Union road to be switched to the yard. If a favorable decision can be obtained in this case, it is more than probable that the Agars will conduct the yard as a competitive market for all grades of stock but hogs fattened for the packing market. They will reserve the right to control the market in so far as this class of stock is concerned, but will carry on a regular market in stock hogs and all kinds of cattle, from stockers and feeders up to the best fat steer stuff. They will also continue to operate a portion of the yard as a feeding in transit point for such shippers as may desire to use it.

IOWA MEN ARE PROMOTED.

Named as Lieutenants in the Regular Army Establishment.

Washington, April 25.—The secretary of war has made public the names of the 588 men selected for first and second lieutenants in the regular army under the army reorganization bill. All of these men have had service in either the state or national volunteers or in the regular army. They have been ordered for examination and should they pass will be appointed. Those named from Iowa are: Francis H. Lincoln, Fred Shiras, Edward A. Kreger, Joseph Matson, Frank S. Long, Guy G. B. Hanna, W. H. Point, William E. Parvin, Edward W. Clark, Wilson G. Heaton, Robert T. Crawford, George A. Densmore.

GREAT WESTERN TO OMAHA.

Plans Announced at Ft. Dodge by President Stickney.

Fort Dodge, April 26.—President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western, who arrived here with other officials yesterday, said: "We plan to build a line from Fort Dodge to Omaha and will begin work on construction immediately. A line to Sioux City will branch from the Omaha line and will run into Fort Dodge over the same track."

The statement made by President Stickney is considered positive information of the Great Western's plan. The Omaha line from Fort Dodge will leave this city on a new $300,000 steel bridge over the Des Moines river, 3,000 feet in length and 120 feet high

Sioux City Minister Dismissed.

Sioux City, April 28.—Rev. C. M. Wickham, pastor of the First Christian church, has been dismissed from his pastorate by the board of trustees on the alleged ground that he has been guilty of conduct unbecoming a minister of the gospel. The specific charges have not been made public. Only a week ago the trustees voted to retain him another year.

Looks Like Murder.

Ottumwa, April 29.—William Menee, a junk dealer, was found floating in the river with an ugly wound in his head. Indications point to a murder, but there is no clew. His wife recently left him.

Cummins Carries Story.

Nevada, April 29.—A. B. Cummins carried every precinct in Story county but one in the city of Nevada at the county primaries. The weather was clear and a normal vote was polled.

Fell to His Death.

Ottumwa, April 29.—William Parker, a railroad employe, fell from the Iowa Central bridge at Eddyville fifty feet, striking driftwood. He sustained fatal internal injuries.

THEY MEAN BUSINESS.

Believed Crusade Against Saloons at Dubuque Will Bear Fruit.

Dubuque, April 24.—As a result of Archbishop Keane's recent pronouncement against the saloons it is authoritatively stated that a large number of Dubuque saloonkeepers will close their saloons Sunday. The saloons here have never paid any attention to the mulct law farther than to pay the license regularly, which they did under prohibition. The matter of closing Sundays and nights has never troubled the average liquor dealer here.

NEWS IN GENERAL

SATISFIED WITH CONGER.

The State Department Has Expressed No Dissatisfaction.

San Francisco, April 29.—Minister Conger left Saturday for Des Moines. Mr. Conger will arrive at Omaha Wednesday morning, where he will be met by the Iowa reception committee and accompanied across the state of Iowa in daylight.

Regarding his leave of absence from China, Minister Conger said all the stories to the effect that suggestion of the leave emanated from the state department was pure fiction.

"I applied for leave on my own motion, with the expectation of returning to China and joining in the resumption of negotiations. No flag was held higher than ours in China, and the story that President McKinley and the secretary of state were disappointed is pure fiction. If you say anything on this topic publish the fact that the president and secretary of state sent the United States minister a telegram of congratulation. I was advised that reports might be published that friction existed between the state department and the legation, and was told by the secretary to pay no heed to such statements.

"I know," said Mr. Conger, "that stories are afloat stating that President McKinley is not wholly satisfied with my official conduct in China, and in order to relieve the situation of embarrassment to myself and the administration, the administration has hinted to federal officeholders that my election to the governorship of Iowa was desirable. Nothing could be further from the truth. The president would never countenance such action. We are friends and served together in congress. He knows me and knows that if I suspected that his confidence in my judgment was in the slightest degree impaired that I would instantly resign."

ANNOUNCEMENT BY BRYAN.

Says He Is Not a Candidate for a Third Nomination.

Lincoln, Neb., April 26.—In a statement given publicity last night W. J. Bryan says in effect he has no intention of seeking a third nomination for the presidency. Mr. Bryan's announcement is in answer to an article in an eastern paper speculating on his future plans as a political leader. Mr. Bryan said:

"I am not planning for another presidential nomiantion—if I were I would not be editing a paper; if I ever become a candidate again it will be because it seems necessary for the advancement of the priciples to which I adhere, and that does not now seem probable. I shall, however, take an interest in politics for several years yet, if I live, and can be relied upon to support those who as candidates advocate democratic principles and who can be trusted to enforce them if elected.

"I have no enemies to punish. No matter what a man may have said or done against the ticket in 1896 or in 1900, that man becomes my friend the moment he accepts democratic principles. Neither have I any disposition to reward political friends at the expense of our cause. No matter what a man may have said or done for the ticket in 1896 or in 1900, that man becomes an opponent the moment he turns against democratic principles. Political battles are fought, not in the past or in the future, but in the present. The heretofore cannot be recalled and the hereafter cannot be anticipated, but the now is all important."

THE CABINET IS HOPEFUL.

Believes the Cuban Commission Has Seen a Light.

Washington, April 27.—The cabinet meeting yesterday, the last one before the president's departure for the Pacific coast, was occupied almost exclusively with the discussion of the visit of the Cuban commission.

Secretary Root, who has been conducting the conferences with the commission, submitted rather exhaustively an account of the interviews he had had with them. While there are one or two points upon which some of the members of the commission are insistent, the general feeling of the cabinet, at reflected in their exchange of views, was that the result of the commission's visit could not be but extremely beneficial in removing erroneous impressions, which, it is said, are entertained in the constitutional convention regarding the purposes of the United States. Altogether it would not be too much to say that the cabinet generally are hopeful that the convention, after hearing the report of the commission, will be much more disposed to accept our terms than they have been heretofore. county organization.

EMPRESS RELINQUISHES POWERS.

Naming of National Board Is Regarded With Pleasure at Washington.

Washington, April 27.—The following cablegram has been received at the state department from Mr. Squire, the United States charge at Peking:

"The empress dowager has appointed a board of national administration to relieve her of her public functions. They embrace three members of the cabinet now with the empress at Sian Fu, and Prince Ching, Viceroy Li and Prince Kung, who are ow in Peking."

The news is regarded as of importance, indicating as it does the relinquishment by the empress dowager of the arbitrary powers she heretofore has exercised. It also is apparent that she has placed herself in a position to avoid direct responsibility to the foreigners for whatever may happen in the future, and the board will have to bear the brunt of any complaint. It is felt that the appointment of this board will make it much easier for the foreign ministers to transact business with the Chinese government.

Rosewater's Idea of Bryan.

New York, April 29.—Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, is quoted by the Times as saying last night:

"William J. Bryan, in my opinion, will be a candidate for governor of Nebraska next year. Mr. Bryan still exerts a wide influence in the state, and if he receives the gubernatorial nomination he will be a very hard man to beat. If elected governor he will hope to secure a democratic legislature, in which event he will seek an election to the United States senate to succeed Governor Dietrich, whose term will expire in 1905."

Says Tolstoi Must Depart.

London, April 25.—A special dispatch from Vienna says the czar has signed a decree expelling Count Tolstoi from Russia and that the decree has been served.

South African War.

London, April 24.—The annual return of recruiting for 1900 shows a total enlistment of 98,261, against 42,700 in 1899. The recruiting for the infantry is regarded as unsatisfactory. In spite of the impetus of the war and the reduction in the standard of height, the number of enlisted infantry is below that of 1899, the recruits generally having preferred the showier branches of the service.

JERKED BANDIT'S HEAD OFF.

Rope Broke in the Hanging of "Black Jack" Ketchum.

Clayton, N. M., April 27.—Thomas E. Ketchum, alias "Black Jack," the train robber, was hanged at 1:21 p. m. yesterday. The rope broke, but the fall jerked his head off.

Thomas Ketchum, alias "Black Jack," was the most noted desperado of the southwest. Although he boasted of having taken the lives of many fellow beings, yet he finally paid the forfeit with his own life for an attempted train robbery in which nobody was killed.

This crime was committed near Folsom, N. M., August 16, 1899. Singlehanded, "Black Jack" held up a Colorado & Southern passenger train. He ordered the engineer and fireman to uncouple the engine and leave the train. The conductor and mail agent opened fire on him, which he promptly returned. He received the contents of a double-barreled shotgun in his right arm, but quickly changing the rifle to his left shoulder he succeeded in wounding both the conductor and mail agent. He then escaped in the darkness, but was captured the next day. He was tried for assault upon a United States mail agent and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

Then in September, 1900, he was tried on the more serious charge of assault upon a railroad train with intent to commit a felony. He was also convicted on this charge and sentenced to be hanged in November last. The execution was stayed until March by an appeal to the territorial supreme court, which affirmed the finding of the lower court, and in March a reprieve was granted until April 26.

"Black Jack" was said to have been the leader of a band of outlaws who committed many train robberies and other raids in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. This band has been scattered since his arrest. Seven or eight have been killed, three are in jail and the others have been driven to the mountains.

KILLED ARE NUMEROUS

Two Hundred Killed and Injured in an Explosion in Germany.

Frankfort, Germany, April 26.—One of the most disastrous explosions on record occurred yesterday in the electro-chemical works, near Griesheim, where smokeless powder is manufactured. Most of the boilers exploded. The noise was so tremendous that it was heard at great distances, including Frankfort and Mayence.

The factory immediately became a mass of flames and a northeast wind carried the sparks to neighboring villages, where several houses were set on fire.

Eighteen cylinders, each containing about 100 weight of smokeless powder, were in the room where the explosion occurred.

Troops were immediately ordered to Griesheim to prevent the fire spreading to the large benzine reservoirs nearby. Fire brigades from every place in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, but owing to the dangerous nature of the disaster and the fear of a renewal of the explosions, the greatest difficulty was experienced in stopping the progress of the flames. Only after five hours of strenuous effort was the conflagration to some extent controlled and the danger passed, so as to make it possible to begin the work of extricating the bodies. It is expected that nearly 200 persons have been killed or injured.

FARM IMPLEMENT TRUST.

The Plow Trust Will Include All Other Farm Machinery.

New York, April 26.—The Journal of Commerce says:

"It is learned in this city that the report from Chicago that plow manufacturers have decided to form a $50,000,000 consolidation is only partly correct and that the present plans, instead of being merely for a consolidation of the plow industry, contemplate a consolidation which shall include every branch of the farm machinery trade, with the exception of mowers and reapers. The reported capital of $50,000,000 is said to be a minimum figure. The new company, if organized on the present lines, it is said, will be in a position to manufacture all kinds of farm implements from a hoe to a thresher, with the exception above noted of mowers and reapers.

"Among the largest concerns which are understood to favor the present plan are Deere & Co., Moline, Ill.; Parlin & Orendorff, Canton, Ill.; Rock Island Plow company, Rock Island, Ill.; Standard Harrow Co., Utica, N. Y.; Syracuse Plow Co., Cleveland, O.; Y.; Empire Plow Co., Cleveland, O.; Hench, Dromogld & Co., York, Pa.; Aultman & Taylor, Mansfield, O.; Stoddard Mfg. Co., Dayton, O.; Bissel Plow Co., South Bend, Ind.; Morrison Mfg. Co., Fort Madison, Iowa; Buffalo Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; O. S. Kelly Co., Springfield, O.; Kansas City Hay Press Co., Kansas City."

KING'S SLAYER GOES INSANE.

Bresci, Assassin of Humbert of Italy, Mentally Unbalanced.

Paris, April 25.—A dispatch to the Rappel from Rome says that Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert, has become mad in consequence of the ill treatment of his jailers.

Bresci, according to a report current following his conviction, was to be placed in an upright position in a coffin-shaped hole in a rock, with an opening only at the top, and was there to spend his time for life. The place of confinement was to be so small that he could not sit down nor rest himself in any way except by pressure of such parts of his body as could be touched against the damp sides of his prison.

His food was to be lowered to him twice a day and was to be of the plainest sort, barely sufficient in quantity to keep him alive that he might suffer further torture.

It was expected that he would go insane under this treatment, but a failure to unbalance his mind would result in his removal to a pit in which slimy reptiles would be allowed to crawl over him, the close confines of his cell preventing his resistance.

Famine Threatened in China.

New York, April 27.—The following cablegram was received by the Christian Herald today:

"Peking, April 25.—A very serious famine spreads over the whole province of Shan Si. Over 11,000,000 population affected. Urgent relief is necessary. Conditions warrant immediate appeal.

(Signed) "Li Hung Chang."

The Christian Herald has announced its purpose to raise a fund to relieve the sufferers in the famine stricken district.

Audacious Robbery.

Anaconda, Mont., April 27.—A most audacious robbery was committed here yesterday by two burglars, who secured $10,000 in gold. The burglars entered the Alaska saloon by forcing the main street door. Bodily picking up a 300 pound safe, they loaded it onto an express wagon. Driving outside the city limits, they broke the safe open and secured $10,000 in gold. Putting the broken safe back into the wagon, they started the horse toward the city and made good their escape. There is no clue.

Iceland, Europe.

This is the address given in an order for Dodd's Kidney Pills received and filled by the Dodd's Medicine Company of Buffalo, on April 16th. This unique direction means that to reach the sick people of Iceland, the parcel must travel to New York, then to London, Eng., then northwest to Greenland, to be landed finally, on the lonely island at the edge of the Arctic Circle. This is a pointed illustration of how United States goods find their way to the remotest corners of the earth. America today, produces better medicines, as well as better manufactured articles than any other country in the world, and this fact accounts for the demand for Dodd's Kidney Pills from every part of the known universe.

Career and Character of Abraham Lincoln.

An address by Joseph Choate, Ambassador to Great Britain, on the career and character of Abraham Lincoln—his early life—his early struggles with the world—his character as developed in the later years of his life and his administration, which placed his name so high on the world's roll of honor and fame, has been published by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and may be had by sending six (6) cents in postage to F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Self-denial is one of the most satisfactory pleasures.

"Dont Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—MRS. M. H. LEWIS, 2108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around, have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pain in back, bearing-down feeling, a desire to pass urine frequently, with pains in passing it; have leucorrhœa, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 3, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief. I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

Infinite is the help man can yield to man.—Carlyle.

A gentleman who was once being taken over an insane asylum, asked an attendant how they knew when an idiot was considered to be sufficiently restored to sanity to be discharged. "Oh," said the attendant, "it is easily managed. We take them into a yard where there are several troughs. We turn on the taps and then give the idiots buckets to bail out the water and empty the troughs. Many of them keeps bailing away while the taps keeps running, but them that isn't idiots stops the tap."

Commenting on the remarkable bravery of the Japanese soldiers, a New York war correspondent says: "When the allies lay under fire from the walls of Tien Tsin the Japanese held two rows of huts along the south canal. Between these two rows was an open space, commanded by the Chinese fire. A soldier was started with a verbal order across this zone. Within thirty yards he fell dead. Another soldier instantly dashed out with the message, and he fell likewise. Like clockwork a third soldier ran out, and there was a roar of cheers from the allies as the brave Japanese made the trip in safety."

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

Hillsdale, Ill., April 29th.—Much interest has been aroused here over the case of William Marks, who has been in a dying condition for several months with an apparently incurable Kidney Disease.

The leading physicians of this place had pronounced his case a hopeless one, and others from Port Byron, Geneseo, and Davenport, Ia., had attended him, and in a consultation decided that he could not live.

In desperation, his nephew inquired of Mr. L. F. Giles, a local druggist, as to a last resort. Mr. Giles suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which had just been introduced here.

The results were marvelous. Mr. Marks immediately began to improve, and within a few weeks was able to be up and about, completely cured.

His cure is the talk of the neighborhood, and is considered nothing short of a miracle.

There appears to be no doubt that this new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, will cure any case of Kidney Disease, for the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and Dropsy, yield readily to its remarkable influence. These forms of Chronic Kidney Disease have hitherto been considered incurable, and have baffled all medical skill, and yet, this new remedy has cured every single case in which it has been used, in this neighborhood. The doctors themselves are amazed at the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are accomplishing in Rock Island County.

When Bishop Potter the other day tried to open the door of a Fifth avenue stage in New York it was playfully held closed by the Rev. "Ah, Judson," exclaimed the bishop, when he saw what Judson was doing, "I have discovered that you are a close-communion Baptist."

John Fox, Jr., in his sketch of "The Southern Mountaineer" in Scribner's Magazine for April, relates that a traveling evangelist, Mr. Barnes, once stopped at a mountain tavern and told the story of the Crucifixion. When he was quite through, an old woman who had listened in absorbed silence asked: "Stranger, you say that that happened a long while ago?" "Yes," said Mr. Barnes, "almost two thousand years ago." "And they treated him that way when he'd come down for nothin' on earth but to save 'em?" "Yes." The old woman was crying, softly, and she put out her hand and laid it on his knee. "Well, stranger," she said, "let's hope that hit ain't so."

An old darkey went to Memphis the other day to get his pension check cashed. "Whut yer gwine ter do wid dem cabbages?" inquired the negro drayman who delivered them. "Eat 'em," was the quick response; "I'se bin free forty years, and dis is de first time I'se had de money to buy 'nuff cabbage. I'se gwine ter eat cabbage till I furgit de way ter my mouf."

upon the floor; and yet, so singular was the noise that I could not minutely determine from whence it proceeded. A few minutes afterwards we heard a noise, and as if some one was knocking with his knuckles among our feet; this was followed by a hollow cough from the very room from which the apparition proceeded. The only noise after this was as if a person were rustling against the wall in coming up stairs. At a quarter to one I told my friend that, feeling a little cold, I would like to go to bed, as we might hear the noise equally well there; he replied that he might not go to bed till daylight. I took up a note which I had accidentally dropped, and began to read it, after which I took out my watch to ascertain the time, and found that it wanted ten minutes to one. In taking my eyes from the watch they became riveted upon a closet door which I distinctly saw open, and saw also the figure of a female attired in greyish garments, with the head inclining downwards, and the one hand pressed upon the chest, as if in pain, and the other, viz., the right hand, extended towards the floor, with the index finger pointing downwards. It advanced with an apparent cautious step across the floor towards me; immediately as it approached my friend, who was slumbering, its right hand was extended towards him. I then rushed at it, giving, as Mr. Proctor states, a most awful yell; but, instead of grasping it, I fell upon my friend, and I recollected nothing distinctly for nearly three hours afterwards. I have since learned that I was carried down stairs in an agony of fear and terror.

"I hereby certify that the above account is strictly true and correct in every respect.

"EDWARD DRURY."

"North Shields."

"What stuff!" exclaimed Mr. Cowley. "Is there any more, Rose"

"A little, papa. An account of a ghost seen in the same house by two young ladies."

"The first night, as they were sleeping in the same bed, they felt the bed lifted up beneath them. Of course, they were much alarmed. They feared lest some one had concealed himself there for the purpose of robbery. They gave an alarm, search was made, but nothing was found. On another night their bed was violently shaken, and the curtains suddenly hoisted up all around to the very tester, as if pulled by cords, and as rapidly let down again, several times. Search again produced no evidence of the cause. The next day they had the curtains totally removed from the bed, resolving to sleep without them, as they felt as though evil eyes were lurking behind them. The consequences of this, however, were still more striking and terrific. The following night, as they happened to wake, and the chamber was light enough (for it was summer) to see everything in it, for they both saw a female figure, of a misty substance, and a bluish-grey hue, come out of the wall at the bed's head, and through the headboard, in a horizontal position, and lean over them. They saw it most distinctly. They saw it as a female figure come out of, and again pass into, the wall. Their terror became intense; and one of the sisters, from that night, refused to sleep any more in the house but took refuge in the house of the foreman during her stay; the other shifted her quarters to another part of the house. It was the young lady who slept at the foreman's who saw as above related the singular apparition of the luminous figure in the window, along with the foreman and his wife.

"It would be too long to relate all the forms in which this nocturnal disturbance is said by the family to present itself. When a figure appears, it is sometimes that of a man, as already described, which is often very luminous, and passes through the walls as though they were nothing. This male figure is well known to the neighbors by the name of 'Old Jeffrey!' At other times it is the figure of a lady also in grey costume, and is described by Mr. Drury. She is sometimes seen sitting wrapped in a sort of mantle, with her head depressed, and her hands crossed on her lap. The most terrible fact is that she is without eyes.

"To hear such sober and superior people gravely relate to you such things gives you a very odd feeling. They say that the noise made is often like that of a pavior with his rammer thumping on the floor. At other times it is coming down stairs, making a similar loud sound. At others, it coughs, sighs and groans, like a person in distress; and again, there is the sound of a number of little feet pattering on the floor of the upper chamber, where the apparition has more particularly exhibited itself, and which for that reason is solely used as a lumber room. Here these foot steps may be often heard, as if careering a child's carriage about, which in bad weather is kept up there. Sometimes again, it makes the most horrible laughs. Nor does it always confine itself to the night. On one occasion a young lady, as she assured me herself, opened the door in answer to a knock, the housemaid being absent, and a lady in fawn colored silk entered, and porceeded up stairs. As the young lady, of course, supposed it a neighbor come to make a morning call on Mrs. Proctor, she followed her up to the drawing room, where, however, to her astonishment, she did not find her, nor was anything more seen of her."

CHAPTER V.

At this stage of the reading Mrs. Cowley, who had been listening in perfect agony of fear, suddenly found strength to rebel.

"Rose, shut that book instantly!" she exclaimed. "No, Mr. Cowley, I will not sit and hear such things! I've got a creeping down my back already, and my arms are all goose flesh; and I wouldn't hear the rest of it if you gave me five thousand pounds—there!"

Rose closed the book. Her father did not object, and drew his chair closer to the fire, and glanced nervously over his shoulder as he did so. Catharine looked very pale, though she made no remark, and Rose was satisfied. It was a pleasure, if a malicious one, to think that not one of them all would dare go up stairs in the dark at that moment, any more than she would. And she felt quite sure that if the lady in grey "without eyes" came to her bedside that night, Catharine's couch would by no means remain unvisited.

There was a short silence, broken by the sound of a rapid scuffling step in the hall. They looked at each other somewhat timidly, and Mrs. Cowley gave a little yelp of terror when the parlor door was flung violently open. But nothig worse than Mrs. Macarthy stood there; Mrs. Macarthy no longer ruddy and laughing, but pale and frightened, as she had once vowed she never could be.

"I wish you would step this way, sir," she said, addressing Mr. Cowley, eagerly. "Something queer has happened out there." ?

"Oh gracious, the ghost, the ghost!" screamed Mrs. Cowley.

"No, ma'am, at least, nothing that you can see. But it isn't exactly improving to the spirits to sit and hear it all by one's self. Do come out, sir, and listen."

Mr. Cowley went. The rest, seized with a sudden panic, ran after him.

Mrs. Macarthy led the way to the kitchen, where she had been sitting reading "Love and Revenge, or The Bandit's Vengeance and the Maiden's Choice," by the light of two tallow candles and a blazing fire large enough to roast an ox. Mr. Cowley looked round curiously, so did the girls, clinging very close to their mother all the while.

"Hark!" said Mrs. Macarthy, holding up her finger; "there it is again!"

They listened with bated breath.

From behind a closed door on the right hand side of the kitchen came a strange, continuous sound.

"The rocking of a cradle, by Jove!" said Mr. Cowley. And Mrs. Macarthy nodded assent.

"Some confounded tricks! Have you opened the door?"

"I tried, sir."

"Well?"

"It would not come open."

"Why not?"

"It is nailed up, sir."

"Didn't I tell you so?" exclaimed Mr. Cowley, gaining fresh courage from this circumstance. "Some rascal has got in there to frighten us out of the place, so he can carry on his usual games with impunity. Give me the hammer, Mrs. Macarthy, and I'll break the door open. I'll cradle the fellow with a vengeance. I wonder if one of you would have pluck enough to go for my pistol?"

"I'll go," said Rose, growing very brave in the belief that a trick was being played upon them. She was not afraid of anything human, even though it came in the shape of a masked burglar at midnight, and she ran and brought the pistol, without giving a thought as to anything that might still be lurking on the stairs.

When she got back her father had finished his task, and was just about to open the door. Still the cradle rocked unceasingly. He bade Mrs. Macarthy bring a light and took that in one hand and the pistol in the other. Mrs. Cowley and Catharine shivered in the background but Mrs. Macarthy and Rose stood stoutly on the other side of the door, eager to get the first peep at the mysterious room.

"Now, you fellow, who ever you may be, I give you fair warning!" called out Mr. Cowley in a loud voice.

Still the cradle rocked.

"I have got a loaded pistol in my hand and the moment I catch sight of you I shall fire."

Still the cradle rocked.

"Do you hear me, you scamp? I'll teach you to cut these capers here."

Still the cradle rocked.

"I shall count three!" roared Mr. Cowley, getting into a rage, "and then I shall fire."

Still the cradle rocked.

"One."

Still the cradle rocked.

"Two."

Still the cradle rocked.

"Three."

Still the cradle rocked; and, for the first time they heard distinctly a sweet female voice, as if singing to a child within.

"Oh, gracious!" screamed Mrs. Cowley.

Mr. Cowley looked aghast, but quickly recovered himself.

"Another trick; but you shan't frighten me with your confounded nonsense. Stand back, all of you. Here goes!"

He gave the door a tremendous kick, which sent it flying from the hinges. At the same instant he fired.

And still, when the echo of the shot had died away, they heard the selfsame noise, the self-same cradle song.

Mr. Cowley entered the room, and held the light high above his head. It was a small closet, like a butler's pantry, with no window, no other mode of ingress or egress than the door. It was impossible for anyone to escape, nor was there a single living thing in the place except himself. Yet the cradle rocked, and the song was sung while he stood there, almost at his very feet.

He stepped back into the kitchen, looking very pale, feeling very sick and faint.

Rose caught him by the arm.

"Oh, papa!" she whispered, with white lips, "the place is haunted, and we were very wrong to come. What shall we do? Loot at mamma!"

It was, indeed, time to do so, for Mrs. Cowley lay in strong hysterics upon the kitchen floor. Catharine had fainted, and Mrs. Macarthy was bending over them both, alternately administering restoratives. Mr. Cowley raised his wife in his arms; Rose and Mrs. Macarthy supported Catharine between them.

Old Trinity Genealogies.

Nowhere is the increasing interest in genealogy and genealogical societies more felt than in the parish of Old Trinity, in this city, says the New York Times. The city is so old, and the church dates back so far in its history, and so many people have lived in New York state that every other woman who can trace her relatives' ancestors into New York state is pretty sure that they must have been registered for birth, marriage or death in the Trinity records. They write to inquire without hesitation, and one clerk is kept busy most of the time looking up possible ancestors and lost links in ancestral chains. Where something like a clew is given, an effort is made to obtain the information, but when there is only a supposition it is not possible to hunt through all the records. It would keep an office full of clerks constantly at the records to answer all the requests that are made.

Woman's Amusing Mistake.

An American woman tells an amusing story against herself, resulting from her blissful ignorance of any language but her own. She was one of three American girls traveling in Italy. They had come to Europe with the laudable determination to see famous people as well as all famous places; and in pursuance of this plan, while in Milan, they paid a visit to Sig. Verdi. Verdi received his unexpected visitors graciously, but as they were taking leave, he raised his voice slightly saying, "Roberto!" She, imagining this must be the Italian equivalent for "farewell," raised her voice also, and looking him full in the face, exclaimed in her turn "Roberto!" then turned to discover, to her dire confusion, that Sig. Verdi had merely been calling his man servant to show them the door. After that she took lessons in Italian

Business Before Pleasure.

An English commercial traveler, for whose pushing Americanism a Liverpool paper vouches with great enthusiasm, started out after a country order. Happening to arrive at the village on the day of a festival, he found the shop of his customer closed, and learned that the man himself was at the celebration a mile out of town. At once he set out for the spot, and reached the ground just in time to see his shopkeeper climb into a balloon procured for special ascensions. The man of trade was equal to the occasion. He stepped forward, paid his fare and climbed into the car. Away went the balloon, and was hardly above the tree-tops when the commercial traveler turned to his astonished victim, and said persuasively but triumphantly: "And now, sir, what can I do for you in calicoes?"—Youth's Companion

Judging Character by Experience.

An attractive personal appearance is a recommendation, but it is not always a sure sign of a good character and an amiable disposition. Except to a student of physiognomy, it is extremely difficult to judge from a person's outward appearance what his or her general character is, and it would be very unsafe to rely on any impression gathered in such a manner. There are, of course, some characteristics plainly stamped on a person's face that can hardly ever be mistaken, such as kindliness and good nature, on the one hand, and selfishness and hardness on the other. But, on the whole, it is well always to cultivate a persons acquaintance before attempting to form any estimate of his or her disposition.—New York Weekly.

Lady's Privilege on Second Meeting.

It is the lady's privilege, if so inclined, to first recognize and salute a gentleman upon next meeting him after being introduced. This prerogative is reserved to ladies, in order to protect them from annoyance; as in company, many casual introductions are made to persons with whom it may not be desirable to keep up an acquaintance. If the lady is disinclined to continue the acquaintance with persons so introduced, she will, of course, make no recognition upon next meeting. Bupt if it should happen to be otherwise, she must take care not to omit the duty incumbent upon her, as politeness and etiquette debar the gentleman from making and advances.—New York Weekly.

The Nursery Breakfast.

The bacon, which is one of the most popular nursery dishes in English households, is quite different from that usually eaten here. It is not smoked and is home cured, sweet and delicious. It is sliced very thin, cooked very quickly, to be just done through, and is eaten hot, but not dried up, on slices of bread. English physicians consider this the best of food for growing children, and as valuable as cod liver oil in tissue building. A typical nursery breakfast in a well to do English household is oatmeal porridge with rashers of bacon, marmalade and cambric tea and coffee made with much rich milk and very little sugar.

Black Eye.

There is nothing to compare with the tincture or strong infusion of capsicum annum mixed with an equal bulk of mucilage or gum arabic, and with the addition of a few drops of glycerine. This should be painted all over the bruised surface with a camel's hair pencil, and allowed to dry on, a second or third coating applied as soon as the first is dried. If done as soon as the injury is inflicted, this treatment will invariably prevent blackening of the bruised tissue. The same remedy has no equal in rheumatic stiff neck.

He—"Carrie, do you know you are the first woman I ever loved?" She—"So then that is what accounts for your greenness? But to think that I should run a kindergarten courtship school!"

Robert Morris, the head of America's treasury during part of the days of the Confederation, is estimated to have been worth about $500,000 in 1790, and was then the richest man in the United States.

SPRING CATARRH MAKES PEOPLE WEAK AND NERVOU

MISS ANNA BRYAN OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Anna Bryan, a favorite cousin of William Jennings Bryan, is well known socially in Washington, D. C., where she has a host of friends. Miss Bryan recently studied music at Fairmount Seminary, of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

1459 Florida Avenue, N. W., Washington, D, C.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"At the solicitation of a friend I began some weeks ago to take your Peruna and I now feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good tonic and a permanent cure for catarrh."—Anna Bryan.

MRS. BERTHA KOCKLER, 177 Guinett street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna and Manalin have done me very great service, and I recommend them with pleasure to all who suffer with nervous catarrh of the stomach as I did. Should such a disease ever attack me again I shall immediately take Peruna. I now feel very well and have a good appetite all the time. I have gained in weight. I recommended Peruna to an acquaintance of ours and he is making remarkable progress. I looked so badly for a time before I began your medicine, that now when I meet some of my friends they say: 'I was very much worried about you, but now you are looking so well.' I shall always keep Peruna and Manalin in the house as family medicines."—Mrs. Bertha Kockler.

Thousands of Fair Women Never Without Peruna, The National Catarrh Remedy.

Miss Marie Coats, President of Appleton Young Ladies' Club, writes the following concerning Peruna:

Appleton, W...

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus...

Gentlemen—"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week. I have used it for three seasons and find it very reliable and efficacious."—Miss Coats.

Miss Marie Coats

Mrs. Al. Wetzel, 21 South 17th street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"Peruna is the greatest medicine on earth. I feel well and that tired feeling is all gone. When I began to use your medicine I could not smell or hear a church bell ring. Now I can smell and hear. When I began the treatment my head was terrible, all sorts of buzzing, chirping and other noises. Three months ago I dragged around like a snail; now I can walk briskly as ever. I am going to go and see the doctor that said I was not long for this world, and tell him what Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Al. Wetzel.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these three ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

If it is the stomach that is out of order, and the digestion impaired, Peruna quickly makes things right by restoring the mucous membrane of the stomach.

If the nerves tingle, if the brain is tired, if the strength is flagging, if the circulation of blood weakened, if flabby mucous membranes of the digestive organs, Peruna reaches the right spot at once by giving to these mucous membranes the vitality and activity which belongs to them.

The pelvic organs are also lined with mucous membrane which in the female sex is especially liable to disarrangements. Peruna is an absolute specific in these cases. The women everywhere are praising it. No other remedy has ever received such unqualified praise from such a multitude of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The next little store-house of information, the Iowa official Register, is again on our table for 1901. It's the best little book published in the state for general information in regard to Iowa. It is the compliment of W. B. Martin, secretary of state.

We are requested to announce that the executive committee of the Sunday School convention, German and Ell townships is re-to meet at the Eng. M. E. church on Saturday, May 4th 1901 at 2:00 p. m. for the purpose of arranging a program in the near future.

James Young, of Garner, was in town Thursday last looking around and informing the people that he is now practising as a veternery surgeon. He is able to treat any of the ills, aches or pains of your horses and cattle. His advertisement is in this issue of the TIMES.

We neglected to mention in last week's issue that a bright new baby girl, nine pounds in weight, is what has made so much happiness in the Peitzke home of late and caused Henry to smile so broadly. For the present it might be christined Henry-etta Peitzke.

The Woodmen lodge held another of it's famous suppers last Saturday night. oysters being made the most delicious diet. The major part of the order's members were present to participate in the festivities of the evening and all report an excellant evening's entertainment.

Some newspaper men achieve success by telling the truth all the time; some by telling the truth occasionally, and others by never telling the truth. We have been unable to discover exactly, but think perhaps, the latter way is in strict keeping with the 'Willie' Bracket's success.

A pleasant family re-union occured Sunday at the G.W.Kluckhohn, home when his mother, brothers, and sisters were all present. Mrs. Chas. Kluckhohn of Garner, Chas Kluckhon Jr. of Minneapolis, Arther Kluckhohn wife and children, Ed. K., his wife and children of Garner, and Mrs. Emma Washburn of Algona, are those who enjoyed a chat about a family circle.

H. E. Peitzke was at Clear Lake th largert part of last week attending the death bed of his dying mother, Mrs. W. Peitzke. He returned home Monday and reports that she passed away on Friday at the age of 79 years and was buried in the Clear Lake cemetery on Sunday. She was known to a number of Klemme people having lived here with her son H. E. The sympaty of this community is extended to all those who are effected by her sudden departure.

DIED:—On Saturday at 9:27 o'clock p. m. at the home of her son Mr. S. Day, Mrs. Elizabeth Kelley passed away. She had been sick since the fourteenth day of last November, and confined to the bed all this time. Her passage from this world into the next was one of notable calm and quietnesse; having endured the pangs of illness for so long when death called it was her happy lot to calmly sleep from life unto death in this world, and life in the next world of eternity. She died at the the age of 74 years. 6 months, and 27 days. leaving behind three children, Morris and Steve Day of this place and Mrs. Mary Hockley of Pennsylvania, to mourn her departure. Mrs. Kelley was born in washingtor Co. Pa, Sept 27th 1826; has lived in Klemme the last ten years of her life and won many friends who regret her death. The funeral services were held at the house at 2:00 p. m. and the interment took place in the Klemme cemetery on Monday with Rev. Bell of Garner officiating. The undivided sympathy of the communitg goes forth to pacify the disturbed feelings of all those who are called into mourning by this sad event.

Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper add the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for yeats to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St. Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yielding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable. and will prove a good investment.

Gee, but those Meservey people are getting puffed up, swell and gay. The masculine gender has tumbled onto the New York Wall street fad of wearing sky scrapeing hats that remind one of the smoke stack on the Belmond flour mill. And the coats, holy horrors! when the wind is blowing they look like a seventeen armed octupos coming down the street on the run. Their neck ties resemble a blazing furnace, redder than a blushing maiden, loud enough to drive a cow, call the dogs or stop the cars. Meservey is a great place!

DEATH OF MRS. PEITZKE.

Mrs Wilhelmina Kant Peitzke was born in the village of Krazen, in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, on Dec. 21, 1821, and died at the home of her son, Wm. Peitzke, Clear Lake, Iowa, April 26, 1901, at the age of 79 years, 4 months, and 5 days. Deceased was married to Ferdinand Peitzke on the sixth day of March 1845, at the place of her birth. Nine children were born to this union, of which seven, together with their families, remain to mourn her loss. One child died in infancy, and Mrs. Bertha Stark their oldest daughter died about to years ago. All of her children were with her during her last illness.

Deceased with her husband and four children came to America in 1845 settling near Burlington, Wis., where they resided about five years, when they came to Stacyville, Mitchell Co, Ia, remaining there about five years from there moving to Riceville of the same county, where soon after the husband and father died, on Jan. 25, 1870. Since the death of her husband she continued living at Riceville, Iowa, until the last few years she has made her home with her children.

Mrs. Peitzke was converted to God about twenty-five years ago and joined the Evanegelical denomination and lived a consistent christian life. She often said she was prepared to die She was very patient during her last illness.

Rest for the toiling hand,
Rest for the anxious brow,
Rest for the weary way sore feet,
Rest from all labor now.

Rest for the fevered brow,
Rest for the throbing eye,
Through these parched lips of clay
no more
Shall pass the moan or sigh.

Rest, weary one, a while,
Till Christ shall bid thee rise, and soon, as from refreshing sleep,
Thou'lt wake with glad surprise.

Soon, soon, from out the dust shall all come forth and sing,
Sharp has the frost of winter been,
But brightly shines the spring.

Let hope cheer those who weep:
E'en now the rays of dawn above the eastern hill-tops creep
We're near the light of morn.

FARM FURROWS,

From IOWA HOMESTEAD.

The management that enables a man to make money should also help him to save it.

Current vines and red raspberries take kindly to a few wood ashes, which I have found to be excellant fertilizers.

Word comes from the state of New York that so many of the maple trees of that state have been hurt by storms and forest worms that they were not tapped this year.

The farmer who had plenty of hay to sell this year was very fortunate, and he did not need to have the "hay fever" either. The man who bought the hay had that.

The latest invention for deception of which I have heard is imitation vaccination scars. They can be pasted on the arm and the health officer can be fooled. These are said to fool the health officer, but they do not answer as proof against smallpox contagion.

It is all right to plant with plenty of hope, but at the same time it pays to employ skill and good judgement The lazy man has good right to hope for good crops without work as the industrious man. Hope belongs to all, but hope alone will not bring the reward

The face and body are sculptured by our thoughts. The man of vice shows it on his countenance; the man of God shows it on his countenance. Happiness cannot be hidden; neither can disagreeableness. It will pay to plant happy tho'ts in the mind instead of small annoyances.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burneet Mann, of Levanna, O., 'my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble, I was hardly ever free from dull aches or pain in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan, I felt tired, worn out about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles compietely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate stomach, kidneys, and bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by J. L. Harr. Only 50c.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years, says Josh Edger, of Germantown, Cal. I was able to be around but constantly suffered. I tried everything I could hear of and at last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I did and was immediately relieved and in a short time cured and I am happy to say it has not yet returned." Why not use this liniment and get well? It is for sale by J. L. Harr, druggist.

Fought For His Life.

"My mother and sister both died of Consumption, writes J. T. Weatherwax, of Wyandotte, Mich., "and I was saved from the same frightful fate only by Dr. King's New Discovery. An attack of pneumonia left an obstinate cough and very severe lung trouble which an excellant doctor could not help, but a few month's use of this wonderful medicine made me as well as ever and I gained much in weight" Infallible for coughs, colds and all throat and lung trouble. A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All doctors have tried to cure Catarrh by the use of powders, acid gases inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucuous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of Catarrh, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures Catarrh, by removing the cause stoping the discharges and curing all inflamation. THE NEWS IN IOWA

DEATH OF HON. L. R. BOLTER.

One of the Best Known Men of the State Passes Away.

Logan, April 30.—Senator L. R. Bolter died at his home in this city at 5:45 last night, after an illness of but a few days. His illness was of an acute nature from the beginning, but all the relief that medical aid could give was of no avail.

Senator Bolter was born July 27, 1834, in Richland county, Ohio, and came to Iowa, locating in Harrison county in 1863. In 1865 he was admitted to the bar, and soon worked his way up high in his profession and even when a young man his opinions were sought by men whose age in the profession would lead one to believe them to be his superiors, and he has ever since been a leading light in the legal practice throughout the state.

In the fall of 1865 Senator Bolter was elected to the house of representatives, being for the Eleventh general assembly. He also served in the same capacity in the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Nineteenth and Twentieth general assemblies. Following this he was elected state senator, serving in the Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth general assemblies, making almost a continuous service in his state for a third of a century.

In 1876 he was the democratic nominee for congress and in 1899 was prevailed upon to take the nomination for governor, but would not accept. In 1896 his name was placed upon the ticket for supreme judge, and although defeated, succeeded in running far ahead of his ticket.

OIL COMPANY FORMED.

Clay County People Will Investigate the Lead at Greenville.

Sioux City, May 3.—Clay county people have faith in the recently reported oil discoveries there and they have filed articles of incorporation for a company which controls the supposed oil lands at Greenville, and which will sink several wells at once. The company will be known as the Clay County Oil and Mineral company. The incorporators are A. W. Greene and O. A. B. Newton of Spencer, and W. A. Darley, C. E. Conklin, H. B. Collins, N. S. Whistler, S. S. Truman, N. C., H. C. and George Harvey, C. Barglof, A. Younger and Byron Jones. Their authorized capital is $100,000. At present they will issue $50,000 worth of shares. When the $50,000 worth have been disposed of it will give the company an income of $5,000, with which work on the oil land at Greenville will be started. Officers are not selected as yet, but will be as soon as the stock is sold.

PROPERTY OWNERS RESPONSIBLE

Can Be Made Defendants in Sidewalk Damage Suits.

Dubuque, May 3.—A new departure has been made by the city authorities in regard to suits brought against the city for injuries sustained by parties owing to defective sidewalks. A. A. Cooper has been notified to appear and defend suit brought by J. C. Baner for $3,000 damages. Baner fell on the Cooper sidewalk and sustained serious injuries. The notice served is in conformity with section 1053 of the code of 1897. If Mr. Cooper fails to comply with the notice, the city will hold him liable in whatever sum may be awarded plaintiff against the city. The latter claims Cooper is responsible for the condition of the sidewalk. This is the first time that a notice to defend a suit for damages was served by the city under the code.

FIFTEEN MONTHS FOR FORGERY.

Quincy H. Edwards, Detected by LeMars Postmaster, Is Sentenced.

Dubuque, May 2.—Quincy H. Edwards, the man who entered the postoffice in South Dakota, where his mother is postmistress, and forged a money order for $72.40 payable at LeMars, Iowa, and who was detected by the postmaster at that place after the order had been cashed, was sentenced to fifteen months in the penitentiary by Judge Shiras. When the forgery first came to light the report was circulated that the postmaster at LeMars was the guilty one, when in fact he was the one to detect the real criminal.

Reinbeck Saloons Closed.

Cedar Falls, May 3.—Three saloons of Reinbeck have been enjoined and closed. They are the places of Carl Steinmeyer, Peter Clausen and Link Hickson. They have been operated for some time because the public raised no objection. The 65 per cent petition did not carry, and the places were being run under the old law. For some time they have paid no license but $40 a month to the city, claiming they could not be held for mulct tax, as they did not run under the act. Several women of the town have been holding prayer meetings in the places and they have been aided by H. H. Abrams of the Anti-Saloon league. The cases will come up for a hearing before Judge Platt of Waterloo.

To Recover for Lost Cattle.

Creston, May 5.—An interesting damage suit has been started by John S. Black, a well known Adams county farmer and stockman, against Mr. Widener, of Corning. The plaintiff asks for $11,000. He says that in 1898 he purchased of defendant 200 head of cattle, and that they were shipped to him from New York. Shortly after the arrival of the cattle, it is claimed, pneumonia made its appearance and destroyed 84 of the original herd, aside from inoculating other cattle, and in all Black claims to have lost 149 head. He brings suit to recover. The points involved are interesting, and the termination of the suit will be watched by stockmen with interest.

Treasurers May Assess.

Council Bluffs, May 4.—Judge Wheeler has handed down an opinion in the case of August Beresheim vs. County Treasurer Arnd, holding that the treasurer had the right to assess personal property which had been omitted from the assessment for the years 1898, 1899 and 1900. There are a number of similar suits pending and this decision practically covers the points involved in all.

Boone County for Cummins.

Boone, May 3.—At the county convention the delegates chosen to the state convention were instructed for Cummins.

Kansas Orator Won.

Des Moines, May 3.—Robert Lootbourrow, of Baker university, Kansas, won the twenty-eighth annual contest of the Interstate Oratorical association held at the Auditorium last evening. His subject was "The Orient and the Occident." W. R. Davis of Ripon college, Wis., took second place, and C. M. Cavanee of Iowa Wesleyan university, third. Davis spoke on "Hamlet," and Cavanee on "True Republicanism."

GEORGE D. PERKINS WITHDRAWS.

Is No Longer a Candidate for the Nomination for Governor.

Sioux City, April 30.—George D Perkins, in the Journal, prints the following announcement of his withdrawal from the republican gubernatorial contest:

To the Republicans of Iowa: Hon. Edwin H. Conger, upon his return to the United States, having reiterated his assurance that he would accept the nomination of the republicans of Iowa for governor, if they should decide to tender the nomination to him, I withdraw my name from further consideration in connection with that office.

These considerations influence me: I am anxious to contribute to the unity and good name of the republican party of this state. I have confidence in the republicanism, ability and integrity of Major Conger, and believe he would fill the office of governor with distinction. I do not desire to be a source of division and contention to the republican party of the Eleventh congressional district. It is not important that I should hold a public office.

I greatly appreciate the kindness of many friends at home and over the state. The question of preference with them, since my name is withdrawn, I am content to leave to their intelligent judgment as citizens and republicans. Geo. D. Perkins.

The announcement came as a great surprise in Sioux City, Mr. Perkins having given no intimation that he had any such intention.

BRAINED CHILD WITH HATCHET.

Insane Deed of Mrs. George Rankin, of Highland Park.

Des Moines, May 6.—Mrs. Rankin, wife of George Rankin, a nurseryman living on North First street, directly south of Highland Park college, assaulted her daughter, aged 12, striking the girl several times with a hatchet. Brains and blood were strewn all over the kitchen floor. The girl died a few hours later.

Dr. Scott was called when the tragedy first became known to a neighbor, but deep gashes in the head and the immense flow of blood were too great for medical skill to combat.

The insanity of Mrs. Rankin is supposed to have been due to a long siege of sickness which she has undergone. The commissioners of insanity adjudged Mrs. Rankin insane and ordered her committed to the asylum at Mount Pleasant. A deputy sheriff placed the demented women under arrest and left at once for the asylum. The mother of Mrs. Rankin died in the asylum some years ago. She was considered an incurable. Examination by the commissioners developed the fact that Mrs. Rankin has never been considered of unsound mind, this being her first attack. When taken in custody by an officer she did not seem to realize what she had done and was apparently unable to understand the action of the officer in placing her under arrest.

CONGER WOULD ACCEPT.

But He Will Not Make a Fight for the Nomination.

Des Moines, May 6.—The Register prints the following statement from Minister E. H. Conger regarding the gubernatorial nomination:

"Des Moines, May 4.—Ed. Register: In reply to hundreds of letters from all over Iowa, which I can not answer personally urging me to accept the nomination for governor by the republican party, I ask the Register to say that I repeat the statement first made that I can not be a candidate, but will accept the nomination if it is tendered to me. Very respectfully submitted.

"E. H. Conger."

Minister Conger leaves the city tonight for Washington, D. C. He will not return to Iowa until after his speech before the American-Asiatic association in New York City, May 16.

Mr. Conger was asked if his attitude toward the nomination would interfere with his plans to return to China.

"No," he replied. "It will in no way affect my plans on going back. I expect to return to China at the expiration of sixty days, the period for which I obtained leave of absence."

PARNELL POSTOFFICE SCANDAL.

Cedar Rapids, May 2.—At the preliminary hearing of Miss Rosa P. Duffy the court room was packed. It developed that Postmaster Ryan, who is also charged with defrauding the government, is trying to shift the blame upon Miss Duffy.

Postmaster Ryan admitted that he found $384 in a purse in the office and had taken the money and deposited it with his individual funds in the bank, not making any report of the same to the government or saying anything about it to Miss Duffy. When asked if he did not build a $2,000 block in the city of Parnell, where he is postmaster, he admitted hat he had built a block costing about $1,700, but that it was with his own funds. Other evidence against Miss Duffy was so strong that at the end of the hearing the defendant was bound over to the federal court under $1,000 bonds.

MRS. BAILY GETS THE PLUM.

Des Moines Woman at Head of Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs.

Council Bluffs, May 4.—Mrs. W. H. Baily of Des Moines was unanimously elected president of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Flora Barclay of Boone was elected vice president and Mrs. Nellie F. Cooke of Algona corresponding secretary. Delegates at large to the general federation at Los Angeles next March: Mrs. W. H. Baily, by virtue of her office; Mrs. J. G. Hutchinson of Ottumwa, Mrs. Illick of Burlington, Mrs. Garst of Coon Rapids, Mrs. Peck of Davenport and eight others representing different sections of the state. Mrs. Hallam of Sioux City was elected recording secretary of the federation; Mrs. J. P. Davis of Council Bluffs, treasurer; Mrs. O. Burlison of Webster City, auditor.

POLK COUNTY FOR CUMMINS.

Gave the Right to Name the Delegation to Cedar Rapids.

Des Moines, May 6.—The Polk county republican convention authorized A. B. Cummins to name the sixty-four delegates and the same number of alternates from this county to the state convention. These delegates were also instructed to vote for Judge C. A. Bishop for judge of the supreme court. Resolutions were adopted commending the national administration and favoring the re-election of Senators Allison and Dolliver.

The Foster delegates filed a protest against the manner of selecting delegates and named six delegates to contest for seats from the Fourth supervisorial district.

Story Instructed for Cummins.

Nevada, May 6.—The county convention of Story county resulted in the instruction of the delegation for A. B. Cummins for governor. The delegation was instructed for Judge Weaver for judge of the supreme court.

Looks Like Murder.

Ottumwa, April 29.—William Menee, a junk dealer, was found floating in the river with an ugly wound in his head. Indications point to a murder, but there is no clew. His wife recently left him.

Cummins Carries Story.

Nevada, April 29.—A. B. Cummins carried every precinct in Story county but one in the city of Nevada at the county primaries. The weather was clear and a normal vote was polled.

CONGERS ARE AT HOME

THEY RECEIVE A HEARTY WELCOME AT ALL POINTS.

Banquetted at Council Bluffs and Cheered All Along the Route.

Council Bluffs, May 2.—Major and Mrs. Edwin H. Conger, Miss Laura Conger and Miss Mary Pierce stepped upon Iowa soil at 9:05 yesterday morning. Long before that time a surging, cheering crowd had blocked the platform at the new station and for half an hour there had been cries of "Here they come," as strained eyes saw a speck of smoke in the distance. While the band was playing "The Star Spangled Banner" the party from Peking stepped from the car to be literally devoured by their friends.

The scene was one never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it. In the intense excitement for a moment formal arrangements were forgotten and every one rushed upon the Congers.

Major Conger was visibly affected as strong men rushed up and threw their arms about him.

"You'll never, never know what this home-coming means to us," said Mrs. Conger in a choking voice as she stepped into the carriage. All along the way from the Northwestern to the Grand hotel it was a march triumphant. In front of the hotel an immense crowd had gathered and there was general handshaking before the party started for the drive about the city.

A fifth member of the party and the marvelous admiration of Council Bluffs is a strange little black and white dog which Laura Conger brought from Peking. It was found in the private bedroom of the empress dowager of China. To a party of friends in the lobby of the Grand hotel this morning Major Conger said:

"I want to return to China, and I know no reason why I cannot. I have received a letter from Secretary Hay saying there is nothing in the stories of unpleasant feeling of the administration toward me; that everything is entirely satisfactory."

Mrs. Conger says she is thankful they did not return to America immediately after the siege. "It would be much more terrible to remember if we had," she said. "As it is the memory of the past winter, which was a delightful one, has softened it."

All four members of the party appear in excellent health and jubilant spirits.

The Des Moines delegation to the Conger reception did not arrive in Council Bluffs until 12:05, the train being one hour late.

MINISTER CONGER AT HIS DESK IN PEKING.

One hundred and fifty plates were laid for the banquet, which was served from 1 to 4 p. m. The speeches given were all characterized by sincerity in their welcome of Minister Conger and family.

Mayor Jennings eloquently welcomed Minister Conger and his family to Council Bluffs.

Governor Shaw then, in eloquent words, presented Major Conger, who responded to the toast, "Our Guest." Major Conger was visibly affected by the warmth of his reception, and when he first commenced to speak his voice was broken with emotion. Toward the close it became stronger, especialy when he spoke of the responsibility of the imperial government of China for the seige of the legations. Major Conger in substance said:

I shall find it impossible to give expressions to the feelings which your welcome inspires. It was indeed good when I looked out of the car window this morning and saw the sun shining on the green hills of Iowa. No language is strong enough to tell of the deep gratitude of myself and family to be home again. I can only say I thank you with all my heart, in behalf of myself and those who have shared perils with me. From their hearts and mine shall forever gush out a stream of gratitude immeasurable and unmeasured. But great as your demonstration is, I do not consider it my own. It shows rather the interest you have felt in an extraordinary situation. History does not record a parallel to the events of last summer. To you we were dead. To us it seemed a resurrection when we came up out of the valley of the shadow of death, and now that we stand on the summit of real life once again it is good to be alive.

I am glad to be a citizen of a state which at the ballot box supports our present splendid national administration and sends to congress so magnificent a delegation. It is three years since I left Iowa. We were then somewhat in the dumps. The clouds of depression still hovered. How great has been the revival of trade and industry, aided by the intelligence of the president and his advisers! Three years ago a wave of feeling was beginning to go over the land, demanding the relief of Cuba. The work of the delivery, how grandly was it accomplished. But not only was Cuba freed, but the war started this country on a new pathway. The Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, are now ours. We have become a world power, at least with reference to the east. Only forty years ago in China began the march of the missionaries and since great has been the growth of American interests. The trade we now have is but a beginning. Ever growing are the means of communication. A new line of steamers now plies from Hong Kong to San Francisco, stopping at Manila, and another has been established between Hong Kong and Australia, also stopping at

It is proper that the intelligent citizens of this great republic should begin to feel an increased concern about the orient. The future will doubtless prove that the siege of Peking was the turning point. Out of those dreadful days good is likely to come. At present our trade with the east has been lessened, but it is only a temporary staying.

I wish I had time to tell you the story of the siege. But doubtless you know all I do and perhaps a great deal more. (Laughter.) But I will stop long enough to say that the attacks on the legation were made by imperial troops, led by Chinese princes under the Chinese flag. We were in no danger from the Boxers. Every cannon pointed against us was an imperial cannon. The whole responsibility rests upon the Chinese government. I know reports have gone out to the world that the imperial government found it impossible to suppress a formidable insurrection and was not guilty beyond supineness. This is not true. The fault was with the recognized Chinese officials. I am glad to add, however, that those responsible for the attacks have been punished or are on the way to punishment. I am persuaded that the more progressive Chinese in southern China are glad that there has been punishment. The imperial government itself is glad, and there will never be a repetition of such scenes. The lesson has been taught and will never be forgotten. I prophesy good for the future. The saddest thing is that we cannot bring back the devoted and heroic missionaries who perished to the number of 200, but they will be satisfied with the knowledge that out of the seed of their martyrdom has come advancement and progress.

Mr. Conger closed his speech by telling of a message sent by his secretary and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bainbridge, to their old friends in Council Bluffs. Mr. Conger sat down amid prolonged handclapping.

John N. Baldwin reviewed briefly the career of Mr. Conger and paid him a glowing eulogy.

C. G. Saunders spoke of the policy of the United States in the east, and Senator Dolliver on the service Iowa has rendered the nation.

A. B. Cummins eloquently responded to the toast, "Westward the Star of Empire Takes Its Way."

C. M. Harl spoke of the work done by the women of the Conger party, and Judge Given on what the return of the Congers meant to Iowa.

Des Moines, May 2.—The speeches at the Council Bluffs banquet were over at 4:40 o'clock, and the Des Moines contingent, accompanied by Major Conger and family, hastened to the Rock Island train to take the "Conger special." Before the train started, Governor Shaw called the group on the platform together and introduced Judge Given, who delivered an address of welcome in behalf of Des Moines. Mr. Conger replied briefly, after which the train started for Des Moines. The trip to Des Moines was a grand ovation. People all along the route were out to welcome the returning minister, and at Atlantic, Stuart and Dexter the major was compelled to make short addresses. An immense crowd met the train at Des Moines. Amid the cheers of the great crowd the party was driven to their home on Fifth street.

CHINA APOLOGIZES TO FRANCOIS

Paris, May 1.—The foreign office has received a dispatch from Meng Tzee announcing the arrival there of M Francois, the French consul, on his return to his post. M. Francois says that, according to the demands of the French government, he was met by Chinese troops ten kilometers from Meng Tzee, who rendered him honors and high mandarins proffered the official apologies of the government for the events of last June.

The French consular party, under M. Francois, consul at Yun Nan Fu, was attacked June 10 on leaving Yun Nan Fu and was forced to return to the town. All the baggage was rifled and the missions and railroad buildings were burned. M. Francois gathered his countrymen at his residence and defended the place with rifles. The Francois party was allowed to start for Tonquin June 24 under the protection of the viceroy of Yun Nar Fu.

Fully one-third of the sick people in New York City are treated gratuitously in the dispensaries. Many of those who seek free treatment are persons in comfortable circumstances, who can well afford to pay for medical attendance, and who don shabby garments and conceal their jewelry and other evidences of prosperity when they visit dispensaries.

"For my part," remarked the Chicago woman, "I would be satisfied with a divorce."

A toper in Montezuma county, Colorado, sought a divorce because his abused wife retaliated by making things unpleasant for him, throwing lamps and crockery at him, hiding his clothes to keep him in the house, mixing emetics in his food, and otherwise annoying him in various ways to force him to renounce the use of stimulants. The court decided that she has a right to ill-treat the husband who is a slave to liquor.

Hollow Ash... Hall

BY MARGARET BLOUNT.

CHAPTER VI.

When the good ship "Fort Philip" came sailing home from Australia to England many an anxious parent or over or friend awaited her arrival upon the harbor pier, eager to welcome those who had been so long absent, and who were now returning to leave their native land no more.

Most of these wanderers had left their home and friends in search of gold. Some had been successful, and were returning in the first flush of victorious pride, some had failed and were coming back like the prodigal son of old, willing to eat even the crumbs that might fall from the paternal table, so that the diet of the empty husks in a far land should be theirs no more. Some were strong and happy, some were ill and sad; but for all alike a welcome was waiting the moment they touched the land.

For all, did I say?

There was one on board for whose arrival no friend was watching, one who came unnoticed and unknown to the land of his birth, one for whom no home more genial than an inn would open wide its doors. Among the eager and excited throng who talked to themselves and each other of the friends they hoped to see, he stood a silent listener, with no story of the kind to offer in return. When they landed at last, his late companions were lost to his view among groups of relations and acquaintances, but not a hand was outstretched, not a voice was raised to welcome him. He stood a few moments watching the interchange of greetings, the prayers, the tears of grateful joy, then turned away with quivering lips and moistened eyes.

"Shall I never be missed, never be mourned over like that?" was his thought as he passed from the pier to the busy streets, and made the best of his way to a hotel, to which he had been recommended by the captain of his ship. "Three and twenty years old, and the world before me! That sounds well, but when I know that the world contains no love, no home, no happiness, that I may honestly claim—Ah, well, never mind! I'm not going to be a baby, and cry for the moon; so, adieu to sentiment of every kind, while I drop anchor in this bustling town. Here is the 'Eagle' right before me, and for the sum of one guinea I can purchase smiles without number from the worthy host."

So saying, he entered the "Eagle" and ordered his dinner. But sad thoughts still seemed to haunt him, and when the repast had been cleared away he sat brooding over the fire, biting rather than smoking his cigar, and pulling the ends of his moustache with a frown. At last some memory of the past touched him too keenly. He broke into a bitter laugh.

"The fool I was when I was young!" he thought to himself. "How well I remember the wild dreams that kept me company when I began the race! What wonderful things I was to accomplish then! How soon I was to build my fortune! How I was going about doing good, comforting the sad, relieving the poor, raising up the oppressed. Howsoon I accomplished all those schemes! How much better the world must be to-day because I have lived in it!"

His face grew still more sad as he mused.

"I laugh at these things now, and yet it makes me unhappy. That would have been a beautiful life if I could but have lived it. Iwould rather have the heart of those days that could plan the scheme than this I must now own that can only ridicule it! But the young romance has gone. It haunts me no longer. My nature is as barren and worldly as—as even she could desire."

There it was you see. That irrepressible "she" who is sure to be at the bottom of every perplexity and trouble a man can know.

He tugged at his moustache fiercely, and flung his cigar in the grate.

"I can see the place now as if in a dream," he groaned. "Those hills and distant mountains; that calm sky, so 'darkly, deeply, beautifully blue,' the sheep upon the hill side, and the cattle in the pasture chewing the cud lazily, and lying still to feel the warmth! And that other day, a week later, when the sky was heavy with rain. A chill, raw wind blew from those hills, the roadway wet and sodden; so was the glen, through all its fallen leaves. Yet she stood there, bright and gay, and restless and happy. She let the wind blow through her curls, she lifted her face to catch the fallen rain. Great heaven! how beautiful she was! And I have lost her—I shall never see her again!"

He groaned, and covered his face with his hands. Five minutes passed—then he started from his seat.

"This won't do," he ejaculated. "Byron says:

"'Man, being reasonable, must get drunk.'

I agree with him; but one can't well get drunk before the orthodox hours of 10 or 11 p. m. Then no one minds it. It is now 6 o'clock—four hours before I can carry out the Byronic theory. I know what I'll do. I'll go to town and see my uncle and my little pet, Rose."

He rang the bell for a time-table—found that an express train started for London at half past 6. At that time to a minute he was on his way to Mr. Cowley's house in Mecklenburg Square.

CHAPTER VII.

"Tea is ready, if you please, Mrs. Magnum."

At that announcement, made in a very clear yet pleasant voice, Mrs. Magnum started out of her nap, which she had been enjoying in the depths of her velvet chair, rubbed her eyes, and looked up at a young lady who stood on the hearth-rug, a few paces from her.

"Eh? What did you say, Miss Marjorie?" she asked, sharply.

"Tea is ready," replied Miss Marjorie, taking her seat at the head of the table as she spoke.

"Humph," muttered Mrs. Magnum, eyeing her with a sour look of dissatisfaction. "Well," you may pour me out a cup. But where is Mr. Magnum and Julius, and dear Kate? It is really extraordinary, that when I am so punctual myself, everyone belonging to me should be perfectly unable to understand the value of time, or come to their meals at the proper hours. I am sure, when I was a girl, my mamma would have—"

What her mamma would have done in a similar state of things Miss Marjorie never knew, for at that moment the door opened, and a corpulent, red-faced, good-humored looking man entered, closely followed by a stupid-looking boy of 12. The young lady subsided into a graceful attitude upon the sofa; the boy established himself at Miss Marjorie's elbow, and began an indiscriminate assault upon the eatables; but Mr. Magnum dutifully supplied his wife with a cup of tea and plate of bread and butter before beginning his own meal, which he took at the small table which always stood beside her easy chair.

"Well, my dear," he said, cheerfully, "how has the world used you to-day?"

"As usual," was the whining reply.

"The neuralgia any better?"

"No, my dear."

"And the headache?"

"As bad as ever."

"Dear! dear!" said Mr. Magnum, sympathizingly.

Mrs. Magnum sighed and leaned her head upon her hand.

She was the invalid of the family. From early morn to dewy eve she sat in her velvet chair; and during nine months of the year, before a fire hot enough to roast an ox. The atmosphere of the parlor was so stifling as to make a stranger feel faint after breathing it for five minutes at a time; but Mr. Magnum and his son and daughter inhaled it contentedly enough. Miss Marjorie, indeed, was constantly troubled with giddiness and determination of blood to the head; but she was only a companion, and no one paid much attention to her ailments, unless they were of an obstinately intrusive kind. So, through the sharp winter the double windows of the parlor were closed and padded, and list was nailed around the doors, and sand bags laid at every crack and crevice, lest a breath of cold air should by any chance steal through; and the invalid, basking before the piled-up grate, dozed and ate, and drank, through the short days and long evenings, till the light and heat of summer forced her to live a little less like a salamander and a little more like an ordinary human being.

Mr. Magnum was a retired ironmonger, who had made money enough out of his pots and kettles to leave them forever in his fifty-fifth year. It had been his father's business before him, and he had started therein at the age of 21 with the snug sum of one thousand pounds as pocket money, to say nothing of a trade connection extending half over the Black County. Yet, in speaking of the earlier part of his life he was accustomed to allude to himself pathetically as a "poor orphan," and to hint mysteriously at terrible hardships undergone by him—leaving you to infer that those hardships had been surmounted by him alone, without the slightest aid. The story had a somewhat ludicrous effect when you gazed at the face of the narrator, and heard the puffing sighs with which his obesity compelled him ever to interlard it. Certainly no one looked less like a "poor orphan" than he.

Tea was at length over. Mrs. Magnum nestled herself into the easiest corner of her easy chair, Julius went out; the fair Kitty began to crochet, and Mr. Magnum read the daily paper laboriously aloud. If any one listened to political speeches and stock lists it was not Miss Marjorie. She sat in a far corner of the room, ostensibly engaged in correcting a French exercise of Miss Kitty's, but really thinking of a time and a person far, far away.

At last Mr. Magnum put down his paper and turned to his wife, with the air of one who has a secret of importance to reveal.

"My dear, who do you think I met at the works to-day?"

"How should I know?" replied Mrs. Magnum, somewhat testily. "Some horrid ironmaster, I presume."

"No, my love—quite a different person. A banker. You must remember hearing me speak of him. Mr. Cowley, of Mecklenburg Square."

Miss Marjorie looked up, flushed and agitated, from her drawing, but no one heeded her.

"Mr. Cowley," replied Mrs. Magnum, slowly. "Yes, I remember hearing you speak of him. What is he doing here?"

"You would never guess, my love. He has a house."

"In this neighborhood?"

"Yes, within a mile of us."

"But what house can there be to let so near? I know of none. Do you, Kitty, darling?"

"No, mamma."

"Yes you do, both of you," replied Mr. Magnum, triumphantly. "Only it is just the last house any one in their senses would think of taking. It is Hollow Ash Hall."

"What!" exclaimed Mrs. Magnum, from among her cushions.

"It is true, my love. Cowley has taken it."

"Is he mad?"

"No—quite sane."

"How long is he to stay?"

"I can't say, my dear. I only saw him a moment."

"Who is with him?"

"His wife and two daughters."

"Then they must be mad!"

"So I should say," replied Kitty darling from her sofa.

"I never heard of such a thing, Mr. Magnum."

"Nor any one else, my love. All Banley is wild about it."

"Quite likely."

"Cowley says it will do good."

"How?"

"He thinks that people will not be afraid of the place after any one has lived in it."

"Stuff and nonsense!"

"So I say, my dear."

"How long have they been there?"

"Nearly a week."

"Have they seen anything?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I asked him that."

"What did he say?"

"Just what you said a moment ago."

"What?"

"Stuff and nonsense!"

"Ah, but did he mean it?"

"I think so. He was quite short with me because I asked."

"What did he want at the works?" inquired Mrs. Magnum, after a moment's pause.

"A shovel and a pickaxe, and two or three other tools."

"Then he has seen or heard something; and he is going to pull the hall to pieces in order to find it," replied the lady, with unusual energy.

Mr. Magnum shook his head.

"I wonder if the place is haunted?" he observed, in a musing tone.

"Good gracious! How can you doubt it?"

"People often tell such ridiculous stories about all places like that. What if all the sights and sounds should be nothing but—rats!"

At this heresy Mrs. Magnum held up her hands in horror.

(To be Continued.)

GROWTH OF GERMAN CITIES.

Prosperity Seems to Have Gained a Foothold in the Fatherland.

Consul-General Mason's figures giving the population of German cities by the census of December 1, 1900, furnishes interesting figures for comparison with our own census taken in June last. There are thirty-three German cities of over 100,000 inhabitants as against thirty-nine in this country. Berlin, with a population of 1,884,84 is considerably larger than Chicago and about the equal of that part of New York included in Manhattan borough, or old New York city without the Bronx additions. Berlin has doubled in population within thirty years and by annexing its populous suburbs could obtain a total of 2,500,000. In five years its percentage of gain has been 12.3, while in the last ten years the New York territory has increased 37.15 per cent and Chicago 54.44 per cent. The most rapidly growing cities of Germany at the present time are Nuremberg, Frankfort, Halle, Mannheim and Posen, all of them manufacturing towns. Of the cities above 100,000 Crefeld alone shows a decrease, said to be largely due to the loss of the American market for its textile goods, now supplied by our own factories. Hamburg, the great seaport of Germany, is the second city with 704,669 inhabitants and a rate of gain almost the same as that of Berlin. We have no city of the same approximate size, for it is a curious fact that there is no American city between St. Louis, with 575,238, and Philadelphia, with 1,293,697. There is a great gulf, indeed. Munich, Leipsic and Breslau are all between 400,000 and 500,000 in the order named, and of these only Munich shows a gain in the five years of more than 20 per cent. Munich approaches closely to Baltimore in size, having 498,503 to 508,957 in the Maryland metropolis, but it falls short of both St. Louis and Boston, the latter being less than 15,000 behind St. Louis. Dresden and Cologne are near together in the list, with 395,349 and 370,685, respectively, which puts them in the class with Cleveland and ahead of Buffalo, San Francisco, Cincinnati and Pittsburg, there being eleven cities above 300,000 in this country and only seven in Germany. Frankfort, with a population of 287,813 and a growth in five years of 25 per cent, is almost tie with our slow-growing New Orleans. Nuremberg, with 260,743 people and the phenomenal increase of 60 per cent since 1895, is pushing closely after Detroit, Milwaukee and Washington. These are all the cities in both countries of over 250,000 inhabitants. Evidently the German cities are prosperous as a rule, and the rate of growth of a few of them is certainly remarkable. In spite of temporary depressions like that at present existing it is reasonable to expect that the young German empire will take a rank very close to the top of the list of nations in wealth and material progress, as well as intellectual advancement long before the end of the new century.—Buffalo Courier.

White Ants in Rhodesia.

An interesting description of the ravages of white ants, or termites, in Rhodesia is furnished by Rev. A. Leboeuf to the Zambesi Mission Record for January. The special interest for the contribution centers in the account of the damage done to property by white ants in Rhodesia, which seems to be even greater than in India. It is no uncommon thing, says the writer for the colonist on returning from his day's labor to find the coat he left hanging on a nail of his cottage wall and the books on the table absolutely destroyed by these tiny marauders. Nor is this all. "On awakening next morning," writes Mr. Leboeuf, "you are astonished to see in the dim light a cone-shaped object rising from the brick floor a short distance from your bed, with two holes on the top like the crater of a minature volcano. On closer examination you discover that the holes have just the size and shape of the inside of your boot, which you incautiously left on the brick floor the night before. They have given form and proportion to an ant heap, and nothing is left of them except the nails, eyelets and, may be, part of the heels." And as the same dismal story—with variations—has to be told about every other article of apparel and all perishable objects, it must be admitted that there are drawbacks to the lot of a settler in Rhodesia.—Nature.

Fashions in Wearing Horns.

If the question were asked, why do the rhinoceri grow their horns upon the nose, instead of on the head, like other animals? the answer would probably be that they require them for rooting digging and such like purposes as well as for war, and the nasal position renders them more generally useful than if they were fixed on the top of the skull. At present the rhinoceros is the only quadruped which has a horn of this kind, but a study of fossil mammals shows that he is the sole survivor of avast number of creatures whose natural weapons were built on the same general plan. In fact, in the days of the rhinoceros' early forefathers horns of this kind were probably much more common than those such as we see on the heads of oxen, antelopes and sheep. In the course of ages the fashion in wearing horns has undergone a radical change, but the rhinoceros who is essentially a conservative beast, has stuck to the older method.—Pearson's Magazine.

Latest Feminine Fad.

The latest feminine fad is the collecting of individual butter dishes, which has become a source of worry to the proprietors of hotels and fashionable cafes. It is said the dear girls get their male friends interested in the wrinkle and persuade them to bring away the little plates as souvenirs every time one of them dines at a hotel or restaurant. If the little dishes have the monogram of the house on them so much the better, but if not the donor is asked to write the name of the place and the date across their face. When the collector gets duplicates they trade off for others, and in that way secure dishes from hotels and prominent cafes all over the country. Hotel keepers have a hard time of it with the souvenir fiends.

The truth is usually that which every man should be too polite to tell.

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It relieves the condition which produces so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its terrors.

The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:

Aug. 6, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."— MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 19, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble.

"I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well.

"I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."— MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.

"I saw your medicine so highly recommended I thought I would write to you for advice.

"My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from sick headache and backache all the time, appetite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.

"I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."— MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

April 23, 1900.

"Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."— MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhœa. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."— EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianola, Ill.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 REWARD. — We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

A M'KINLEY STORY.

He Had No Thought of Reaching the White House 12 Years Ago.

The second inauguration of President McKinley suggested the following to a former western congressman who is visiting New York:

"I was in Washington on the day of the inauguration of President Harrison. Major McKinley, as he was then called, was in the lower house of congress. Anyway, he was in Washington on the day referred to. He was staying at the Ebbitt House and so was I.

"After the procession I went into the dining room rather late. Major McKinley was alone at a table and beckoned me to it. Naturally, we talked of the event of the day, and I said among other things that I presumed he would be in the same place as Harrison some day. He replied in these words as nearly as I recall them:

"'It is the one thing which would always make me hesitate to be president.' (Meaning the parade.) 'I suppose we must all have an inaugural parade, and address from the east side of the capitol, and review. But I would dread them if I were president. And then there is the inaugural ball.

"'If I had my own way about it I should dispense with that unless the date could be changed as it ought to be. The inaugural address should be delivered in the lower house. Few of the people who assemble in front of the building can hear the address. They go there to see the president. They could see him much better along the line of the parade.

"'Some of these days, unless we change the date of our inauguration, a president will die from the effects of exposing himself by appearing as he is now required to do first as a speaker and afterward at the reviewing stand in front of the white house.'

"While he was talking I was listening. He talked and ate at the same time, and I remember distinctly that his ability to do the latter left me without any nuts and raisins. He hogged the whole layout, and I told him so, in a joking way. He replied:

"'Well, if I ever get to be president you come over to the white house and I will give you all the nuts and raisins you can hold.'

"I have never seen him since he became president, but if ever I go to Washington while he is in the white house I am going to hold him to his promise. But I shall want the first whack at the stand for McKinley can eat nuts faster than any man I ever saw."

STORIETTES.

When Morgan county, Illinois, was first organized a certain farmer was selected for a justice of the peace. When the county was added to a circuit and a supreme court justice came down to hold a court this justice of the peace, with the county attorney and others, called on him. The justice of the peace said: "Judge, I want to ask you a question of law." "Ask your county attorney and these other lawyers of your county," said the judge. "Oh, I know as much law as those fellows. I wait to ask you." "Well, what is it?" said the judge. "Can a justice of the peace grant a divorce?" "Certainly not; he has no jurisdiction," said his honor. "Well, judge, you're wrong," said the justice of the peace. "He can, for I granted one myself yesterday, and the gal's gone back to Missouri, and the man's working down there in that field."

A young fellow employed in one of the downtown offices came to work late one morning recently and looked as if he had left his boarding house in a hurry. He explained it in this way:

He had the bad habit of sneering at the mental abilities of women. On the morning mentioned he remarked, shortly after arising, that women were the only animals extant known to be devoid of mental power. The dispenser of viands for the establishment, who is a woman, inquired if he really believed that.

"With limitations, yes," he replied. "The human body is so constructed that it must have a governing influence for the muscles of locomotion in the female as well as the male, hence the presence there of the cerebellum. The cerebrum in woman is a great deal like the third eye with the aborigines are supposed to have had. Having fallen out of use, it has disappeared."

"He was a softish sort of a chap, but played a tolerably fair game of seven-up," said ex-Sheriff Warren K. Ridgway of Pike county, Pennsylvania. "We were sitting in, up at Lackawanna, playing for a quarter a corner. I knew he was dead gone on a girl up at the Narrows, and so remarked, casually, early in the game:

"'Every time a fellow gets the jack of trumps in seven-up it's a sure sign his girl is thinking of him.'

"Then I sort o' watched the young fellow, and the very next hand he picked up I noticed his eyes light up and a nice flush of pleasure spread over his face. So I led out, and, sure as pollywogs! I caught his jack, as I thought maybe I would. And it worked so well all the evening that I had a whole lot of quarters when he quit. But he seemed pleased and went up to the Narrows on the next train."

A DOCTOR THIS TIME.

Portland, May 6th.—Dr. E. A. Rose, a practising physician, formerly of Yates Center, Kans., was on what everyone supposed was his death bed. He had Diabetes, and six of his brother doctors were in attendance and consultation at his bedside They had done everything that medical skill could suggest to save his life, but they were at last reluctantly forced to tell him that he must prepare for death.

His aunt had been summoned to his dying bedside. After the doctors had given her nephew up, she insisted that as a last resort, he be given a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

From the very first dose, the tide turned in his favor. His life was saved, and he is hale and hearty today.

This case and its cure has amazed the physicians, and is the sensation of the hour. It is interesting to note that while many others are being cured this great discovery in medicine, the physicians themselves are among the first to benefit, and that while the simpler and more prevalent forms, such as Rheumatism, Sciatica, Bladder and Urinary Trouble and Female Weakness disappear before it, the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Dropsy, which have always been regarded as incurable, are yielding just as easily.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are fast superceding all other treatment for Kidney Disease, and as nearly all human sickness and suffering has its origin in the Kidneys, the use of this wonderful medicine is becoming almost universal.

Near Attica the other day, when the neighbors went over to congratulate Grandpap and Grandma McDaniel on the 62d anniversary of their marriage they found gandpap out in the field planting corn, while grandma was claning up the breakfast clutter in the kitchen. When the good folk told grandpap the object of their visit, he said: "Lordy, Lordy, how time does fly!"

PLAN TO TOUR THE WORLD.

President McKinley Said to Contemplate a Great Trip for 1905.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 3.—Captain Blackburn B. Dovenor, congressman from the First West Virginia district, who, with Senators Elkins and Scott, enjoys the confidence of President McKinley and his advisers to an unusual degree, is quoted in a special telegram from Washington as saying the president has plans on foot for a tour of the world at the close of his present term that shall completely eclipse that of General Grant in 1877

The tour of the world will begin in the summer of 1905 and will cover the civilized globe. It is to be undertaken to gratify Mr. McKinley's desire to see the world and to spread the greatness of the American nation. The president then hopes to settle down as his party's adviser and not as a silenced ex-president.

JACKSONVILLE STRICKEN

Fire Covers Over One Hundred and Thirty Blocks.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 4.—The most disastrous fire in the history of the city began yesterday shortly after noon in a small factory from a defective wire, according to the best belief, and burned for nearly ten hours. In that time property damage in the city estimated at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 occurred.

According to the city map 130 blocks were burned, many of them in the heart of the business and residence sections of the city. The estimated houses to the block is ten, hence 1,300 of them went up in smoke. Many of the finest public and private buildings were destroyed, including hotels, theaters, churches and residences.

The casualties cannot be accurately estimated. That there were several seems to be well authenticated. Among them was the fire chief who sustained a bad fall. The mayor ordered all the saloon closed and has impressed help to clear the wreckage.

The mayor at a late hour said that he estimated the loss at $15,000,000 and that 10,000 to 15,000 people were homeless. At 1 a. m. the situation is one approaching desolation in a large section of the city.

The burned district reaches from Burbridge street on the north to the St. John's river on the south, a distance of not quite two miles. The width of not quite two miles. The blocks. Within this space practically everything is blackened ruins. On Bay street, the principal mart of trade, the Western Union Telegraph company's building is the first building standing gong west. Everything east of Laura bay is gone. At 10:15 o'clock p. m. the fire was under control, having burned itself out. The suburban settlements in the direction of La Villa are intact. The railroad depots have been turned into temporary lodging houses and hospitals.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 6.—Jacksonville's great fire has burned itself out One hundred and forty-eight blocks of a beautiful city have been laid waste. The loss will not be known even approximately for a week, but it is believed will amount to $10,000,000.

There are many rumors afloat of loss of life, but as every undertaker in the city was burned out it is impossible to obtain an official report. One story which is persistently reiterated is to the effect that a party of men and women driven to the docks by the fire were compelled to jump into the water and that several of them were drowned. Mrs. Hogan, a negro woman, was burned in her house and her charred remains were buried by friends.

IMPORTANT MOVEMENT IN KANSAS

Organization Is Formed to Purify the Politics of the State.

Topeka, Kan., May 3.—Mrs. Nation's crusade against the saloon has resulted in a movement to purify Kansas politics that promises to be more far-reaching than anything of the kind ever before attempted in the sunflower state.

An organization called the Grand Chapter of the Law Enforcement League has been effected, whose object is to purify the politics of the state and to promote its interests. The league is to be thoroughly organized by the establishment in every city, town or hamlet in the state of a local chapter. The league is the outgrowth of the stirring scenes in Topeka incident to Mrs. Nation's saloon smashing. The women first organized the Home Defenders, under the direction of Mrs. Nation, and the auxiliary lodge now formed by the men is to have a broader field of operation.

The meeting of the Law Enforcement league to perfect plans for a state organization was secret and very few of the details of the organization have reached the outside.

Kansas City, Mo., May 3.—The police commissioners have refused the request of the special committee of the Law and Ordinance Enforcement league to close the saloons on Sunday, and the league called a mass meeting to take the first steps toward petitioning Governor Dockery to relieve these officers.

BRYAN GOES AFTER M'LAURIN.

Attacks the South Carolina Senator for His Alleged Flop.

Lincoln, Neb., May 3.—In a statement made yesterday W. J. Bryan takes Senator McLaurin of South Carolina to task for what he declares is his political flop. At the same time Mr. Bryan admits Senator McLaurin's action marks the beginning of a movement in the south which will have an influence upon the politics of the nation. He says:

"It is not likely that Mr. McLaurin will be the leader of the movement, because he is handicapped by the fact that he is using his official position to misrepresent the views and interests of his constituents, but some leader will arise to give direction and force to the aristocracy and plutocratic element for which Mr. McLaurin speaks. There is such an element in every community and now that the race question no longer unifies the white people of the southern states, it will doubtless manifest itself.

"Senator Tillman has already taken up the gauge of battle thrown down by Senator McLaurin and will doubtless be able to marshall a considerable majority in that state, but the same influences are at work in other states where there is greater danger of their success.

"The democratic sentiment is strong enough to resist and overcome the McLaurin movement, but those who believe that the man is more important than the dollar will have to bestir themselves."

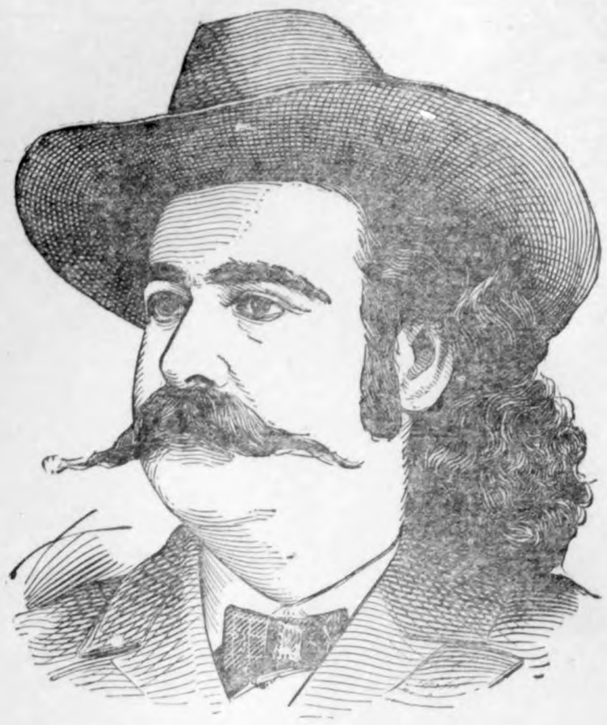
Seoul, Korea, May 5.—The Korean government has revised its action in the matter of McLeavey Brown and has ordered him to leave his residence and relinquish the control of Korean customs. The representative of Great Britain in Korea is moving actively in the matter.

NEW GOVERNOR IN NEBRASKA.

Lincoln, Neb., May 3.—Governor Dietrich has resigned and has been succeeded in that office by Ezra P. Savage. The resignation was sent to the secretary of state and immediately accepted. Governor Savage then took his seat and his first official act was the signing of the senatorial commission for Senator Dietrich. This was done with the pen used by the former governor in writing his veto messages. The pen was formally presented to Senator Dietrich after the commission had been signed.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Thanks Peruna For His Rapid Recovery From Catarrh.



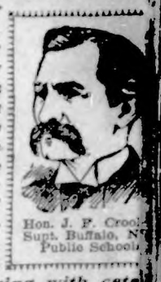
EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.

Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their illness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.

Hon. J. F. Crooker of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16, writes:



"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh as my case is complete."

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of the great catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also as an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. Peruna stopped my catarrh of the throat so that it did not become chronic. I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane, thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure catarrh in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you valuable advice gratis.

A woman who has experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. Copper, Lead and Zinc Stock as an Investment.

You can invest a small amount of money very safely and profitably in the shares of a good mining company. The shares of the largest and most profitable mining companies of the United States and ann Europe are held by small investors having a few shares each. These shares, too, were usually bought at par originally, but have grown very valuable through investors holding them a reasonable length of time as investments. Profits have been made by shares increasing in market value often many hundred times the price paid for them originally, and the great dividends which have been paid stockholders while they were thus carried as investments. The greatest profits have been made in low-priced stocks of mines in their developmental stage and before they have paid their first dividend. Owing to a great and ever-increasing demand for copper add the limited productiveness of the copper mines of the world, it will command a ready market at high prices for years to come, and large permanent dividends will be earned by copper producing mines. The St Louis Copper, Mining and Developing Company's Mines are in an advanced stage of development, and will soon be yieding dividends. It's stock is one of the best of the low-priced stock now obtainable, and will prove a good investment.
